FIRST ADMINISTRATION (formed on the resignation of sir Robert Peel), July, 1846.

First lord of the treasury, lord John Russell.
Lord chancellor, lord Cottenham (succeeded by lord Truro).

Lord president of the council, marquis of Lansdowne.
Privy seal, earl of Minto.

Chancellor of the exchequer, Mr. (aft. sir Charles) Wood.
Foreign, home, and colonial secretaries, viscount Palmerston, sir George Grey, and earl Grey.

Boards of control and trade, sir John Hobhouse (aft. lord Broughton), and earl of Clarendon (succeeded by Mr. Labouchere).

Admiralty, the earl of Auckland (succeeded by sir Francis Thornhill Baring).

Duchy of Lancaster, lord Campbell (succeeded by the earl of Carlisle, late viscount Morpeth).

Secretary at war, Mr. Fox Maule.
Postmaster, marquis of Clanricarde.

Paymaster-general, T. B. Macaulay.

Lord John Russell and his colleagues resigned their offices, 21 Feb. 1851; but were induced (after the failure of lord Stanley's party to form an administration) to return to power, 3 March following.

* Lord John Russell, third son of John, duke of Bedford, was born 19 Aug. 1792; M.P. for Tavistock, 1813; for London, 1841-61; was paymaster of the forces, 1830-34; secretary for home department, 1835-9; for the colonies, 1839-41; first minister, July 1846 to March 1852; secretary for foreign affairs, Dec. 1852 to Feb. 1853; president of the council, June 1854 to Feb. 1855; secretary for the colonies, March to Nov. 1855; secretary for foreign affairs, June 1859 to Oct. 1865, when he succeeded lord Palmerston as premier; created a peer, as earl Russell, 30 July, 1861. His motion for reform in parliament was negatived in 1822; adopted 1 March, 1831; he introduced the registration bill and a new marriage bill in 1836; introduced and withdrew a reform bill, 1860; died 28 May, 1878.

This ministry resigned, 22 June, 1866, in consequence of a minority on 10 June (see under Reform, and Derby Administrations).

RUSSELL TRIAL. William, lord Russell's trial for complicity in the Rye-house plot was marked by a most touching scene. When he requested to have some one near him to take notes to help his memory, he was answered, that any of his attendants might assist him; upon which he said "My WIFE is here, and will do it for me." He was beheaded in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, 21 July, 1683. Lady Russell survived him forty years, dying 29 Sept. 1723, in her eighty-seventh year.
His attainer was reversed, 1 Will. III. 1689.

RUSSIA, the eastern part of ancient Sarmatia.
The name is generally derived from the Roxolani, a Slavonic tribe. Ruric, a Varangian chief, appears to have been the first to establish a government, 862. His descendants ruled amid many vicissitudes till 1598. The progress of the Russian power under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world.
The established religion of Russia is the Greek church, with toleration of other sects, even Mahome-tans. By an imperial ukase, in 1802, six universities were e-established, viz., at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Wilna, Dorpat (in Livonia), Charcov, and Kasan; but literature made little progress till the 19th century, the native publications being very few, and the best books being translations.
The Russian language, though not devoid of elegance, is, to a foreigner, of very difficult pronunciation; the number of letters and diphthongs is forty-two. The Anglo-Russian Literary Society, with library, &c., set up at the Imperial Institute, 1893. The population of the empire in 1867,
82,159,630; in 1872, about 85,685,945; in 1877

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.—The war between Japan and Russia was due to three causes: the rights of the Japanese in Manchuria, the independence of Korea; and the independence of China, all these interests being imperiled by the rapid extension of the Russian power in the Far East. The conflict between China and Japan, 1894-95, resulted in the recognition by China of the independence of Korea, and the cession to Japan of Port Arthur and the Liao-tung peninsula; the latter advantage, however, lost to Japan by the action of France and Germany, on the ground that its possession by the Japanese would constitute a perpetual menace to the capital of China and render the independence of Korea impossible. Japan failed in her attempt to obtain pledge from Russia that neither Port Arthur nor the Liao-tung peninsula would be occupied by the forces of either power; assurances were, however, given that Russia had no designs whatever on Manchuria, but Russia refused to embody these assurances in a treaty on the ground that to do so would imply an admission on her bona fides. In 1898, Russia obtained from China a lease over Port Arthur and the Liao-tung peninsula, together with railway concessions (granted 23 March); Russian forces were sent (28 March), the Trans-Siberian railway was extended south to Port Arthur, fortifications erected, garrisons established, and Manchuria treated as if it were virtually a Russian province. In return for her support given to China at the relief of Peking, 1900, Russia sought, but unsuccessfully, to obtain a convention securing her rights in Manchuria, and ultimately agreed to evacuate two provinces of Manchuria in 1903. The promised evacuation was not carried out, and on 30 Oct. 1903, Russian troops occupied Mukden, and a great number of Russian soldiers were sent into Manchuria. This action of Russia in maintaining her occupation of Manchuria, notwithstanding her treaty with China, and her repeated assurances given to the powers by her, together with aggressive action on the Yalu River, caused great apprehensions in Japan, as threatening the independence of Korea and the safety of Japan, especially if Manchuria were annexed by Russia. In a despatch of 28 July, 1903, M. Kurino, the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg, was instructed by Baron K. A. G. Japanese foreign minister, "to approach the Russian government with a view to the conclusion of a convention securing the independence of Korea and the safety of Japan, and to the evacuation of Russian troops from Manchuria."

government in a spirit of conciliation and frankness, with a view to the conclusion of an understanding" on these questions, and "to a definition of their respective interests in those regions." The Japanese proposals were stated in the following terms in a despatch from Tokio, dated 3 Aug. 1903:—

- I. A mutual agreement to respect the independence and territorial integrity of the Chinese and Korean empires, and to maintain the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations in those countries.
- II. Reciprocal recognition of Japan's preponderating interests in Corea and Russia's special interests in railway enterprises in Manchuria, and of the right of Japan to take in Corea and of Russia to take in Manchuria such measures as may be necessary for the protection of their respective interests as above defined, subject, however, to the provisions of Article I.
- III. Reciprocal undertaking on the part of Russia and Japan not to impede the development of those industrial and commercial activities respectively of Japan and Russia in Corea and of Russia in Manchuria, which are not inconsistent with the stipulations of Article I.
- IV. Reciprocal engagement that in case it is found necessary to send troops by Japan to Corea, or by Russia to Manchuria, for the purpose either of protecting the interests mentioned in Article II., or of suppressing insurrection or disorder calculated to create international complications, the troops so sent are in no case to exceed the actual number required, and are to be forthwith recalled as soon as their missions are accomplished.
- V. Recognition on the part of Russia of the exclusive right of Japan to give advice and assistance in the interest of reform and good government in Corea, including necessary military assistance.

The following counter proposals were submitted on behalf of Russia, 3 Oct. 1903:—

- I. Mutual engagement to respect the independence and territorial integrity of the Korean empire.
- II. Recognition by Russia of Japan's preponderating interests in Corea, and of the right of Japan to give advice and assistance to Corea tending to improve the civil administration of the empire without infringing the stipulations of Article I.
- III. Engagement on the part of Russia not to impede the commercial and industrial undertakings of Japan in Corea, nor to oppose any measures taken for the purpose of protecting them, so long as such measures do not infringe the stipulations of Article I.
- IV. Recognition of the right of Japan to send for the same purpose troops to Corea, with the knowledge of Russia, but their numbers not to exceed that actually required, and with the engagement on the part of Japan to recall such troops as soon as their mission is accomplished.
- V. Mutual engagement not to use any part of the territory of Corea for strategic purposes, nor to undertake on the coasts of Corea any military works capable of menacing the freedom of navigation in the straits of Corea.
- VI. Mutual agreement to consider that part of the territory of Corea lying to the north of the 30th parallel as a neutral zone, into which neither of the contracting parties shall introduce troops.
- VII. Recognition by Japan of Manchuria and its littoral as in all respects outside her sphere of interest.

The proposal of Russia that Manchuria should be regarded as outside the Japanese sphere of interest was, in view of the important political and commercial interests of Japan in that country, rejected by Japan 30 Oct. 1903; other amendments, including one relating to a neutral zone, in Manchuria as well as in Corea, were proposed by Japan. Russia, in response to the protest of the Japanese government respecting the delay of the Russian government in replying to its communication, reaffirmed the proposals of 3 Oct., but omitting Article VII., 11 Dec. 1903. In reply, 21 Dec. 1903, the Japanese government stated that Russia's exclusion of Manchuria from the negotiations nullified them entirely, the negotiations having been expressly undertaken to remove every cause for misunderstanding respecting both Corea and Manchuria; Russia was asked to reconsider the question; the neutral-zone clause to be omitted. The Russian government reply, 6 Jan. 1904, proposing to insert the following article in the agreement, "Recognition by Japan of Manchuria and its littoral as being outside her sphere of interests, while Russia within the limits of that province will not impede Japan or other powers in the enjoyment of rights and privileges acquired by them under existing treaties with China, exclusive of the establishment of settlements." This article was subject to the understanding that the articles respecting a neutral zone, and the prohibition of Korean territory for strategic purposes, were conceded by Japan. The final proposals of the Japanese government were presented to Russia, 13 Jan. 1904, and comprised the following modifications of the Russian terms:—

- I. The elimination from Article V. of the words "not to use any part of the territory of Corea for strategic purposes."
- II. The elimination from Article VI. as to a neutral zone.
- III. The acceptance of the final Article concerning Manchuria, provided that Russia agreed to respect the territorial integrity of China in Manchuria; not to impede Japan or other Powers, within the limits of Manchuria, in the enjoyment of rights and privileges acquired by them under the existing treaties with China; to recognise Corea and its littoral as being outside the Russian sphere of influence.
- IV. The recognition by Japan of Russia's special interests in Manchuria, and of the right of Russia to take measures necessary for the protection of those interests.

Owing to the dilatory tactics of Russia the patience of the Japanese government became exhausted, and becoming convinced that no hope existed of a peaceable settlement of the questions at issue, and having regard also to the preparations being made with both her army and navy by Russia, the Japanese government at Tokio announced, 6 Feb. 1904, through their minister at St. Petersburg, the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Russia. The mikado issued, 10 Feb., an imperial rescript, giving the Japanese statement of the case against Russia, and declared war against Russia.

Dr. Morrison, correspondent of the Times at Port Arthur, after visiting Dalny and Port Arthur, by mission of the Japanese headquarters, re his opinion that the surrender of Port Arthur by gen. Stössel was not justified by the condition of the fortress, and strongly condemns the Russian capitulation in view of the fact that 25,000 bodied soldiers, well clad and well nourished and capable of making a sortie, were found in the Japanese in the fortress; that there ample food for three months; that there fuel in abundance, 70,000 tons of coal stored in the dockyard, besides large quantities of other stores . . . 12 of firewood; that there was no serious failure of ammunition; that the number of buildings destroyed or injured in Port Arthur was comparatively small, the Japanese having directed their fire on the docks, workshops, and the ships in the harbour. Of the 14,000 cases in the hospital from all classes of the population, only a small proportion were wounded. In Dr. Morrison's opinion, "no more discreditable surrender has been recorded in history." He states that the heart and soul of the defence was gen. Kondrachenko, who was killed 18 Dec. 1904, and that but for him gen. Stössel would have capitulated some weeks earlier. 25 Jan. 1905

* Official statement of the captures of Port Arthur: prisoners, 41,641 combatants (15,370 wounded); 528 guns (serviceable); 206,734 gun ammunition; 36,593 small arms; 5,474 of small arm ammunition; 2,475,000 lbs. of small arms ammunition; 2,333 lbs. of rice; 2,250 lbs. of rye; 1,000,000 lbs. of bread; 51,000 lbs. of salt; 33,300 lbs. of other stores . . . 13

Japanese third army, under gen. Nogi, set free from Port Arthur, occupies position at Sha-hei-po, a small town W. of Liao-yang. 20 Feb. "

BATTLE OF MUKDEN.—The Japanese forces comprised the third army, under gen. Nogi, on the left (looking northward); the second army, under gen. Oku, to the right of the third army; the fourth army, under gen. Nodzu, in the centre; the first army, under gen. Kuroki, on the right; and the right flank detachment of reservists under gen. Kawamura. The Japanese line extended nearly 100 miles from W. to E., under the direction of marshal Oyama. The Russian forces comprised the second army under gen. Kaulbars (looking southward); the centre under gen. Bilderling; and the first army under gen. Linevitch, with a detachment under gen. Rennenkampf, the whole commanded in chief by gen. Kuropatkin.

The general idea of the Japanese operations was the threatening of the Russian left under gen. Linevitch, the real object the attack on the Russian right and an extended out-flanking movement. Gen. Kuropatkin (whose forces were about 400,000 men and 1,500 guns, with a strongly entrenched position on the S. and S.E. of Fushan, 26 miles east of Mukden), misled by the Japanese attack on his left, where his strongest forces were placed, failed to realise the true Japanese objective, until too late to readjust his forces. (For convenience of reference this battle, one of the greatest of modern times, is divided into 5 sections, representing the successive stages of the conflict.)

I. The Japanese commence offensive operations on the Russian left by the advance of gen. Kawamura over the frozen roads and rivers, 10 Feb.; he gains the Ching-ho-cheng defile, the Tai-tse river having been crossed, and a fierce conflict waged for two days with the Russians, who are driven out of their entrenchments, 24 Feb.; Japanese first army, under gen. Kuroki, moves forward from the Pen-hsi-hu district upon Kao-tu-ling, and forces the Russians from their advanced positions about 10 miles N. and N.W. of Pen-hsi-hu; the fourth army, under gen. Nodzu, advances on the Sha-ho, gaining ground and threatening the Russian position, with the result that gen. Kuropatkin's attention was directed to the defence of his centre and left. 10-28 Feb. 1905

II. Gen. Oku, with the Japanese second army, advances and deploys between the Sha-ho and the Hun; gen. Nogi, with the third army on the left of gen. Oku, rapidly marches between the Hun and the Liao in a northerly direction, overcoming all the counter-attacks of the Russians, 28 Feb. gen. Kuropatkin becomes aware of this movement, 1 March, but measures taken by him proved to be inadequate and too late, his forces being driven back on the night towards Mukden; gen. Nogi begins his turning movement on the west, between the Hun and Liao rivers, marching rapidly in a northerly direction, 26 Feb.; advances at first without encountering opposition, marches nearly due N. to Hsin-min-lun, 33 miles west of Mukden, 1 March; swinging round, gen. Nogi marches eastward on a front of 15 miles, keeping touch with gen. Oku, at Lik-wan-pau, and pushing towards the railway; second Russian army, under gen. Kaulbars, is forced to face westward on a line running from Machiapu to N.N.E.; the fourth and first Japanese armies, under generals Nodzu and Kuroki respectively, make sustained efforts to prevent the Russian troops from withdrawing in the centre and the left to meet the decisive attack. 28 Feb.-4 March, 1905

III. Russian army by 5 March was held fast in the centre, driven back on the left and completely turned on the right, gen. Kuroki having forced the left of the Russian entrenchments on the Sha-ho, 5 March; Russian reserves attack gen. Oku and penetrate a short distance along the Hsin-min-tun-road, but are then repulsed, 5 March; gen. Nodzu dislodges the Russians from their earthworks S. of the Sha-ho, 2-6 March; gen. Nogi's line extends its envelopment of the Russian forces to the N. of Mukden; the fortified positions of Machuntun and Tita, S. and S.E. of Fushan, reached by gen. Kawamura, 28 Feb., are the scene of a desperate conflict, gen. Kuropatkin bringing up his reserves to these positions; after 8 days of fierce fighting the Japanese take Machuntun, 8 March; gen. Kuropatkin decides to withdraw his centre and left behind the Hun and attack generals Oku and Nogi with all available forces from the armies of generals Kaulbars and Bilderling, 8 March; railway N. of Mukden cut by the Japanese under gen. Nogi. 5-8 March, "

IV. Russian first army under gen. Linevitch effects its retreat to the line of the Hun without serious loss, and takes up a defensive position there; situation of the Russian army at Mukden becomes most critical, owing to the exhaustion of the second Russian army under gen. Kaulbars, and the arrival at Mukden of the third army under gen. Bilderling, which causes a great accumulation of troops in a confined space and their exposure to the concentrated fire of the Japanese, who draw in upon the town from all sides except the N.E.; a gallant attempt is made by gen. Kuropatkin, who leads an attack of 65 battalions, checking the advance of generals Oku and Nogi, 9 March; gen. Nodzu, having crossed the Sha-ho, sweeps on to the Hun, and penetrates the Russian line; Kuisan, E. of Mukden, occupied by the Japanese on the north, while gen. Nogi fights to establish himself across the line of the Russian retreat, 9 March; gen. Kuropatkin, to avoid the destruction or capture of the second and third Russian armies, gives the order for a general retreat, 9 March; Tita taken by the Japanese, 9 March, and the Russians in this part of the field fly to the N. of Fushan, 8-9 March, "

V. General Nodzu crosses the Hun, 10 March; Japanese occupy Mukden, 10 March; a large number of the Russian troops, owing to the enveloping character of the Japanese attacks, are unable to escape; gen. Nogi occupies the line of the Puhö directly across the main line of retreat and astride all the roads leading from Mukden to the N.; the remnant of the Russian army escapes over the hills in disorder, gen. Linevitch alone retaining his formations, and showing a bold front against gen. Kuroki, 10 March; Fushan position carried by the Japanese, and the Russians retire towards Tie-ling, 10 March; parties of Russians in the adjacent villages and positions around Mukden continue to offer resistance, but are driven from all the country 26 miles N. of Mukden, and the Russians, broken and routed, flee in great disorder to Tie-ling, 12 March. 10-12 March, "

(Russian loss, 30,000 killed, 100,000 wounded, 50,000 prisoners; Japanese casualties, 52,500 killed and wounded. Immense captures of prisoners, arms, ammunition, provisions, etc.)

Russian squadron, under adm. Nebogatoff, joins adm. Rozhdestvensky's fleet; the united fleet leaves Hon-Kohe bay, and sails for Tsu Shima Straits . . . 16 May, "

BATTLE OF TSU SHIMA.—This, the greatest naval battle since Trafalgar (21 Oct. 1805), was fought when the Russian Baltic fleet, under adm. Rozhdestvensky, entering the Straits of Tsu Shima, between Corea and Japan, was attacked by the Japanese fleet under adm. Togo, and practically annihilated. A fog at first prevailed, when adm. Rozhdestvensky's main fleet, steaming in two columns, the battleships to starboard and cruisers to port, drew up to Tsu Shima in the forenoon of 27 May. The fog cleared in the afternoon, when the Russian fleet was sighted by the Japanese scouts. Immediately on receiving the report that the Russian fleet was in sight the combined squadrons of the Japanese started for attack, and met the Russian squadron near Okino Shima, to the S.E. of Tsu Shima. The battle began between 2 and 3 p.m., a strong breeze blowing and a high sea running. Before the engagement commenced adm. Togo signalled from the flagship Mikasa to the Japanese fleet: "The fate of the Empire depends on this effort. Let every man do his utmost." Although inferior in the number of their battleships the skilful tactics and superior range of their guns gave the Japanese the superiority, and enabled them to inflict a crushing defeat on the Russians. The battle lasted until the afternoon of 28 May, and included a general engagement, and a torpedo attack on the night of 27 May, breaking up the defeated Russian fleet. The Kniaz Suvoroff, the flagship of adm. Rozhdestvensky, was blown up; the admiral himself, seriously wounded, was rescued by a Russian torpedo-boat destroyer (afterwards captured), and taken prisoner; adm. Fülkersahm was killed in the conning tower of the Odyabys; and rear-adm. Nebogatoff was taken prisoner; 21 of the ships of the Russian fleet were sunk, viz., the battleships Kniaz Suvoroff, Borodino, Odyabys, Alexander III., Nararin, and Sissoi Veliky; the cruisers Dimitri Donkoi, Admiral Nakhimoff, Svetlana, Vladimir Monomakh; a coast defence ship the Admiral Gushakov; the special service ships Rossi Ural, Anastasy, Kametchatka, and the Ilutish; and 3 torpedo-boat destroyers. 5 Russian ships were captured—the battleships Nikolai I. and the Orel; the coast defence ships Admiral Apraxine and Admiral Seniavin; and 1 torpedo-boat destroyer. 9 Russian ships escaped; 5 cruisers, of which number the Aurora, Jenushap, and Oleg (with adm. Enquist on board wounded) escaped to Manila, and were interned; the Almaz succeeded in reaching Vladivostok; the Izumrud was wrecked in Vladimr bay; 2 special service ships escaped to Shanghai; 1 torpedo-boat destroyer to Shanghai, and another Vladivostok. The Russian loss is estimated 4,000 killed or drowned; 7,282 officers and taken prisoners. The Japanese in the engagement lost 3 torpedo boats, 116 officers and were killed and 538 wounded; the Japanese flagship Mikasa sustained the heaviest loss. 27-28

Japanese navy department, the necessity secrecy no longer existing, announce the loss the battleship Yashima by striking a mine blockading Port Arthur, 15 May, 1904, and 6 naval losses hitherto withheld, i.e., the torpedo boat destroyer Aburatsubo, sunk by a mine engaged on blockading duty before Port Arthur, 17 May; the gunboat Oshima sunk after a collision while co-operating with the army of Liao-tung peninsula, 17 May; the t.b.-d. Batori, mined and sunk while blockading Port Arthur, 3 Sept.; the gunboat Atago sunk striking a rock before Port Arthur, 6 Nov.; cruiser Takasago mined and sunk while blockading Port Arthur, 12 Dec. 1904. 27-28

PEACE TREATY signed . . . . . 5 Sept. "

* The following are the principal articles of the Treaty of Peace:—

Article II.—His majesty the emperor of Russia recognises the preponderant interest, from political, military, and economic points of view, of Japan in the empire of Corea, and stipulates that Russia will not oppose any measures for its government, protection, or control that Japan will deem necessary to take in Corea in conjunction with the Korean government; but Russian subjects and Russian enterprises are to enjoy the same status as the subjects and enterprises of other countries.

Article III.—It is mutually agreed that the territory of Manchuria shall be simultaneously evacuated by both Russian and Japanese troops. All rights acquired by private persons and companies shall remain intact.

Article IV.—The rights possessed by Russia in conformity with the lease to Russia of Port Arthur and Dalny, together with the land and waters adjacent, shall pass over entirely to Japan, but the properties and rights of Russian subjects are to be safeguarded and respected.

Article V.—The Russian and Japanese governments engage themselves reciprocally not to put any obstacles in the way of the general measures, which shall be alike for all nations that China may take for the development of the commerce and industry of Manchuria.

Article VI.—The Manchurian railway shall be operated jointly between the Russians and the Japanese at Kouangtchengtse. The respective portions of the line shall be employed only for commercial and industrial purposes. In view of Russia keeping her line with all the rights acquired by her convention with China for the construction of the railway, Japan acquires the mines in connection with such section of the lines which falls to her. The rights of private parties or private enterprises, however, are to be respected. Both parties to this treaty remain absolutely free to undertake what they may deem fit on the expropriated ground.

Article VII.—The Russians and the Japanese engage to make a junction of the lines which they own at Kouangtchengtse.

Article VIII.—It is agreed that the lines of the Manchurian railway shall be worked with a view to ensuring commercial traffic between them without obstruction.

Article IX.—Russia cedes to Japan the southern part of Sakhalin Island as far north as the fiftieth degree of north latitude, together with the island depending thereon. The right of free navigation is assured in the bays of La Perouse and Tartary.

Article XI.—Russia shall make an agreement with Russian and Japanese armistice commissioners meet at Sha-ho-tsu and sign the protocol providing for the cessation of hostilities between the two armies in Manchuria . . . . . 13 Sept. 1905

RUSO-TURKISH WAR.* The Russian and French governments having each taken a side in the dispute between the Greek and Latin churches as to the exclusive possession of the Holy Places (which see) in Palestine, the Porte advised the formation of a mixed commission, which decided in favour of the Greeks, and a firman was promulgated accordingly, 9 March, 1853: to this decision the French acceded, although dissatisfied.

The Russians make further claims, and prince Menschikoff (who arrived at Constantinople 28 Feb. 1853), by various notes (between 22 March and 18 May), demands that a convention should be signed by the sultan granting to the czar such a protectorate over the Greek Christians in Turkey, as the sultan considered inimical to his own authority . . . . . 22 March-18 May, 1853

Article XIII.—The Russians and Japanese reciprocally engage to exchange prisoners of war, paying the real cost of the keep of the same, such cost to be supported by documents.

* In 1844, when the czar was in England, he conversed with the duke of Wellington and lord Aberdeen (whom he had known many years) respecting the dissolution of the Turkish empire; and on his return he embodied his views in a memorandum drawn up by count Nesselrode, which was transmitted to London, but kept secret till March, 1854. In January and February of that year the czar had several conversations on the subject with the British envoy at St. Petersburg, sir G. H. Seymour, in one of which (Jan. 14) he compared Turkey to a "sick man" in a state of decrepitude, on the point of death, and made proposals to the British government as to the disposal of his property. He stated frankly that he would not permit the British to establish themselves at Constantinople; but said in another conversation, he would not object to their possessing Egypt. The purport of these conversations was conveyed in despatches to lord John Russell, who replied that the British government declined to make any provision for the contingency of the fall of Turkey. The czar made similar proposals to the French government with the same result.

The conference of representatives of England, France, Austria, and Prussia meet at Vienna, agree to a note, 31 July; accepted by the czar, 10 Aug.; the sultan requires modifications, 19 Aug.; which the czar rejects, 7 Sept. 1853

RYE-HOUSE PLOT, a plot pretended) to secure the succession of Monmouth to the throne in preference of York (afterwards James II.), a lie. Some of the conspirators are said to be the assassination of the king, Charles brother. This design is said to have been frustrated by the king's house at Newmarket taking fire, which hastened it away eight days before the plot was 22 March, 1683; see Newmarket. It was discovered 12 June following. 1 Russell on 21 July, and Algernon Sidney following, suffered death for being concerned in the conspiracy. Both were illegally executed. The name was derived from the conspirators' meeting, the Rye-house at Broxbourne shire.

SAALFIELD (Saxony, N. Germany). Here the Prussians, under prince Louis of Prussia, were defeated and their leader slain by the French under Lannes, 10 Oct. 1806.

SAARBRÜCK, the Roman Augusti Muri or Sara pons, an open town on the left bank of the Saar, in Rhenish Prussia, founded in the tenth century, long subject to the bishops of Metz, afterwards ruled by counts (about 1237), and by the house of Nassau about 1380. It was captured by the French and retaken by the Germans 1676, reunited to France 1794-1814, and ceded to Prussia, 1815. On 2 Aug. 1870, it was bombarded by the French under Frossard (between 11 and 1 in the daytime), and the Prussians in small force were dislodged, and the town occupied by the French general Bataille. The mitrailleuses were said to be very effective. On the 6 Aug. the Prussian generals Goben and Von Steinmetz, with the first army, recaptured Saarbrück, after a sanguinary conflict at the village of Spicheren. The loss was great on both sides. The French general François was killed, and the 2nd corps under Frossard nearly destroyed. The French retreated to Metz.

SABÆANS, the ancient inhabitants of Yemen, in S. Arabia: in the Old Testament called Sheba, Gen. x. 28, Job vi. 19, &c. The queen of Sheba is mentioned as having visited Solomon. The Sabæans were a wealthy and powerful people, carrying on an extensive trade of commodities as gold, ivory, spices, &c., obtained from India and Africa. In the 8th cent. B.C. "the people of Saba" paid tribute to Tidlath-Pileser and Sargon, kings of Assyria. A Roman expedition, under Elius Gallus, unsuccessfully invaded the country of the Sabæans, 4 B.C. Their religion included the worship of the sun and moon, and other deities.

SABBATARIANS. Traces exist of Sabbatarii, or Sabbathaires, among the sects of the 16th century on the continent. Upon the publication of the "Book of Sports" in 1618, a violent controversy arose among English divines on two points: first, whether the Sabbath of the fourth commandment was in force among Christians; and secondly, whether, and on what ground, the first day of the week was entitled to be distinguished and served as "the Sabbath." In 1628, Theophilus abourne, a clergyman, published the first work in favour of the Seventh-day or Saturday, as the Christian Sabbath. He and several others suffered great persecution for this opinion; but after the restoration there were three or four congregations observing the last day of the week for public worship in London, and seven or eight in country parts of England. In 1851 there were Sabbatarian or Seventh-day Baptist congregations in England; but in America (especially the New England states) they are more numerous. Joseph Davis suffered imprisonment in 1670, and his son bequeathed property to maintain the sect; and litigation respecting its disposal was carried by vice-chancellor Stuart in conformity with his intentions in June, 1870. Very few Sabbatarians then remained. The rev. Wm. Mead Jones, an eminent seventh-day Baptist in London, a profound scholar; died 22 Feb. 1895.

SABBATAI ZEVI, a false prophet, and the founder of a sect of semi-Christians and semi-Jews in the middle of the 17th cent. He announced the beginning of a Messianic reign, and it is said that in 1664 he had some 80,000 followers. He was put to death by the sultan of Turkey in 1677.

SABBATH, Heb. from shabath, "to rest." In the Decalogue the Sabbath is commanded to be observed as a day of rest for man and beast, the reason assigned being that God "rested the seventh day" from his labours in the work of creation; see Gen. ii. : Eccl. xx. 8 : Isaiah lviii. 13; and as a commemoration of the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage in Egypt, Deut. v. 15. The observance of the Sabbath by the Jews is first mentioned after the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt, but no direct evidence of its having been kept in patriarchal times is to be found in the Pentateuch (which see), although the formula "Remember" with which the fourth commandment begins might seem to imply that the observance of the Sabbath was familiar to the Israelites, but had fallen into neglect. In the later history of the Jews after the captivity the Sabbath was kept with great strictness, and the sanctity of the day guarded by many stringent rules. The Mishna, for example, enumerates 39 principal works which are forbidden on the Sabbath, and to each of these are attached several minor ones which might lead to breaking of the Sabbath. To such a degree was the holiness of the seventh day esteemed by the Jews that when Jerusalem was stormed by Ptolemy I. on a Sabbath the inhabitants would not stir to defend themselves. The early Christian Church observed the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and this gradually took the place of the Jewish Sabbath. The earliest law by which the observance of the first day of the week was ordained is the edict of Constantine, 321. The religious solemnization of the seventh day was not peculiar to the Jews. Prof. Sayce, "Ancient Empires of the East," states:—"In Babylonia and Assyria the week of seven days was an Accadian or Babylonian invention, the days of the week being dedicated to the moon, sun, and five planets. The 7th, 14th, 21st, and 28th days of the lunar month were kept like the Jewish Sabbath, and were actually so named in Assyrian. They were termed dies nefasti in Accadian, rendered 'days of completion (of labour)' in Assyrian; the Assyrian Sabattu or 'Sabbath' itself being further defined as meaning 'completion of work' and 'a day of rest for the soul.'"—See Sunday.

SABBATH SCHOOLS, see Sunday Schools.

SABBATICAL YEAR: a Jewish institution, 1491 B.C. Exodus xxiii. During every seventh year the very ground had rest, and was not tilled; and every forty-ninth year all debts were forgiven, slaves set at liberty, and estates, &c., that were before sold or mortgaged, returned to their original families, &c.

SABELLIANISM, from Sabellius (of Ptolemais in Egypt), who flourished in the 3rd century, and who taught that there was but one person in the Godhead, the other persons of the Trinity being but different names of the same person. This doctrine was condemned at a council at Rome, 260.

SABINES, an ancient people of central Italy, from whom the Romans, under Romulus, took away their daughters by force, having invited them to some public sports or shows on purpose. When the Sabines determined to revenge this affront, the women became mediators to their fathers in behalf of their husbands, the Romans, and a lasting peace was made between them, 750 B.C. The Sabines, who had supported the Samnites in their war with Rome, were thoroughly defeated by M. Curius Dentatus, and their lands annexed 290 B.C., and eventually the Sabines were combined with the Roman people.

SACCHARINE, see Benzole.

SACCHAROMETER, an instrument for determining the amount of sugar in solutions. Soleil, an optician, of Paris, in 1847 made use of rotary polarized light for this purpose in a saccharometer, since improved by Duboscq.

SACHEVEREL RIOTS, see Riots, 1710.

SACKVILLE INCIDENT, see United States, Oct. 1888.

SACRAMENT (from sacramentum, an oath, obligation, also mystery). The Christian sacraments are baptism and the Lord's Supper. The council of Trent, in 1547, affirmed the doctrine of the schoolmen that there are seven sacraments: baptism, the Lord's Supper, confirmation, penance, holy orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. The name was given to the Lord's Supper by the Latin fathers. The wine was restricted to the clergy about the beginning of the 12th century. Communion in one kind only was authoritatively sanctioned by the council of Constance, 15 June, 1415. Henry VII. of Germany was poisoned by a priest by the consecrated wafer, 24 Aug. 1513. The sacramental wine was poisoned by the gravedigger of the church at Zurich, by which sacrilegious deed a number of persons lost their lives, 4 Sept. 1776. In 1614 members of both houses of parliament were ordered to take the sacrament, as a guard against the introduction of Roman Catholics. In 1673 the Test act was passed; repealed in 1828; see Transubstantiation.

"Society of the Blessed Sacrament" (English churchmen), London, founded, 1860; "Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament," founded 1862; the two united, 1867. SACRAMENTARIANS, followers of Zwingli (1487-1531), who differed from the Romanists and Lutherans in regard to the sacrament.

SACRAMENTO, ST., a Portuguese settlement in S. America, claimed by Spain in 1680, but relinquished in 1713; several times seized; ceded in 1777; acquired by Brazil in 1825, see California.

SACRED BAND, see Thebes.

SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST. The publication of translations of the sacred books of the religion of the Brahmans, Buddhists, and Mohammedans, and of the followers of Khung-fu-tze and Lao-tze, edited by professor Max Müller, began in 1879. About 30 volumes have been published.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, see Music.

SACRED HEART OF JESUS. A devotion said to have been instituted the seventeenth century, and by Marguerite Marie Alacoque, an visitation nun who lived at Paray-le-Monial. She asserted that Christ had a heart of flame, and then returned it. Many churches have been dedicated to the Sacred Heart; the most splendid is that of the Sacred Heart, in Paris, 1874-81, at the cost of 1,000,000 francs. The festival of the Sacred Heart is held on Friday (in England, the first Friday after the octave of Corpus Christi). A church of the Sacred Heart was founded in Paris by Varin and Mme. Barat in 1818. Numerous houses in Europe, America, and the East. The chief of these in England is at Walsby and in Ireland at Roscrea.

Marguerite Marie Alacoque's book, "Coeur de Jésus," published in 1691, was translated by father Joseph Galliet and introduced into France, by request of a pilgrimage from England, special the pope, and headed by the duke of Orleans, went to the shrine of Marguerite, at Paray-le-Monial, and returned.

The R.C. diocese of Salford dedicated the Sacred Heart, 4 Sept. 1873; and a church of the Sacred Heart, near Paris, founded for the same purpose.

The pope dedicated the universal shrine of the Sacred Heart.

SACRED WARS.—I. Decades of phylloxera against Cirrha, near Delos, and outrage to the visitors to the temple at Cirrha was razed to the ground, 747 B.C. The Phocians and Delphians fought the temple at Delphi, 448, 447. II. On being fined for cultivating the temple, 357. They seized the temple, 357. They seized Philip of Macedon, and their city, 346. See Crusades.

SACRIFICE was offered to God. iv. 4. Sacrifices to the gods were made by Phoroneus, king of Greece. Human sacrifices had their origin in the primitive tribes. All sacrifices to the gods to cease with the sacrifice of Christ, 12-14. Pagan sacrifices were made by emperor Constantius II. 341. See Ritual and Religion, and Typology.

SACRILEGE. In 1835, the first case of sacrilege was made transportable by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 96, s. 50 (1861), which made sacrilege a crime punishable with penal servitude for life.

SACRIPORTUS (Latium). Sylla defeated the younger Marius at Carbo with great slaughter, B.C. 82, dictator, 81.

SADDLES. In the earlier ages, the saddle was made of animal skin, and used neither saddles nor stirrups. The saddle was made of leather in 304, and were known in 600. Side-saddles for ladies were used by Anne, queen of Richard II. in 1388.

SADDUCEES, a Jewish sect founded by Sadducee, a scholar about 200 B.C., who, misinterpreting the doctrine, taught that there was no hell, angel nor spirit; that the soul was no resurrection of the body from the Sadducees rejected the oral law, mainly the Pharisees. See Matt. xxii. 23; Acts

SADLER'S WELLS (N. London), so called Sadler, who built an orchestra to entertain those who used the waters medicinally, 1683. The orchestra was enclosed, and the building a place for dramatic performances. The theatre was opened in 1765. Eighteen were trampled to death at this theatre, in a fire, 18 Oct. 1807; see under Now (1905) a music-hall.

SA, see Königgrätz.

S. A National Safe Company, London, built for storage of valuables, 1876.

SAFETY LAMP. One was invented in 1815 by Humphry Davy, to prevent accidents which coal and other mines. The safety-lamp is on the principle that flame, in passing through wire meshes, loses so much of its heat as to be incapable of igniting inflammable gases. The first safety-lamp was Dr. Reid Clanny's, in 1815, whose invention and improvements are detailed in the Transactions of the Society of Arts for 1817. The "Geordy," constructed by James Stephenson, the engineer, in 1815, is said to be the safest. A miner's electric light, by M. M. and Benoit, was exhibited in Paris on 8 Dec. On 14 Aug. 1867, safety-lamps were tested by several mining engineers, and found to be thrown upon their complete efficacy. The "Respirator's" safety lamp (light extinguished on extinguishing) exhibited at Royal Institution, &c., in 1867. Messrs. Fleuss and Foster's new safety lamp approved, Jan. 1884.

Swan's electric safety lamp, weighing 64 lb., was used at Aberdeen meeting of British Association, 1885.

S. D. Aria's safety lamp reported successful; it is said that mineral oil is isolated from the burner, bury miners' lamp (patented 16 Feb. 1889).

Aldwarke Main Collieries by Mr. C. E. and subjected to experiments by prof. Dewar Frederick Abel, who declare that this lamp meets the conditions required by the royal commission, 1886. Paraffin and other mineral oils may be used with this lamp, reported Nov. 1889.

SAFFRON (saffran, French; saffrano, Italian), a dye of crocus, was first brought to England in the reign of Edward III. by a pilgrim, about 1339, from Arabia, as the word is from the Arabic phar. Miller. It was cultivated in England, 1582.

S. Early Icelandic tales, dated from the 10th century, see Eddas.

SAGE (Sage, French; Salvia, Latin), a whole herb. Mortimer. The Mexican sage, Salvia, was brought from Mexico, 1724. The Indian sage, Salvia africana, and the golden sage, Salvia aurea, were brought to England from the Cape of Good Hope in 1731.

SANTUM, or ZACYNTHUS, now Murcia, Valencia, E. Spain, renowned for the siege it sustained, 219 B.C. The citizens, performing incredible acts of valour for eight days, before they were to be buried in the ruins of their city, surrendered to Hannibal. They burnt their houses, with their houses, and the conqueror found a pile of ashes, 218 B.C.

SAHARA, a great sandy desert, North Africa, south of Barbary States. A project for making an inland sea here was entertained in 1883, and the construction of a railway was proposed in Algeria, Oct. 1890. A large natural reservoir of water at El Golea in the desert, was discovered early 1891. M. Fourreau's 12 years' exploration, rich in scientific results, see French West Africa, 1898-1900. M. Blanchet's mission meets with many disasters; he dies, Oct. 1900. Twat, the region between Algeria and the Sudan, includes 3 districts, Gurara, Twat, and Tidikelt, occupied by the French; see Algeria and Morocco, 1900.

Surveys for the Trans-Saharan telegraph line, to link up Timbuctoo with Algiers, and eventually to reach Lake Chad, completed by M. Etienneot, inspector of posts and telegraphs in Algeria, announced . . . . . Sept. 1905

SAIGON, French colony in Cochin China, founded in 1860, after a defeat of the Chinese, 17 Feb. 1859.

SAILORS' HOME, in Well-street, London Docks, established by Mr. George Green, 1830; opened, 1835. In one year it admitted 5,444 boarders, who, besides home, had evening instruction, the use of a savings' bank, &c. Similar institutions have since been established in ports in the United Kingdom and abroad. Sailors' orphan girls' school and home, Hampstead, established 1829. Sailors' and Firemen's Union, see Shipping. The Passmore Edwards Sailors' Palace, Limehouse, opened by the prince and princess of Wales; an "Ocean library" inaugurated 19 May, 1903.

SAINT. For names with this prefix, see the names themselves throughout the book. See Acta Sanctorum.

SAKYA MUNI, see Buddhism.

SALADO, a river, S. Spain; see Tarifa.

SALADS are stated to have been in use in the middle ages; lettuces are said to have been introduced into England from the Low Countries, 1520-47.

SALAMANCA (W. Spain), taken from the Saracens 861. The university was founded 1240, and the cathedral built 1513. Near here the British and allies, commanded by lord Wellington, totally defeated the French army under marshal Marmont, 22 July, 1812. The loss of the victors was most severe, amounting in killed, wounded, and missing, to nearly 6,000 men. Marmont left in the victor's hands 7,141 prisoners, 11 pieces of cannon, 6 stands of colours, and 2 eagles. This victory was followed by the capture of Madrid. Population, 1887, 22,199.

SALAMIS (near Athens). In a great sea-fight here, 20 Oct. 480 B.C., Themistocles, the Greek commander, with only 310 sail, defeated the fleet of Xerxes, king of Persia, which consisted of 1,000 sail.—Near Salamis, in Cyprus, the Greeks defeated the Persian fleet, 449 B.C.; and Demetrius Poliorcetes defeated the fleet of Ptolemy and his allies, 306 B.C.

SALASSI, a turbulent Alpine tribe, were thoroughly subdued by Terentius Varro, 25 B.C., and a Roman colony established in their territories (now Aosta).

SALDANHA BAY, S. Atlantic Ocean; northward of the Cape of Good Hope. Here on 17 Aug. 1796, a Dutch squadron, under admiral Lucas, was captured by vice-admiral sir George Keith Elphinstone, without resistance; sir George was created lord Keith.

SALENCKEMEN, on the Danube. Here a victory was gained by the imperialists, under prince Louis of Baden, over the Turks, commanded by the grand vizier Mustapha Kiuprigli, 19 Aug. 1691.

SALERNO (Salernum, S. Italy), an ancient Roman colony. Its university, with a celebrated school of medicine, reputed to be the oldest in Europe, was founded by Robert Guiscard the Norman, who seized Salerno in 1077. Salerno suffered much in the wars of the middle ages.

SALIQUE or SALIC LAW, by which females are excluded from inheriting the crown of France, is said to have been instituted by Pharamond, 424, and ratified in a council of state by Clovis I., the real founder of the French monarchy, in 511. Hennault. This law, introduced into Spain by the Bourbons 1700, was formally abolished by decree 29 March, 1830; and on the death of Ferdinand VII. his daughter succeeded as Isabella II., 29 Sept. 1833; see Spain. By this law also Hanover was separated from England, when queen Victoria ascended the English throne, 1837.

SALISBURY (Wilts), founded in the beginning of the 13th century, on the removal of the cathedral hither from Old Sarum. National councils or parliaments were repeatedly held at Salisbury, particularly in 1296, by Edward I.; in 1328, by Edward III.; and in 1384. Henry Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was executed here by order of Richard III., in 1483.—On SALISBURY PLAIN is Stonehenge (which see). This plain was estimated at 500,000 acres. On it were so many cross roads, and so few houses to take directions from, that Thomas, earl of Pembroke, planted a tree at each milestone from Salisbury to Shaftesbury, for the traveller's guide. The autumn military manoeuvres took place on Salisbury Plain, Aug., Sept. 1872; again 31 Aug. 1898, and since; see under Army.—The first seat of the BISHOPRIC was at Sherborne, St. Aldhelm being prelate, 705. Herman removed the seat to Old Sarum, about 1072; and the see was removed to Salisbury by a papal bull, in 1217. It has yielded to the church of Rome one saint and two cardinals. The building of the cathedral commenced 28 April, 1220, and was completed in 1258. This edifice is reckoned one of our finest ecclesiastical erections. Its spire, the loftiest in the kingdom, was considered in danger in April, 1864, and subscriptions were begun for its immediate repair. The choir was re-opened, after restoration by sir G. G. Scott, 1 Nov. 1876; spire and turrets restored under sir Arthur Blomfield, March, 1898. The bishopric is valued in the king's books at 1,367*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* Present income 5,000*l.* Population, 1881, 14,792; 1891, 15,980; 1901, 17,117.

SALISBURY'S ACT, see Artisans.

SALLEE, a port of Morocco, long a haunt for pirates, destroyed by the British in 1632, and about 300 captives released.

SALLENTINI, allies of the Samnites, the only Italian tribe not subject to Rome, were overcome in war in 267 and 266 B.C., and Brundisium, their port, taken.

SALMON FISHERIES. The laws relating to them were consolidated and amended in 1861, and the report of a commission of inquiry (including sir Wm. Jardine) was published, in Feb. 1862. An act restricting the capture of salmon at certain times, passed in 1863, was amended in 1869-1870, and 1873. During the "salmon fence," 14 Sept. to 1 Feb., it is unlawful to catch fish of the salmon kind.

SALMON OVA, packed in boxes with moss, charcoal, and ice, to retard development—a plan suggested and proved practicable by Mr. E. H. Moscrop in 1863—adopted successfully by Mr. J. A. Youl, who sent ova to Australia in the "Norfolk." 1864

Salmon disease, in rivers, announced, 1879; commission of inquiry appointed, Mr. F. Buckland and others Jan. 1880

Royal commission appointed (the earl of Elgin, duke of Bedford, and others) to inquire into the deterioration of the fisheries in Great Britain, 20 March, 1900; report issued, a central authority, local fishery boards, &c. recommended. 6 Aug. 1902

Salmon introduced into the Thames, at Teddington, 1901, and Feb.

Danubian salmon eggs, brought from Austria, successfully hatched out at Mr. W. Gilbey's fish hatchery at Denham, near Uxbridge; the first time the Danubian salmon has been successfully hatched in England, reported. May, 1905

SALONICA, see Thessalonica.

SALT (chloride of sodium, a compound of the gas chlorine and the metal sodium) is procured from the rocks in the earth, from salt-springs, and from sea-water. The famous salt-mines of Wieliczka, near Cracow in Poland, have been worked 600 years. The salt-works in Cheshire, called the WICHES (Nantwich, Northwich, and Middlewich), were of great importance in the time of the Saxon heptarchy. The salt-mines of Staffordshire were discovered about 1670. Salt duties were first exacted in 1702; they were renewed in 1732; reduced in 1823; and in that year were ordered to cease in 1825. During the French war the duty reached to 30s. per ton. For the salt-tax in France see Gabelle. The government salt monopoly in India was abolished in May, 1863, by sir C. Trevelyan. Since 1797 salt has been largely employed in the manufacture of chloride of lime or bleaching powder (by obtaining its chlorine), and soap (by obtaining its soda). On this are based the chemical works of Cheshire, Lancashire, and other places. See under Alkalies.

Much distress in the salt districts of Cheshire through the subsidence of land, 1887-8. The proprietors of the Cheshire salt mines combined to form a "trust" or syndicate in the autumn of 1888; central office, Northwich; the trade being nearly ruined by great competition, first meeting 27 Sept. 1888.

Great advance in the price of salt Oct. 1888.

A "salt museum" presented to the town of Northwich by Mr. Brunner, M.P., March, 1889.

Salt exported from the United Kingdom: 1876, 865,804 tons; 1880, 1,051,240 tons; 1885, 921,869 tons; 1890, 725,021 tons; 1896, 660,935 tons; 1900, 547,395 tons; 1901, 617,203 tons; 1904, 622,429 tons.

SALT-PETRE (from sal petra, salt of the rock), or Nitre, is a compound of nitric acid and potash (nitrogen, oxygen, and potassium), and hence is called nitrate of potash. It is the explosive ingredient in gunpowder, many detonating powders, and lucifer matches. Boyle in the 17th century demonstrated that salt-petre of aqua fortis (nitric acid) and potash coveries of Lavoisier (1777) and Davy its real composition. Its manufacture began about 1625. During the French revolutionary war, the manufacture was greatly advanced by the researches of Berthollet.

SALUTE AT SEA. It is a receding sea, that he who returns the salute fewer guns than he receives, which between the ships of princes of equal rank the Swedes and Danes return the compliment regarding how many guns are on board. The English claim the right of being first in all places, as sovereigns of the sea; the Danes claimed this honour within it. The admiralty issued a code of rules Dec. 1876. See Flag, and Naval Salutes.

SALVADOR, SAN, one of the first point of land discovered in the Americas by Columbus. It was first discovered by Guanahani, or Cat's Isle, and Columbus acknowledged to God for his deliverance from San Salvador when he first saw it. The capital, San Salvador, was destroyed by earthquake, 16 April, 1854, and is now a ruin.

SALVADOR, one of the republics of America, with a constitution established 1859. Area, 13,000 sq. miles; population, 644,855; expenditure, 1904, 700,000; imports, 802,075; exports, 1,327,000. SAMANIDE DYNASTY, began with Ismail Samani, who overcame the army of the Saffarides, and established himself in the government of Persia, 902; his descendants ruled till 999.

SAMARCAND (in Tartary) was conquered by the Mahometans, 707; by Genghis Khan, 1220, and by Timur, or Tamerlane, who ruled here in great splendour. Samarcand was occupied by the Russians under Kaufmann 26 May, 1868, after a conflict on the previous day. The garrison left, resisted a fierce siege till relieved by Kaufmann, 13-20 June, 1868.

SAMARITANS. Samaria was built by Omri, 925 B.C.; and became the capital of the kingdom of Israel. On the breaking up of that kingdom (721 B.C.), the conqueror Shalmaneser placed natives of other countries at Samaria. The descendants of these mixed races were abominable to the Jews, and much more so in consequence of the rival temple built on Mount Gerizim by Sanballat the Samaritan, 332 B.C., which was destroyed by John Hyrcanus, 130 B.C.; see John iv. & viii. 48, and Luke x. 33. SAMOS, an island on the W. coast of Asia Minor. Colonised by Ionians about 1043 B.C. The city was founded about 986. Polyerates, ruler of Samos (532-22 B.C.), was one of the most able, fortunate, and treacherous of the Greek tyrants, and possessed a powerful fleet. He patronised Pythagoras (born here) and Anacreon. Samos was taken by the Athenians, 440; and, with Greece, became subject to Rome, 146. It was taken by the Venetians, A.D. 1125, who here made velvet (samet), and became subject to the Turks, about 1450. Population, 1891, 44,953; 1900, 54,830. Capital Vathy (population, 1900, 25,000).

It was made a principality under Turkish suzerainty by sultan Mahmoud in 1832.

New autonomous constitution granted, in 1850.

Prince Constantine Adossides, born 23 Feb. 1822; appointed governor 4 March, 1879. Alexander Karatheodory, born 20 July, 1833, appointed 1885; Georghi Pasha Berovitch appointed, Jan. 1895; succeeded by Stephanaky Musurus Bey, about 28 June, 1896; Costaki Valganis Effendi, March, 1899; Mihailaki Georgiadis, Aug. 1900; Alexander Mavrogeno, March, 1902; T. SANATORIUM, see Tuberculosis.

SAMPFORD COURTENAY (Devon). Here John, lord Russell, defeated the Cornish and Devonshire catholic rebels, the middle of Aug. 1549.

SANCTUARIES, see Asylums. Privileged places for the safety of offenders are said to have been granted by king Lucius to churches and their precincts. St. John's of Beverley was thus privileged in the time of the Saxons. St. Burian's, in Cornwall, was privileged by Athelstan, 935; Westminster, by Edward the Confessor; St. Martin's-le-Grand, 1529. Being much abused, the privilege of sanctuary was limited by the pope in 1503 (at the request of Henry VII.), and much reduced in 1540. In London, persons were secure from arrest in certain localities: these were the Minorities, Salisbury - court, Whitefriars, Fulwood's - rents, Mitre-court, Baldwin's-gardens, the Savoy, Clink, Deadman's-place, Montague-close, and the Mint. This security was abolished 1697, but lasted in some degree till the reign of George II. (1727).

SANDALS, see Shoes.

SAND-BLAST. Gen. B. C. Tilghman, of Philadelphia, has invented a method of cutting stone or hard metal by a jet of quartz sand impelled by compressed air or steam. A hole of 14 inch diameter and 14 inch deep was bored through a block of corundum, nearly as hard as diamond, in 25 minutes. The invention was submitted to the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, 15 Feb. 1871. It may be employed in the arts, for etching, glasswork, &c.

SANDHURST, ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE, founded, first at High Wycombe, in 1799; removed to Great Marlow in 1802, and to Sandhurst in 1812. It consists of the staff college and cadets' college. Competitive examination for entrance into the latter began in Feb. 1858. A wing of the college was destroyed by fire, 21 Jan. 1868; 5 fires from unknown causes occurred, 23 April, 7 May, 7, 25 June; 29 cadets rusticated, 3 July; 3 servants discharged, much indignation, see Times, 8, 12 July; all but two cadets exonerated by lord Roberts after special inquiry, 25 July, 1902.

SANDRINGHAM HOUSE, N.E. Norfolk, was purchased by the prince of Wales, 1861, rebuilt; occupied, 1871; much injured by fire, 1 Nov. 1891. Here the duke of Clarence and Avondale died, 14 Jan. 1892. York cottage, occupied by the duke and duchess of York, 6 July, 1893. An avenue (joining the Sandringham estate to the newly-acquired Anmer one) presented to the king by his tenants and labourers, 10 Nov. 1902. Fire in room over queen's bedroom, her majesty's happy escape, 11 Dec. 1903.

SANDWICH (Portus Rutupensis, Kent). It suffered by Danish invaders in 851, 993, and 1014, but was rebuilt by Canute, and became prosperous; it became chief of the cinque ports about 1066. It contributed 22 ships and 504 mariners to Edward III.'s French expedition. It was taken and plundered by the French under Brézé in Aug. 1457. Flemish silk and woollen manufactories were settled here by Elizabeth in 1561. Disfranchised 1885. Pop., 1881, 2,846; 1891, 2,796; 1901, 3,000.

SANDWICH ISLANDS or HAWAII ARCHIPELAGO, a group in the Pacific Ocean, discovered by captain Cook in 1778; but thought now to have been discovered by Juan Galtan, a Spaniard, about 1542. In Oukyhee or Hawaii, one of these islands, he fell a victim to the sudden resentment of the natives, 14 Feb. 1779. These people made great progress in civilisation, and embraced Christianity before any missionaries were settled among them. Population in 1884, 80,578; 1890, 89,990; 1905, 154,000 (including about 25,000 Chinese, 60,000 Japanese, and 28,000 whites). Capital, Honolulu, population 39,305. Numbers of native population said to be stationary.

King Kamehameha I., a chieftain of the island Hawaii, subdued the other isles, and ruled from 1789 to 1819. Idolatry gradually superseded by Christianity, 1819 et seq.

Kamehameha II., with his queen, visited England; both died of measles in London in 1824.

Kamehameha III. promulgation of constitution, 1840; independence of the state recognized by the great powers, 1843.

SANHEDRIM. An ancient Jewish court of the highest jurisdiction, of seventy, or, say, seventy-three members, usually consisted of that established by Moses, Num. xi. 16 b.c. It was yet in being at the time of Christ, John xviii. 31. A Jewish Sanhedrim summoned by the emperor Napoleon I., 1806. A meeting of Jewish deputies was Sept., and the Sanhedrim assembled, 9 March.

SANITARY INSTITUTE OF BRITAIN, founded 13 July, 1876; president duke of Northumberland; incorporated in the School of Hygiene opened in London, New Congress held annually. See under Sanitation.

SANITATION, the preservation of strict cleanliness is enjoined in the law of Mo. b.c. Great attention has been paid to the public in France since 1802. Tardieu published his Manuel de Hygiène, 1852-54. Sanitary missions were appointed in 1838 and 1844. Southwood Smith is mainly attributable to the commencement of the agitation on the subject of health in England about 1832; his "Public Health" having excited much attention. In 1838 he published numerous reports, having been much employed by the government. Professors of hygiene are appointed. International conferences, the Paris, 1851, are held at intervals. See Public Health, and Hygiene (Congresses).

SANITAS (health), an antiseptic and disinfectant, invented by Mr. C. T. Kingzett, about

SAN JUAN ISLAND, see Juan.

SANATOGEN, a new remedy for consumption, stopping coughing and fever and night sweats, and stopping increase in weight. Papers on the new remedy read by Dr. Dancielus and professor Sommerfeld at Berlin Medical society, 13 May, 1903.

SANSCULOTTES, a term of reproach applied to the leaders of the French republicans about 1790, on account of their negligence in dress, and afterwards assumed by them with pride. The complementary days of their new calendar were named by the Mountain party Sansculottides.

SANSKRIT, the language of the Brahmans of India, spoken at the time of Solomon, has been much studied of late years. Sir Wm. Jones, who published a translation of the poem Sakuntalâ, in 1783, discovered that a complete literature had been preserved in India, comprising sacred books (the Vedas), history and philosophy, lyric and dramatic poetry. Texts and translations of many works have been published by the aid of the East India Company, the Oriental Translation Fund, and private liberality. The professorship of Sanskrit at Oxford was founded by colonel Boden. The first professor, H. H. Wilson, appointed in 1832, translated part of the Rig-veda Sanhitâ, the sacred hymns of the Brahmans, and several poems, &c. Professor Monier Williams (elected 1860, kn't. 1886, died 11 April, 1899) published an English and Sanskrit dictionary, 1851. Professor Max Müller published his history of Sanskrit Literature in 1859, and edited the original text of the Vedas (he died 28 Oct. 1900). Philologists have discovered an intimate connection between the Sanskrit, Persian, Greek, Latin, Teutonic, Slavonian, Celtic, and Scandinavian languages. Prof. Buehler, eminent Oriental scholar, professor of Sanskrit at Vienna, drowned in the lake of Constance, 8 April, 1898; Dr. Peter Peterson, of Bombay, an eminent Sanskritist, dies Sept. 1899. Mr. Herbert Spencer's "Education" translated by Mr. H. Soobba Row into Sanskrit, 1899.

SANTA CRUZ (Teneriffe, Canary Isles). Here admiral Blake, by daring bravery, entirely destroyed sixteen Spanish ships, secured with great nautical skill, and protected by the castle and forts on the shore, 20 April, 1657. Clarendon. In an unsuccessful attack made upon Santa Cruz by Nelson, several officers and 141 men were killed, and the admiral lost his right arm, 24 July, 1797.* See

SANTANDER. A thriving Spanish port in the Bay of Biscay; it has suffered by war, and was sacked by Soult, 1808. Population, 1887, city, 41,829; 1897, 50,640; province, 242,843; 1897, 263,673.

A vessel lying in the harbour caught fire, causing an explosion of dynamite, petroleum, &c., whereby other vessels were destroyed and part of the town burnt;
 the death of 500 persons, about 2,000 injured, reported; and much property destroyed, 3 Nov.;
 liberal subscriptions headed by the queen regent, sen.
 Gamazo and others, 7 Nov. 1893; see Mansion House Funds, 1893.

A second explosion in the vessel, 18 workmen, &c. killed, 21 March; ship blown up by order, 30 March, 1894.

SANTIAGO DE COMPOSTELLA (N. W.
 Spain) was sacked by the Moors in 995, and held by them till it was taken by Ferdinand III. in 1235.
 The order of Santiago, or St. James, was founded about 1170 to protect pilgrims to the shrine of St.
 James the Greater (Acts xii. 2), said to be buried in the cathedral. The town was taken by the French in 1809, and held till 1814.—SANTIAGO, the capital of Chili, S. America, founded by Valdivia in 1541, has suffered much by earthquakes, especially in 1822 and 1829. Population, 1885, 189,332; 1899, 320,638.
 See Spanish-American war.

* Captain Fremantle, the friend of Nelson, and his companion in most of his brilliant achievements, was also wounded in the arm immediately before Nelson had received his wound in the same limb. The following note, addressed to the lady of Captain Fremantle (who was on board with her husband at the time he wrote), has been preserved, as being the first letter written by the hero with his left hand:—"MY DEAR MRS. FREMANTLE,—Tell me how Tom is, I hope he has saved his arm. Mine is off; but, thank God! I am as well as I hope he is. Ever yours,
 "HORATIO NELSON."

At a festival in honour of the Virgin Mary, 8 Dec. 1863, when the church of the Campana, brilliantly illuminated, was crowded, the combustible ornaments took fire, and above 2,000 persons, principally women, perished. On 20 Dec. the government ordered the church to be razed to the ground. See Chili, 1891.

SAPPERS AND MINERS, a name given in 1812 to the non-commissioned officers and privates of the corps of Royal Engineers. Brande.

SAPPHIC VERSE, invented by Sappho, the lyric poetess of Mitylene. She was equally celebrated for her poetry, beauty, and a hopeless passion for Phaon, a youth of her native country, on which last account it is said she threw herself into the sea from Mount Leucas, and was drowned, about 590 B.C. The Lesbians, after her death, paid her divine honours, and called her the tenth muse. Some consider the story fabulous.

SAPPHIRE, a precious stone of an azure colour, and transparent; in hardness it exceeds the ruby, and is next to the diamond. One was placed in the Jewish high priest's breast-plate, 1491. Thamas Kouli Khan is said to have possessed a sapphire valued at 300,000*l.*, 1733. Artificial sapphires were made in 1857 by M. Gaudin. Equal parts of alum and sulphate of potash were heated in a crucible. Mr. Pierpont Morgan presents two sapphires, one reported to be the largest and the other the most beautiful in the world, to the Nat. Hist. museum, New York, July, 1902.

SARABAND. A stately dance invented by Sarabanda, a dancer of Seville, in the 16th century.

SARACENS, a name of doubtful origin, popularly applied in the middle ages and since to the Arabs, Moors, and other Mahometans who conquered the East, Spain, Sicily, and parts of Africa, and resisted the Crusaders. See Mahometanism.

SARAGOSSA (N.E. Spain), anciently Cæsarea Augusta, founded 27 B.C., was taken by the Goths, 470; by the Arabs, 712; by Alfonso of Spain, 1118. Here Philip V. was defeated by the archduke Charles, 20 Aug. 1710. On 17 Dec. 1778, 400 of the inhabitants perished in a fire at the theatre. Saragossa, after successfully resisting the French in 1808, was taken by them after a most heroic defence by general Palafox, 20 Feb. 1809. The inhabitants, of both sexes, resisted until worn out by fighting, famine, and pestilence. Population, 1887, 92,407; 1900, 100,000.

SARAH SANDS, see Wrecks, 1857.

SARATOGA (New York State, N. America). Here general Burgoyne, commander of a body of the British army, after a severe engagement with the Americans at Germanstown, in which he was victorious, 3, 4 Oct., being surrounded, surrendered all his army (5791 men) to the American general Gates, 17 Oct. 1777. This was the greatest check the British suffered in the war.

SARAWAK, see Borneo.

SARDINIA, an island in the Mediterranean, successively possessed by the Phœnicians, Greeks, Carthaginians (about 500 B.C.), Romans (238), Vandals (A.D. 456), Saracens (720-40), Genoese (1022), Pisans (1165), Aragonese (1352), and Spaniards. From settlers belonging to these various nations the present inhabitants derive their origin. Victor Amadeus, duke of Savoy, acquired Sardinia in 1720, with the title of king; see Savoy. Population of the Sardinian dominions in 1858, 5,194,807; of Sardinia alone, 1887, 723,833; 1901, SARDIS, see under Seven Churches.

SARMATIA, the ancient name for the country in Asia and Europe between the Caspian Sea and the Vistula, including Russia and Poland. The Sarmatæ or Sauromatæ troubled the early Roman empire by incursions. After subduing the Seythians they were subjugated by the Goths, in the 3rd and 4th centuries. They joined the Huns and other barbarians in invading Western Europe in the 5th century.

SARNO (S. Italy). Near this river, Teias, king of the Goths, was defeated and slain by Justinian's general Narses, March, 553.

SARUM, OLD (Wiltshire), an ancient British town, the origin of Salisbury (which see). Although completely decayed, it returned two members to parliament till 1832.

SASSANIDES, descendants of Artaxerxes or Ardashir, whose father, Babek, was the son of Sassan. He revolted against Artabanus, the king of Parthia; defeated him on the plain of Hormuz, 226; and re-established the Persian monarchy. This dynasty was expelled by the Mahometans, 652; see Persia.

SATAN, see Devil Worship.

SATIRE. About a century after the introduction of comedy, satire made its appearance at Rome in the writings of Lucilius, called the inventor of it, 116 B.C. Livy. The Satires of Horace (35 B.C.), Juvenal (about A.D. 100), and Persius (about A.D. 60), are the most celebrated in ancient times, and those of Churchill (1761) and Pope (1729), in modern times. Butler's "Hudibras," satirizing the presbyterians, first appeared in 1663. Satire Menippée, a celebrated satirical pamphlet, partly in verse and partly in prose, attacking the policy of the court of Spain and the league, written in the style of the biting satires of the cynic philosopher Menippus. The first part, "Catholicon d'Espagne," by Leroy, appeared in 1593; the second, "Abrégé des Etats de la Ligue," by Gillot, Pithou, Rapin, and Passerat, appeared in 1594. Bouillet.

SATTARA (W. India) was long a flourishing state, founded by Sevajee about 1646; subjugated by the Mahrattas about 1749; conquered by the British, 1818; ruled by a rajah under the protection of the company. The last rajah died without issue in 1848; when the country was annexed.

SATURDAY (the last, or seventh day of the week; the Jewish Sabbath; see Sabbath). It was so called from an idol worshipped on this day by the Saxons, and according to Verstegan, was named by them Saterne's day. Pardon. It is more probably from Saturn, dies Saturni. Saturday Review, an independent literary weekly journal, was first published, 3 Nov. 1855. See Hospital and Lifeboat.

SATURN, the planet, ascertained to be about 900 millions of miles distant from the sun, and its diameter to be about 77,230 miles. One of the 10 satellites was discovered by Huyghens (25 March, 1655); four by Cassini (1672-84); two by sir William Herschel (1789), one by Bond and Lassell (1848), and one by prof. Pickering in Arizona, U.S. (18 March, 1899). The 10th satellite was discovered by prof. Pickering, 29 April, 1905. The ring was observed by Galileo, about 1610; its annular form determined by Huyghens, about 1655. Cassini discovered that the ring consisted in fact of two concentric rings, the inner brighter than the outer, in 1675. An inner ring was detected in 1850 by Dawes in England (29 Nov.), and by Bond in America. The ring, or series of concentric rings, is now considered to be composed of a multitude of small satellites.

SATURNALIA, festivals in honour of Saturn, father of the gods, were instituted long before the foundation of Rome, in commemoration of the freedom and equality which prevailed on the earth in his golden reign. Some, however, suppose that the Saturnalia were first observed at Rome in the reign of Tullus Hostilius (673-640 B.C.), after a victory obtained over the Sabines; whilst others suppose that Janus first instituted them in gratitude to Saturn, from whom he had learned agriculture. Others assert that they were first celebrated after a victory obtained over the Latins by the dictator Posthumus, when he dedicated a temple to Saturn, 497 B.C. During these festivals no business was allowed, amusements were encouraged, and distinctions ceased.

selves "savages," on account of their freedom from conventionalism. Mr. W. E. Gladstone was present at the 22nd anniversary, 14 June, 1879, and the king, then prince of Wales, was a visitor in 1882.

SAVAGE ISLAND was discovered by capt. Cook in 1774, and so named because of the fierce attack made by the natives on his party. The island has long been a field of missionary enterprise; the inhabitants, about 5,000, are now Christians, and it was ceded to Great Britain by the Samoa agreement, Nov. 1899.

SAVANDROOG or SEVERNDRROOG (My-sore, S. India), a strong fortress, was captured by the British, 2 April, 1755, and 21 Dec. 1791.

SAVANNAH, a city and port of Georgia on the river Savannah, U.S.A., founded in 1733, and incorporated, 1789; it was taken by the British in the American war in 1778, and by gen. Sherman, the northern general, 21 Dec. 1864. Pop. 1880, 30,709; 1890, 43,189; 1900, 54,244.

SAVINGS' BANKS. The first of these was instituted at Berne, in Switzerland, in 1787, by the name of caisse de domestiques, being intended for servants only; another was set up in Basel, in 1792, open to all depositors. The rev. Joseph Smith, of Wendover, began a Benevolent Institution in 1799; and in 1803-4, a "charitable bank" was instituted at Tottenham by Miss Priscilla Wakefield. The rev. Henry Duncan established a parish bank at Ruthwell in 1810. One was opened in Edinburgh in 1814. The benefit clubs, among artisans, having accumulated stocks of money for their progressive purposes, a plan was adopted to identify these funds with the public debt of the country, and an extra rate of interest was held out as an inducement; hence were formed savings' banks to receive small sums, returnable with interest on demand.

Rt. hon. Geo. Rose developed the system, and brought it under parliamentary control, 1816.

Acts to consolidate and amend previous laws relating to savings' banks were passed in 1828 and 1847; extended to Scotland in 1835; again consolidated and amended in 1863, 1880, and 1889.

On 30 Nov. 1851, the number of savings' banks in Great Britain and Ireland was 574, besides above 20,000 friendly societies and charitable institutions. The depositors (in the banks) were 1,092,581, while the societies embraced a vast but unknown number of persons; the amount of deposits was 32,893,511*l.*

SAVOY PALACE (London), was built by Peter of Savoy, uncle of Eleanor, queen of Henry III., in 1245, on land granted to him. He gave it to the fraternity of Mountjoy (Monte Jovis), from whom it was purchased by queen Eleanor for her son Edmund. Here resided John, king of France, when a prisoner, 1357 et seq. The Savoy was burnt by Wat Tyler and his followers, 1381. It was restored as an hospital of St. John the Baptist by Henry VII. about 1505. The fruitless CONFERENCE of bishops and eminent puritans for the revision of the liturgy was held at the Savoy, April-July, 1661. The hospital was dissolved in 1702. The buildings (used as a military prison) were removed to make way for Waterloo-bridge and its approaches, 1817-19. The privilege of sanctuary which the ancient Chapel formerly possessed, and which was much abused, was abolished by parliament in 1697. The Chapel after several restorations, was destroyed by fire, 7 July, 1864, and was rebuilt at queen Victoria's expense, and re-opened 26 Nov. 1865.

Savoy Theatre, erected for Mr. D'Oyly Carte by Mr. C. J. Phipps, opened 10 Oct. 1881; lit by Swan's incandescent electric light successfully (1104 lamps); 100th performance of "Patience," by Sir A. Sullivan, libretto by W. S. Gilbert, 28 Dec. 1881. See Operas. A list of the operas produced by Sir A. Sullivan and Mr. W. S. Gilbert is given in the article Operas. For plays produced at the Savoy see under Theatres.

SAW. Invented by Dædalus. Pliny. Invented by Talus. Apollodorus. Talus, it is said, having found the jaw-bone of a snake, employed it to cut through a piece of wood, and then formed an instrument of iron like it. Saw-mills were erected in Madeira in 1420; at Breslau in 1427. Norway had the first saw-mill in 1530. The bishop of Ely, ambassador from Mary of England to the court of Rome, describes a saw-mill there, 1555. The attempts to introduce saw-mills in England were violently opposed, and one erected by a Dutchman in 1663 was forced to be abandoned. Saw-mills were erected near London about 1770. The circular saw was introduced into England about 1790. The saw-gin for separating cotton wool from the pod, invented by Eli Whitney, an American, in 1793, led to the immense growth of cotton in the southern states of the Union. Powis and James's band-saw was patented in 1858.

SAXE-WEIMAR-EISENACH (central Germany). Population, 1900, 362,000. Capital, Weimar (pop., 1900, 28,489). The grand-dukes are descended from John Frederic, the Protestant elector of Saxony, who was deprived by the emperor in 1548; see Saxony. The houses of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Saxe-Gotha, Hildburghausen, and Saxe-Meiningen also sprang from him. They are all termed the senior or Ernestine branch of the old family.—Saxe-Weimar became a grand duchy in 1815. The dukes have greatly favoured literature and art, and their capital Weimar has been called the Athens of Germany. Statue of Liszt unveiled at Weimar, 31 May, 1902. Centenary of the death of Herder, celebrated at Weimar, 18 Dec. 1902.

Saxons were a fierce warlike race, the terror of the inhabitants of the later western empire, frequently attacked France, and conquered Britain (which see). After a long series of sanguinary conflicts they were completely subdued by Charlemagne, who instituted many fiefs and bishoprics in their country. Witi-kind, their great leader, who claimed descent from Woden, professed Christianity about 785. From him descended the first and the present ruling family of Wettin (the houses of Supplinburg, Guelf, and Ascania intervened from 1106 to 1421). Saxony became a duchy, 880; an electorate, 1180; and a kingdom, 1806. It was the seat of war, 1813; the king being on the side of Napoleon. In the conflict of 1866 the king took the side of Austria, and the army fought in the battle of Königgrätz, 3 July. The Prussians entered Saxony 18 June. Peace between Prussia and Saxony was signed 21 Oct. (subjecting the Saxon army to Prussia), and the king returned to Dresden, 3 Nov. Constitution of 4 Sept. 1831; modified, 1849, 1851, 1860, 1861, 1868, and 1874. Population, 1861, 2,225,240; 1890, 3,500,513; 1900, 4,199,758.

Octocentenary of the house of Wettin was celebrated at Dresden with great magnificence 15-19 June, 1889; the many branches of the royal family and its connections were represented; the emperor William II., prince Alfred of Edinburgh for England, and princes representing Portugal and Belgium, and deputations from Austria and Russia were present. The people presented about 150,000*l.* to the king, for the restoration of his palace.

Flight of the crown princess from Salzburg to Zurich, 12 Dec. 1902; her renunciation of all royal rights, titles, and dignities, 9 Jan.; confirmed by royal order, 14 Jan.; she was also suspended from all rights and honours as an Austrian archduchess, 28 Jan.; divorce of the crown prince and princess pronounced at Dresden, 11 Feb. 1903.

SCOTT CENTENARY, celebrated in London and throughout Scotland, 9 Aug. 1871. Sir Walter Scott was born 15 Aug. 1771: died, 1832.

SCOTTISH CORPORATION, established 1665. It is maintained by voluntary contributions, and supports the Scottish hospital which greatly helps necessitous natives of Scotland in London. Annual income about 6,000*l*. The old hall, Crane-court, Fleet-street, built by Wren, burnt 14 Nov. 1877: new hall inaugurated 21 July, 1880.

SCOTTISH HISTORY society founded in Edinburgh in 1886.

SCREW, was known to the Greeks. The pumping-screw of Archimedes, or screw-cylinder for raising water, invented about 236 B.C., is still in use. It is stated that with the assistance of the screw, one man can press down or raise up as much as 150 men can do without it.—The SCREW-PROPELLER consists of two or more twisted blades, like the vanes of a windmill, set on an axis, running parallel with the keel of a vessel, and revolving beneath the water at the stern. It is driven by a steam-engine. The principle was shown by Hooke in 1681, and afterwards by Du Quet, Bernouilli, and others. Patents for propellers were taken out by Joseph Bramah in 1784; by Wm. Lyttelton in 1794; and by Edward Shorter in 1799. But these led to no useful result. In 1836 patents were obtained by Francis Pettit Smith (knighted July, 1871; died, 12 Feb. 1874) and captain John Ericsson (died, aged 86, March, 1889); and to them the successful application of the screw-propeller must be attributed. The first vessels with the screw were the Archimedes, built on the Thames in 1838 by H. Wimshurst, and the Rattler, built in the United States (1844), and tried in England in 1845. Double screw-propellers are now employed. A new form of screw-propeller invented by col. W. H. Mallory, of U.S.A. army, was tried on the Thames and reported successful, Aug. 1878.

SCRIBLERUS CLUB, a literary club, founded by Swift in 1714, included amongst its members, Bolingbroke, Pope, Gay, and Arbuthnot.

SCRIPTURE KNOWLEDGE INSTITUTION, Bristol, was founded by George Müller, a Prussian (born 1805, died 10 March, 1898). He came to Bristol as a minister of the "Brethren" in 1832, and on 5 March, 1834, founded this institution, the objects of which are: 1. Assistance of schools giving instruction on scriptural principles; 2. Circulation of the scriptures; 3. Assistance to missions; 4. Circulation of tracts; 5. Provision for destitute orphans, see Orphan-houses. Without application, Mr. Müller, since he began, up to 26 May, 1895, had received by voluntary contribution, 1,373,348*l.* GS. 24*d.*

SCROFULA, see King's-evil.

SCRUTIN (French for ballot). In scrutin de liste the voter writes on his paper as many names as there are persons to be elected, for instance for the whole department. In scrutin d'arrondissement, the members are elected separately. The adoption of one of these modes was much discussed in France in 1875. The conservatives prefer the latter, the radicals the former. See France, Nov. 1875. The scrutin de liste was adopted in the elections of 1848, 1849, 1871, and 1875.

M. Bardoux's bill for adopting the scrutin de liste (warmly advocated by M. Gambetta), was passed by the chamber of deputies (243-235), 13 May, 1881; rejected by the senate (145-114), 9 June, 1881; again rejected, Jan. 1882.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau's bill for the scrutin de liste passed by the deputies (412-99), 24 March, finally passed, 8 June, 1885.

The bill for the restoration of the scrutin d'arrondissement passed by the chamber 11 Feb. and senate 13 Feb. 1886.

SCULLABOGUE, see Massacres, 1798.

SCULPTURE is said to have begun with the Egyptians. Bezaleel and Aholiab built the tabernacle in the wilderness, and made all the vessels and ornaments, 1491 B.C., and their skill is recorded as the gift of God. Exod. xxxi. 3. Dipœnus and Seyllis, statuaries at Crete, established a school at Sicyon. Pliny speaks of them as being the first who sculptured marble and polished it; all statues before their time being of wood, 568 B.C. Alexander gave Lysippus the sole right of making his statues, 326 B.C. He left no less than 600 pieces, some of which were so highly valued in the age of Augustus, that they sold for their weight in gold. Sculpture did not flourish among the Romans, and in the middle ages with some fine exceptions, was generally degraded. With the revival of painting, it revived also; and Donato di Bardi, born at Florence, A.D. 1383, was the earliest professor among the moderns. An institute of sculptors was established in 1861. The society of British sculptors was inaugurated 26 Jan. 1904. See Royal Academy and Statues.

SCUTAGE or ESCUAGE. The word shield (scutum) is either uncertain. Escuage uncertain is where the tenant is bound to follow his lord; and is called where the tenant is bound to defend. Escuage certain is where the tenant pays a certain sum of money to be paid in lieu of certain services. The first tax levied in England on an army, 5 Hen. II. 1159. Concl.

SCUTARI, Asiatic Turkey, opposite nople, of which it is a suburb. It was called Chrysopolis, golden city, in consequence of the Persians having established here when they attempted the conquest. Near here Constantine finally defeated Lic

The hospital was occupied by the sick and wounded of the Anglo-French army, in 1854-5, whose sufferings were much alleviated by the kind exertions of Miss Florence Nightingale and a band of nurses under her, aided by a large fund of money (£15,000<sup>l.</sup>) subscribed by the public and placed in the care of the proprietors of the Times newspaper; see Times. Explosion of powder magazine by lightning, about 150 killed, 8 June, 1883. Population, 1901, about 82,400.

SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS. Two sea-monsters who, according to the Homeric legend, dwelt on the opposite sides of a narrow sea-strait. Scylla had 12 feet, 6 long necks and mouths, with 3 rows of sharp teeth in each mouth, and barked like a dog. Charybdis, who dwelt under a cliff, three times a day sucked down the sea and threw it up again. Ulysses sailed by these monsters, but lost 6 of his crew, who were seized by Scylla. In later times, the name of Charybdis was applied to a "race" or rapid in the straits of Messina, regarded as specially dangerous to navigators, because in avoiding it they ran the risk of being wrecked on Scylla, a rock opposite. Hence the proverb: "To shun Charybdis and fall into Scylla."

SCYTHIA, situate in the most northern parts of Europe and Asia. The boundaries were unknown to the ancients. The Scythians made several irruptions upon the more southern provinces of Asia, especially 624 B.C., when they remained in possession of Asia Minor for twenty-eight years, and at different periods extended their conquests in Europe, penetrating as far as Egypt; see Tartary.

SEA. Lieut. Maury first published his "Physical Geography of the Sea" in 1854, and other important works since; he died Feb. 1873; see Deep Sea.

SEALS or SIGNETS. Engraved gems were used as such by the Egyptians, Jews, Assyrians, and Greeks; see Exod. xxviii. 14. Ahab's seal was used by Jezebel, 899 B.C. (1 Kings xxi. 8). The Romans in the time of the Tarquins (about 600 B.C.) had gemmed rings. They sealed rooms, granaries, bags of money, &c. The German emperor, Frederick I. (A.D. 1152) had seals of gold, silver, and tin. Impressions of the seals of Saxon kings are extant; and the English great seal is attributed to Edward the Confessor (1041-66). "A seal with armorial bearings before the 11th century, is certainly false." Fosbroke. The most ancient English seal with arms on it is said to be that of Richard I. or John. White and coloured waxes were used. Our present sealing-wax, containing shellac, did not come into general use in Germany and England until about 1556. Red wafers for seals came into use about 1624; but were not used for public seals till the 18th century. A seal acquired by the British Museum made of black hematite, thought to be Hittite, found at Yuzgat in Asia Minor, announced Nov. 1886. Seal Society, for publication of fac-similes of ancient seals, was established in 1883.—For SEALED LETTERS, see Great Seal and Lettres de Cachet.

SEAMEN. In consequence of the great loss of life by wrecks of merchant vessels, attributed to bad ships and overloading, a commission of inquiry was agreed to by parliament on the motion of Mr. S. Plimsoll (who published "Our Seamen: an Appeal"), 4 March, 1873. The duke of Edinburgh was on the commission; the duke of Somerset, chairman.

The report issued in September tended to justify the public apprehensions, but suggested no remedy. The report presented to parliament, 2 July, 1874, condemned the existing insurance system, and recommended increased responsibility of owners and others, and strengthening the powers of the Board of Trade for investigation.

SEAS, SOVEREIGNTY OF THE. The claim of England to rule the British seas is of very ancient date. Arthur is said to have assumed it, and Alfred afterwards supported this claim. It was maintained by Selden, and measures were taken by government in consequence, 8 Chas. I. 1633. The Dutch, after the death of Charles I., made some attempts to obtain it, but were roughly treated by Blake and other admirals. Russia and other powers of the north armed to avoid search, 1780; again, 1800; see Armed Neutrality and Flag. The international rule of the road at sea was settled in 1862; (new rules were issued in 1879 and 19 Aug. 1884), yet near Great Britain alone there have been 13,000 collisions in six years. Mr. Wm. Stirling Lacon proposed to reduce the rules from 749 words to 144, for simplicity and security. His form had been nine times before parliament, 1873. Revised rules issued by the admiralty in a "Fleet Circular," Nov. 1885.

The British Board of Trade appointed a committee to consider measures for the establishment of a "new rule of the road at sea"; first meeting, . . . 1 Aug. 1890

The committee adopted the regulations recommended by the Washington conference in 1889 (see Navigation Laws), in spite of much opposition from the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom, the General Shipowners' Society of London, the committee of Lloyd's, and other kindred bodies; reported Dec. 1894.

Committee appointed by the board of trade, March, 1895; report issued, the new rules supported but simplification recommended, April, 1896; another committee appointed respecting collisions at sea, May, 1897; final report 13 May; rules to be enforced . . . 1 July, 1899

SEA SERPENT, GREAT, the name given to an animal popularly believed to exist, especially in deep tropical seas, but much controverted by zoologists, sir Richard Owen and others.

Capt. M'Quhae described the appearance of such an animal in the South Atlantic ocean in 1848. Other descriptions have been since published, and many explanations have been suggested. "The Great Sea Serpent," by Mr. A. C. Oudemans, published in 1893, contains reports of 187 appearances, with 82 illustrations.

In the north temperate regions in 1905 the spring quarter began 21 March, 7 a.m., the summer, 22 June, 3 a.m., the autumn, 23 Sept. 5 p.m., the winter, 22 Dec. 6 p.m. See Lapland seasons under Year.

SEBASTIAN, ST. (N. Spain), was taken by the French, under the duke of Berwick, in 1719. It was besieged by the British and allied army under Wellington. After a most heavy bombardment, by which the whole town was laid nearly in ruins, it was stormed by general Graham (afterwards lord Lynedoch), and taken 31 Aug. 1813.—On 5 May, 1836, the fortified works, through the centre of which ran the high road to Hernani, were carried by the English auxiliary legion under general Evans, after very hard fighting. The British naval squadron, off St. Sebastian, under lord John Hay, lent very opportune aid to the victors in this contest.—A vigorous assault was made on the lines of general De Lacy Evans, at St. Sebastian, by the Carlists, 1 Oct. 1836. Both parties fought with bravery. The Carlists were repulsed, after suffering severely. The loss of the Anglo-Spanish force was 376 men and 37 officers, killed and wounded. General De Lacy Evans was slightly wounded. See under Leagues. Population, 1887, 29,047.

SEBASTOPOL or SEVASTOPOL, a town and once a naval arsenal, at S.W. point of the Crimea, formerly the little village of Aktiar. The buildings were commenced in 1784, by Catherine II. after the conquest of the country. The town is built in the shape of an amphitheatre on the rise of a large hill flattened on its summit, according to a plan laid down before 1794, which has been since adhered to. The fortifications and harbour were constructed by an English engineer, colonel Upton, and his sons, since 1830. This place underwent eleven months' siege, by the English and French in 1854 and 1855. Immediately after the battle of the Alma, 20 Sept. 1854, the allied army marched to Sebastopol, and took up its position on the plateau between it and Balaklava, and the grand attack and bombardment commenced 17 Oct. 1854, without success.* After many sanguinary encounters by day and night, and repeated bombardments, a grand assault was made on 8 Sept. 1855, upon the Malakhoff tower and the Redans, the most important fortifications to the south of the town. The French succeeded in capturing and retaining

* In consequence of the sufferings and disasters of the army in the winter of 1854-5, the Sebastopol inquiry Committee was appointed, and the Aberdeen administration resigned, Feb. 1855. The committee sat from 1 March to 15 May, lord Aberdeen being the last person examined. Its report was presented 18 June. Mr. Roebuck, the chairman, moved on 17 July that the house should pass a vote of severe reprehension on every member of the Aberdeen administration. On 19 July his motion was lost by a majority of 107 against it. In 1855 the government sent sir John M'Neill and col. Tulloch to inquire into the state of the armies in the Crimea. Their report was presented to parliament in Feb. 1856. A commission was appointed to consider the statements in the report (which were very unfavourable to many officers), but the substance of the report was unshaken.

the Malakhoff. The attacks of the English great Redan and of the French upon the were successful, but the assailants were to retire after a desperate struggle with life. The French lost 1646 killed, of whom 24 superior and 116 inferior were wounded, and 1400 missing. The English killed (29 being commissioned and 42 uncommissioned officers), 1886 wounded, and 1711 killed. In the night the Russians abandoned it and principal part of the town and fort after destroying as much as possible, and to the northern forts. They also sank the remainder of their fleet. The allies lost a great amount of stores when they entered 9 Sept. The works were utterly destroyed 1856, and the town was restored to the July; gen. Todleben, the able defender, 1884, and was buried here; his uncovered 28 June, 1890. See Russo-Turkish War. Population of Sebastopol, 1885, 33,507. Made a naval port, Sept. 1895; opened, 18 May, 1898. Monument to add off unveiled by the czar, 30 Nov. 1898. Organised revolt of the naval and military and workmen.

Mutineers capture the city; adm. Pisariev railway station taken and traffic stopped; battle between loyal troops and mutineers; latter shell the city; imperial forces at rebel batteries and capture the ships.

SECONDARY OF LONDON, office, resembling that of under-sheriff. The place was purchaseable till early in the century, when it was bought up by the state.

SECRET SOCIETIES, ASSOCIATIONS Rubonism, Vehmische Tribunal, Rosicrucians, Minati, Carbonari, Mary-Anne, Nihilism.

SECRETARIES OF STATE. authentic record of a secretary of state reign of Henry III., when John Man scried as "Secretarius Noster." 12 Towards the close of Henry VIII.'s secretaries were appointed; and upon with Scotland, Anne added a third as Scotch affairs; this appointment was set aside; but in the reign of George III. was again increased to three, one for the department. In 1782 this last was abolished of Parliament; and the secretaries were for home, foreign, and colonial affairs. were but two secretaries, one held the of the Northern department, comprising Countries, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Russia, &c.; the other, of the Southern including France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, and Turkey; the affairs of Ireland the elder secretary; both secretaries directed the home affairs. Beaton. SECTS, RELIGIOUS, see under Worship, and their respective titles.

SECULAR GAMES (Ludi Sæculares), very ancient Roman games, celebrated on important occasions. Horace wrote his "Carmen Sæculare" for their celebration in the reign of the emperor Augustus (17). They took place again in the reign of Claudius (47), of Domitian (88), and for the last time, of Philip (248).

SECULARISM, a name given to the principles advocated by G. J. and Austin Holyoake, about 1846, and subsequently by Mr. Bradlaugh (died 30 Jan. 1891). Mr. G. J. Holyoake died 22 Jan. 1906.

Its central idea is free, not lawless thought, and it considers scepticism to be scrutiny. It advocates liberty of action without injury to others. It is not against Christianity, but independent of it. Its standard is utilitarian; it is the religion of the present life only; teaching men to seek morality in nature, and happiness in duty. Messrs. Austin and G. J. Holyoake and other secularists repudiated atheism.

SECURITY FROM VIOLENCE ACT, passed in 1863, appointed whipping as part of the punishment for attempts at garroting.

SEDAN, an ancient fortified city in the valley of the Meuse, N.E. of France, the seat of a principality long held by the dukes of Bouillon. On 6 July, 1641, a victory was gained at La Marée, near Sedan, by the count of Soissons and the troops of Bouillon and other French princes, over the royal army supporting Richelieu; but the count was slain on 23 June, 1642. The duke was arrested in the midst of his army, and was made to cede Sedan to the crown. The protestant university was abolished after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, 22 Oct. 1685. Around this place a series of desperate conflicts on 29, 30, and 31 Aug. between the French army of the north, under marshal MacMahon (about 150,000 men) and the greater part of the three German armies under the king and crown-prince of Prussia and the crown-prince of Saxony (about 250,000 men) was brought to a close on 1 Sept. 1870.

The emperor Napoleon was present during the battle, and, it is said, stood at Igles, near Sedan, exposed for four hours on 1 Sept. to the German grenades. The impossibility of further resistance was then evident. The Germans had contracted their circle close round Sedan; their formidable artillery held all the heights, from which they could at pleasure wholly destroy the town and the army, and only 2000 men were in a condition to respond to their commander's call, and to make a supreme effort to break through the enemy with the emperor and escape to Montmédy.

At first general de Wimpffen (called to the command when MacMahon was wounded) indignantly rejected the terms offered by the victor, and the emperor had a fruitless interview with count Bismarck to endeavour to mitigate them.

On 2 Sept. the emperor wrote in autograph to the king of Prussia, "Mon frère, n'ayant pu mourir à la tête de mes troupes, je dépose mon épée au pied de votre majesté. NAPOLEON." A capitulation of Sedan and the whole army therein was signed by generals Von Moltke and De Wimpffen at the château of Bellevue, near Frenois, at 11.30 a.m., and at 2 p.m. an interview took place between the king and the emperor.

The conflict was principally carried on by the artillery, in which the Germans had the advantage, not only in number (600 to 500), but also in weight, range, and precision. The carnage was awful, and the field the next day was a mass of shattered bones, torn flesh, and coloured rags.

About 25,000 French prisoners were taken in the battle, and 81,000 surrendered the next day, together with 70 mitrailleuses, 400 field-pieces, and 150 fortress guns.

About 14,000 French wounded were found lying in the neighbourhood, and about 3000 escaped into Belgium and laid down their arms. Among the killed was lieut.-col. Pemberton, a correspondent of the Times, who had approached too near the conflict.

The French emperor and his suite arrived at Wilhelmshöhe, a castle near Cassel appointed for his residence (formerly inhabited by his uncle Jerome, when king of Westphalia), in the evening of 5 Sept.

In a letter dated 12 May, 1872, the emperor Napoleon took upon himself the whole responsibility of the surrender of Sedan.

SEDAN CHAIRS (so called from Sedan), were first seen in England in 1581. One used in the reign of James I., by the duke of Buckingham, caused great indignation, and the people exclaimed that he was employing his fellow-creatures to do the service of beasts. Sedan chairs came into London in 1634, when sir Francis Duncomb obtained the sole privilege to use, let, and hire a number of such covered chairs for fourteen years. They came into very general use in 1649.

SEDANGS, a tribe dwelling on the borders of Annam. M. de Mayreana, an ex-officer of the French navy, having made himself their king, came to Paris. He was set aside, and the Sedangs were brought under French protection by the French resident-general in Indo-China; reported Oct. 1889.

SEDGMOOR (Somersetshire), where the duke of Monmouth (natural son of Charles II. by Lucy Walters), who had risen in rebellion on the accession of James II., was completely defeated by the royal army, 6 July, 1685. The duke was made a prisoner in the disguise of a peasant, at the bottom of a ditch, overcome with hunger and fatigue. He was tried and beheaded on 15 July following.

SEDITION. Sedition acts were passed in the reign of George III. The proclamation against seditious writings was published May, 1792. The celebrated Sedition bill passed Dec. 1795. Seditious societies were suppressed by act, June, 1797. The Seditious Meetings and Assemblies' bill passed 31 March, 1817. In Ireland, during the Roman Catholic and Repeal agitation, acts or proclamations against sedition and seditious meetings were published from time to time until 1848.

SEEDS. An act was passed to prevent the adulteration of seeds (a common practice), 11 Aug. 1869; amended in 1878.

SEGEDIN, or SZEGEDIN, Hungary. Here was concluded a treaty between Ladislaus IV. and Amurath II., 12 July, 1444. It was treacherously annulled at the instigation of cardinal Julian, who with Ladislaus perished in the fatal battle of Varna, 10 Nov. 1444. See Varna.

SEICENTO, see under Italian.

SEIDLICE (Poland), where a battle was fought 10 April, 1831, between the Poles and Russians. The Poles obtained the victory after a bloody conflict, taking 4000 prisoners and several pieces of cannon; but this success was soon followed by fatal reverses.

SEISMOMETER (from seismos, Greek for earthquake), an apparatus for measuring the violence of the shocks. One is described by Mr. Robert Mallet in his work on earthquakes, published in 1858. SEPTENNATE, in the German constitution, is the stipulation that every German fit for the duty is liable to serve for seven years in the Imperial army, 4 May, 1871.

SEPTENNIAL PARLIAMENTS. Edward I. held but one parliament every two years. In the 4th Edward III. it was enacted, "that a parliament should be holden every year once." This continued to be the statute-law till 16th Charles I. 1641, when an act was passed for holding parliaments once in three years at least; repealed in 1664. The Triennial act was re-enacted in 1694. Triennial parliaments thence continued till the 2 Geo. I. 1716, when, in consequence of the allegation that "a popish faction were designing to renew the rebellion in this kingdom, and the report of an invasion from abroad," it was enacted that "the then parliament should continue for seven years." This Septennial act, entitled "an act for enlarging the continuance of parliaments" (1715 in the statutes, 4to, given as 1 Geo. I. stat. 2, c. 38), was passed 7 May, 1716; see Parliaments. Several unsuccessful motions have been made for its repeal; one in May, 1837; again 24 Feb. 1880, and 8 April, 1892 (188-142).

SEPTUAGINT VERSION OF THE BIBLE. Lat. Septuaginta, "seventy," the Alexandrian and oldest Greek version of the Old Testament. So named from the story of its origin in the letter of Aristæus, "purporting to have been written by a Greek of Alexandria at the time when the event occurred. Aristæus states that Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt (284-247 B.C.), when engaged in making a collection of the laws of all nations for the great Alexandrine library, was advised by his librarian, Demetrius Phalereus, to have the Jewish Scriptures translated into Greek; how the king sent an embassy to Jerusalem to request the help of the wise men of Israel; how 72 learned Jews, 6 from each tribe, came to Alexandria and were sent to labour in the seclusion of the Island of Pharos; and how in 72 days they dictated to Demetrius a translation of the whole Scriptures," which soon became the authorised Bible of the Greek-speaking Jews. Although this story is mythical, it is possible that the Septuagint was translated by Egyptian Jews from the Hebrew by command of Ptolemy, probably for the gratification of his own literary curiosity; modern criticism, however, affirms that the Septuagint version is the work not only of different translators, but of different periods, the Pentateuch being first translated, and subsequently the other books. The Septuagint was in use up to the time of Jesus Christ, when it had almost superseded the original Hebrew text. Most of the citations in the New Testament from the Old Testament are taken from the LXX. The principal MSS. of the Septuagint are the Alexandrine codex, in the British Museum; the Vatican codex, in Rome; and the Sinaitic codex, which is defective, in St. Petersburg.

SEWERS, see Cloaca Maxima. An act was passed in 1847 enforcing the conveyance of the sewage of houses in London into the public sewers. The commissioners of sewers in London were superseded by the metropolitan commissioners of sewers, nominated by the government. They abolished the large brick sewers, introducing pipe drains, and turned the contents of 30,000 cesspools into the river Thames. The necessity for purifying the defiled river led to the construction of a new system of drainage, under the superintendence of the Metropolitan Board of Works. The main drainage (the plan of Mr. J. W. Bazalgette) consists of the northern high-level, middle-level, and low-level, and southern high-level and low-level. On 14 March, 1865, the works were said to be completed, except the low-level sewer on the north side, which was waiting for the completion of the Thames embankment, &c. On 4 April, 1865, the prince of Wales (now King) started the engines which commenced lifting the waters of the southern outfall, at Crossness Point, near Erith. The main drainage works of the metropolis (82 miles), were finally completed Aug. 1875. The sewage is carried 14 miles down the river. Total cost, 4,500,000*l*.

SHAWLS, of oriental origin, were introduced into Paris after the return of Napoleon Bonaparte from Egypt, 1801. The manufacture was introduced by Barrow and Watson, in 1784, at Norwich. It began at Paisley and Edinburgh about 1805. Ure.

SHEEP were exported from England to Spain, and, the breed being thereby improved, produced the fine Spanish wool, which proved detrimental to our woollen manufacture, 1467. Anderson. Their exportation was prohibited on pain of fine and imprisonment, 1522. The number of sheep in the United Kingdom has been variously stated—by some at 43,000,000, by others at 49,000,000, and by more at 60,000,000, in 1840. In 1851 there were imported into England 201,859 sheep and lambs; in 1858, 184,482; in 1864, 496,243. See under Cattle. In Aug. and Sept. 1862, many sheep in Wiltshire died of smallpox; and on Sept. 11, government declared for enforcing the act for the prevention of contagion. The evil soon abated. In April, 1866, the disease reappeared and the regulations were reissued.

In 1865, 914,170 sheep and lambs were imported; in 1868, 341,155; in 1871, 916,799; 1874, 758,915; 1875, 985,652; 1876, 1,041,329; 1877, 874,055; 1878, 892,125; 1879, 944,888; 1880, 941,121; 1881, 935,144; 1882, 1,124,391; 1883, 1,116,115; 1885, 750,886; 1887, 971,404; 1888, 956,210; 1889, 677,958; 1890, 358,458; 1892, 79,048; 1900, 382,833; 1902, 293,203; 1904, 382,240.

SHEEPSHANKS' DONATIONS. On 2 Feb. 1857, Mr. John Sheepshanks, by a deed of gift, presented to the nation his valuable collection of paintings and drawings, valued at 60,000*l.* In accordance with the donor's directions, the pictures were placed in the South Kensington museum. The collection is rich in the works of Mulready, Landseer, and Leslie. He died 5 Oct. 1863.—On 2 Dec. 1858, the trustees of his brother, the late rev. Richard Sheepshanks, presented 10,000*l.* stock to Trinity college, Cambridge, for the promotion of the study of astronomy, meteorology, and magnetism.

SHEERNESS (N. Kent), a royal dockyard, planned by Charles II. in 1663, was taken by the Dutch, under De Ruyter, 9 June, 1667. Mutiny of the Nore, 1798. The modern dockyard, dating from 1814, is one of the finest in covers more than 60 acres. The town four divisions, Blue-town, Mile-town, and Marina-town. In more recent years has become a seaside resort, and affords sea bathing. Population, 1881, 13,281; 1901, 14,492.

In July, 1892, it was proposed by lord Tennyson and others, to celebrate the centenary of the birth of Shelley, by establishing a library and museum at Horsham, Sussex, near which place he was born. A mural tablet commemorating his birth, 4 Aug. 1792, and his death, 8 July, 1822, was set up publicly in the parish church 4 Aug., 1892.

SHELLS, see Bombs.

SHERBORNE PAGEANT. A pageant on a large scale to commemorate the 1,200th anniversary of the foundation of Sherborne town, bishopric, and school. The principal features were the performance, in the grounds of Sherborne castle, of the historical pageant, written for the occasion by Mr. Louis N. Parker, the various scenes illustrating the history of the town, &c., and school between their foundation in 705 A.D. by St. Ealdhelm, first bishop of Sherborne, and the arrival of sir Walter Raleigh and his bride. The pageant opened 12 June, 1905.

SHERIFF, or shire-reeve, governor of a shire or county. London had its sheriffs prior to William I.'s reign, but some say that sheriffs were first nominated for every county in England by William in 1079. According to other historians, Henry Cornhill and Richard Keynere were the first sheriffs of London, 1 Rich. I., 1189. The nomination of sheriffs, according to the present mode, took place in 1461. Stow. Anciently sheriffs were hereditary in Scotland, and in some English counties, as Westmoreland. The sheriffs of Dublin (first called bailiffs) were appointed in 1308, and obtained the name of sheriff by an incorporation of Edward VI. 1548. Thirty-five sheriffs were fined, and eleven excused in one year, rather than serve the office for London, 1734; see Bailiffs. The high sheriffs of the counties of England and Wales, except Middlesex and Lancaster, are nominated on the morrow of St. Martin, Nov. 12. This somewhat vice-regal office, of Saxon origin, has gradually lost much of its importance.

The sheriffs' act passed. . . . . 1887

* William Petty, earl of Shelburne, born 1737; secretary of state under lord Chatham, July, 1766; premier, 1782-3; created first marquis of Lansdowne, 1784; died, 7 May, 1805.

SHIBBOLETH, the word by which the followers of Jephthah tested their opponents the Ephraimites, on passing the Jordan, about 1143 B.C. Judges xii. The term is now applied to any party watchword or dogma.

SHIMOSE POWDER. An explosive of great power, employed by the Japanese in the Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5.

SHIITES, the Mahometan sect predominating in Persia; see Mahometanism.

SHILLING. The value of the ancient Saxon coin of this name was fivepence, but it was reduced to fourpence about a century before the conquest. After the conquest the French solidus of twelve pence, in use among the Normans, was called shilling. The true English shilling was first coined, some say, in small numbers, by Henry VII., 1504. Ruding. A peculiar shilling, value nine pence, but to be current at twelve, was struck in Ireland, 1560; and a large but very base coinage in England for the service of Ireland, 1598. Milled shillings were coined 13 Chas. II. 1662; see Coins.

SHILOH, see Pittsburg.

SHIP-BUILDING, &c., according to the Greek legends, began with the Egyptians, and ancient drawings of their rude vessels are extant. The Greeks, Phœnicians, and Carthaginians were skilful shipbuilders, and Solomon's "navy of ships" (1 Kings ix. 26), was doubtless constructed by Tyrians, 992 B.C. The ships of Tarshish (probably in Spain), are mentioned in Psalms xlviii. 7, Isaiah ii. 16, &c. The Romans built their first fleet of boats, by copying a Carthaginian vessel wrecked on their coast, 260 B.C. The dangers of navigation are described in Psalms cvii. 23-30 and Acts xxvii. Strong vessels were constructed by the Norsemen for invasion and piracy in the 5th century A.D. et seq., and by the Venetians and other Italians, for commerce and war in the Middle Ages. The first double-decked ship built in England was of 1000 tons burthen, by order of Henry VII., was called the Great Harry, and cost 14,000*l.* Stow. Port-holes and other improvements were invented by Descharges, a French builder at Brest, in the reign of Louis XII., about 1500. Ship-building was treated as a science by Hoste, 1696. In the second half of the 19th century great progress was made in ship-building. Wood gave place to iron and steel, and only small vessels are now constructed of wood alone.

Viking ship discovered in a grave mound at Gokstad, Norway (now preserved in the university of Christiania) in 1880.

A prehistoric ship cut out of solid oak, 48 feet long, 4 feet 4 inches wide, and 2 feet deep, was found by the Brigg gas company while excavating near the river Ancholme in Lincolnshire, April, 1885. Mr. Justice Chitty decided, 6 July, 1886, that the ship was the property of the owner of the land, Mr. Elwes.

The France, a great sailing ship, was built on the Clyde by Messrs. Henderson for a Bordeaux firm; five masts, 360 feet long, 48 feet wide, bowsprit 50 feet long; carrying power over 6,000 tons.

SHIPKA, see Shipka.

SHIP-MONEY was first levied about 1007, to form a navy to oppose the Danes. This impost, levied by Charles I. in 1634-6, was much opposed, and led to the revolution. He assessed London in seven ships, of 4000 tons, and 1560 men; Yorkshire in two ships, of 600 tons or 12,000*l.*; Bristol in one ship of 100 tons; Lancashire in one ship, of 400 tons. Among others, John Hampden refused to pay the tax; he was tried in the Exchequer in 1636. The judges declared the tax legal, 12 June, 1637. Ship-money was included in the grievances complained of in 1641. The five judges, who had given an opinion in its favour, were imprisoned. Hampden received a wound in a skirmish with prince Rupert, at Chalgrove, 18 June, and died 24 June, 1643.

SHIPPING, BRITISH. Shipping was first registered in the river Thames in 1786; and throughout the empire in 1787. In the middle of the 18th century, the shipping of England was but half-a-million of tons. In 1830, the number of ships in the British empire was 22,785. The merchant shipping act of 1854 was amended in 1867; see Merchant Shipping Act, Navy, and Navigation Acts. Trials, 1893.

Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom was established in 1878, mainly by H. J. Atkinson, M.P., the first president. Meetings are held for discussing matters relative to shipping and to disseminate information. Annual meetings are also held.

SHIP-RAILWAY, see Railways, Oct. 1889.

SHIPWRECKS, see Wrecks.

SHIRES, see Counties and under Horse.

SHIRTS are said to have been first generally worn in the west of Europe early in the 8th century. Du Fresnoy. Woollen shirts were commonly worn in England until about 1253, when linen, but of a coarse kind (fine coming at this period from abroad), was first manufactured in England by Flemish artisans. Stow.

SHODDY, a kind of soft woollen goods, manufactured from old woollen rags, or the refuse, to which new wool is added, is stated to have been first manufactured about 1813, at Batley, near Dewsbury, Yorkshire.

SHOEBLACK SOCIETY Brigades (Blue, Red, and Yellow) were established at various times, especially in 1850, by Mr. John MacGregor, "Rob Roy," in connection with the Ragged School Union.

SHOEBURYNESSE (Essex). Some ground here, purchased in 1842 and 1855, by an act of parliament in 1862 was set apart as "ranges for the use and practice of artillery," and a school for gunnery was established; see Cannon, note. Experiments with Mr. Whitworth's projectiles on 12 Nov. 1862, showed their great improvement in form and material. Shells were sent through 5½ inch plate and the wood-work behind it. It was objected, that they might not do this with ships in motion. The National Volunteer Artillery Association began their annual meetings here in July, 1865.

During shell experiments with a new sensitive fuse, col. Francis Lyon (the inventor), col. Fox-Strangways, capt. Francis M. Gould-Adams, and four others were killed, 26 Feb. 1885.

SHOES, among the Jews were made of leather, linen, rush, or wood. Moons were worn as ornaments in their shoes by Jewish women. Isaiah iii. 18. Pythagoras would have his disciples wear shoes made of the bark of trees; probably that they might not wear what were made of the skins of animals, as they refrained from the use of everything that had life. The Romans wore an ivory crescent on their shoes; and Caligula enriched his with precious stones. In England, about 1462, the people wore the beaks or points of their shoes so long that they encumbered themselves in walking, and were forced to tie them up to their knees; the fine gentlemen fastened theirs with chains of silver or silver gilt, and others with laces. This was prohibited, on the forfeiture of 20s. and on pain of being cursed by the clergy, 7 Edw. IV. 1467; see Dress. Shoes, as at present worn, were introduced about 1633. The buckle was not used till 1668. Stow; Mortimer. The buckle-makers petitioned against the use of shoe-strings in 1791. A strike of London shoemakers respecting wages, April, 1884; strike at Raunds, 1905. See Strikes.

SHOOTING STARS, see under Meteors.

SHOP HOURS' REGULATION ACT (Sir John Lubbock's), for the protection of young persons, passed, 1886, amended, 1892. His resolution against long hours adopted by the commons, 21 March, 1893. Amendment act passed, 21 Dec. 1893; another bill, withdrawn, April, 1895; stopped Aug. 1896. Shop assistants (seats) act passed, 9 Aug. 1899; shop clubs act, royal assent, 8 Aug. 1902; one passed (lords), 28 April, 1903.

SHOP-TAX enacted in 1785; caused so great a commotion, particularly in London, that it was deemed expedient to repeal it in 1789. The statute whereby shoplifting was made a felony, without benefit of clergy, was passed 10 & 11 Will. III. 1699. This statute has been repealed.

SHORE, JANE, the mistress of Edward IV. and afterwards of lord Hastings. She did public penance in 1483, and was afterwards confined in Ludgate; but upon the petition of Thomas Hymore, who agreed to marry her, king Richard III., in 1484, restored her to liberty: and sir Thomas More mentions having seen her. Harleian MSS.

SHORT-HAND, see Stenography.

"SHORT-LIVED" ADMINISTRATION—that of William Pulteney, earl of Bath, lord Carlisle, lord Winchelsea, and lord Granville, existed from 10 Feb. to 12 Feb. 1746.

SHOT. In early times various missiles were shot from cannon. Bolts are mentioned in 1413; and in 1418 Henry V. ordered his clerk of the ordnance to get 7000 stone shot made at the quarries at Maidstone. Since then chain, grape, and canister shot have been invented, as well as shells of many kinds; see Bombs and Cannon. For Palliser's chilled shot, see Cannon.

SHREWSBURY ADMINISTRATION. Charles, duke of Shrewsbury, was made lord treasurer, 29 July, 1714, two days before the death of queen Anne. His patent was revoked soon after the accession of George I., 29 Oct. following, when the earl of Halifax became first lord of the treasury; see Halifax. The office of lord treasurer has been executed by commissioners ever since.

SHREWSBURY (Shropshire), arose after the ruin of the Roman town Uriconium (see Wroxeter), and became one of the chief cities of the kingdom, having a mint till the reign of Henry III. Here Richard II. held a parliament in 1397.—On 21 July, 1403, was fought a sanguinary battle at Hateley field, near Shrewsbury, between the army of Henry IV. and that of the nobles, led by Percy (surnamed Hotspur), son of the earl of Northumberland, who had conspired to dethrone Henry. SIBYLS, Sibyllæ, women believed to be inspired, who flourished in different parts of the world. Plato speaks of one, others of two, Pliny of three, Ælian of four, and Varro of ten. An Erythrean sibyl is said to have offered to Tarquin II. nine books containing the Roman destinies, demanding for them 300 pieces of gold. He denied her; whereupon the sibyl threw three of them into the fire, and asked the same price for the other six, which being still denied, she burnt three more, and again demanded the same sum for those that remained, when Tarquin conferring with the pontiffs was advised to buy them. Two magistrates were created to consult them on all occasions, 531 B.C.; see Quindecimvirs.

SICILIAN VESPERS, the term given to the massacre of the French (who had conquered Sicily, 1266), commenced at Palermo, 30 March, 1282.

On Easter Monday conspirators assembled at Palermo; and while the French were engaged in festivities, a Sicilian bride passed by with her train. One Drochet, a Frenchman, used her rudely, under pretence of searching for arms. A young Sicilian stabbed him with his own sword; and a tumult ensuing, 200 French were instantly murdered. The populace ran through the city, crying out, "Let the French die!" and, without distinction of rank, age, or sex, slaughtered all of that nation they could find, to the number of about 8000. Even the churches proved no sanctuary, and the massacre became general throughout the island.

SICILY (anciently Trinacria, three-cornered). The early inhabitants were the Sicani, or Siculi, a people of Spain, and Etruscans, who came from Italy. The Phenicians and Greeks settled some colonies here (735-582); see Syracuse. SIENA (the ancient Sena Julia), Italy, in the middle ages a powerful republic rivaling Florence and Pisa; see Tuscany. It was incorporated with France, 1808-14.

Montapertio in 1260; placed themselves under the duke of Milan, 1399; were ruled by Pandolfo Petrucci, 1487-1512; submitted to the emperor Charles V. 1524; rebelled, called in the French, 1555; were defeated and given up to Cosimo de Medici, 1557; who annexed Siena to Tuscany.

SIERRA LEONE (W. Africa), discovered by the Portuguese navigator, P. de Cintra, in 1462. An attempt to form a settlement here made by the British government by sending out from London about 400 freed negroes and 60 whites, Dec. 1786, failed; a second attempt by the Sierra Leone Company in 1791, was not much more successful, and in 1807 the settlement was given up to the crown. Area about 4,000 sq. miles. Capital, Freetown, has the finest harbour in West Africa; population in 1901, 35,000. The settlement was attacked by the French, Sept. 1794; by the natives, Feb. 1802. Sir Charles Macarthy, governor of the colony, was defeated and killed by the Ashantee chief, 21 Jan. 1824.—16 & 17 Vict. c. 16, relates to the government, &c., of this colony. It was made a bishopric in 1852; see Ashantees and West Africa. Population in 1891, 74,835; 1893, 136,000; 1901, 76,655. SILICON or SILICUM (from silex, flint), a non-metallic element, next to oxygen the most abundant substance in the earth, as it enters into the constitution of many earths, metallic oxides, and a great number of minerals. The mode of procuring pure silicon was discovered by Berzelius in 1823. Gmelin. See Water-glass and Ransome's Stone.

SILISTRIA, a strong military town in Bulgaria, European Turkey. It was taken by the Russians, 30 June, 1829, and held some years by them as a pledge for the payment of a large sum by the Porte; but was eventually returned. In 1854 it was again besieged by the Russians, 30,000 strong, under prince Paskiewitch, and many assaults were made. On 2 June, Mussa Pacha, the brave and skilful commander of the garrison, was killed. On 9 June, the Russians stormed two forts, which were retaken. A grand assault took place on 13 June, under prince Gortschakoff and general Schilders, which was vigorously repelled. On the 15th, the garrison assumed the offensive, crossed the river, defeated the Russians, and destroyed the siege works. The siege was thus raised, and the Russians commenced their retreat as Omar Pacha was drawing near. The garrison was ably assisted by two British officers, capt. Butler and lieut. Nasmyth, the former of whom, after being wounded, died of exhaustion. They were highly praised by Omar Pacha and lord Hardinge, and lieutenant Nasmyth was made a major. Population, 1888, 11,414; 1900, 12,133.

SILK. The culture of the silkworm and the manufacture of silk is attributed to the Chinese. Ptolemy called the northern part of China (afterwards known as Cathay) Seres ("the people who furnish silk"), from the Chinese name for the silkworm se or see, from which is derived the Greek word ser, "silkworm." A Chinese work, called the "Silkworm Classic," states that Se-ling-she, the principal queen of the Emperor Hwang-te (2640 B.C.), was the first person to rear silkworms, and that the emperor invented robes and garments of silk. The Chinese themselves assign a still higher antiquity to the culture of the silkworm. Silkworms were introduced into Europe (552) by two Persian monks, who brought them from China to Constantinople; and their culture was encouraged by the Roman emperor Justinian. Wrought silk was brought from Persia to Greece, 325 B.C. Known at Rome in Tiberius's time, when a law passed in the senate prohibiting the use of plate of massive gold, and also forbidding men to debase themselves by wearing silk, fit only for women. Silk was at first of the same value with gold, weight for weight, and was thought to grow in the same manner as cotton on trees. Silkworms were brought from India to Europe in the 6th century. Charlemagne sent Offa, king of Mercia, a present of two silken vests, 780. The manufacture was encouraged by Roger, king of Sicily, at Palermo, 1146, when the Sicilians not only bred the silkworms, but spun and wove the silk. The manufacture spread into Italy and Spain, and also into the south of France, a little before the reign of Francis I. about 1510; and Henry IV. propagated mulberry-trees and silkworms throughout the kingdom, about 1600. In England, silk mantles were worn by some noblemen's ladies at a ball at Kenilworth castle, 1286. Silk was worn by the English clergy in 1534. Manufactured in England in 1604; and broad silk wove from raw silk in 1620. Brought to perfection by the French refugees in London at Spitalfields, 1688. A silk-throwing mill was made in England, and fixed up at Derby, by sir Thomas Lombe, merchant of London, modelled from the original mill then in the king of Sardinia's dominions, about 1714. He obtained a patent in 1718, and died 3 Jan. 1739. Six new species of silkworm were rearing in France, 1861.* In 1857 Mr. Lister (lord Masham 1891) discovered a useful method of spinning native chassum, or Indian silk-waste; since then many important improvements in dressing and spinning waste silk have been discovered.

The Silk association of Great Britain and Ireland begun, 1886-7; first exhibition St. James's-square, London, S.W. (opened by the duchess of Teck), 6-21 May, 1890; others since. See Italy, May, 1899.

SILKWORM DISEASE. In 1853 the annual produce of sericulture in South France was estimated at about 4,680,000*l.* Soon after a disease broke out in the worms, which reduced the value of the silk crop to about one-third that amount. In 1858 a commission was appointed to inquire into the nature of the disease, then termed pebrine; and M. Quatrefages, in 1860, proved that it is hereditary, contagious, and infectious. M. Filippi discovered in the blood of the diseased worms a multitude of cylindrical corpuscles, since named parahistophyton, which Pasteur, who took up the study in 1865, demonstrated to be parasitical, and the cause of the disease. He subsequently devised a way by which the organic germs may be got rid of and the disease extirpated.

The manufacture of a fabric from wood pulp, invented by count Hilaire de Chardonnet about 1893, and carried on at Besançon, reported very successful; dress and other fabrics of this material sold in London, summer of 1896.

World's production of raw silk in 1904 amounted to 19,368,000 kilograms (about 42,610,000 lbs.); estimated production for 1905-6, 40,100,000 lbs.

Import of raw silk into the United Kingdom, 1,337,579 lbs.; thrown and spun, 769,297 lbs.; value, raw, 884,760*l.*; thrown and spun, 580,810*l.*; manufactured silk imported, 12,793,402*l.* in 1904.

SILURES, a British tribe, occupying the counties of Monmouth and Hereford, was subdued by the Roman general Ostorius Scapula, 50; see Shropshire. From this tribe is derived the geological term "Silurian strata," among the lowest of the palæozoic or primary series, from their occurrence in the above-mentioned counties. Murchison's "Siluria" was published 1849.

SILVER exists in most parts of the world, and is found mixed with other ores in various mines in Great Britain. The silver mines of South America were at one time the richest in the world, but the mines discovered in the United States of North America in 1858 et seq. far exceeded them in richness.

* In 1858, M. Guérin-Mèneville introduced into France a Chinese worm termed the Cynthia Bombyx, which feeds on the Ailanthus glandulosa, a hardy tree of the oak kind. The cynthia yields a silk-like substance termed Ailantine. It was brought to Turin by Fantoni in 1856.

ness. Silver was discovered in the State of in 1858, and subsequently in most of the States and territories, viz., Colorado, Utah, and Arizona, the greatest produce Colorado, next being Nevada. The most mines in the United States are the Comstock Washoe county, West Nevada (formerly part territory of Utah), and the Eureka and R mines, Nevada. The Comstock lode was discovered in 1859, and in 20 years had produced silver valued at 325,000,000 dollars. Then its galls shafts were 250 miles in length. Round grew up Virginia City. A mine was discovered district of La Paz in 1860, which was so the silver of it was often cut out with a chisel 1749, one mass of silver weighing 370 lbs. to Spain. From a mine in Norway, a piece was dug, and sent to the Royal Museum at hagen, weighing 560 lbs., and worth 1.6 England silver plate and vessels were first Wilfrid, a Northumbrian bishop, a lofty bitious man, 709. Tyrrell. Silver knives and cups were great luxuries in 1300; see. The act of 1816 restricted the use of silver tender to 40*s.* In 1855, 561,906 oz., 532,866 oz., in 1865, 724,856 oz., in 1870, oz.; in 1876, 483,422 oz.; in 1882, 372, in 1887, 320,345 oz.; in 1888, 321,425 1889, 306,149 oz.; in 1890, 291,724 oz. 274,100 oz.; 1896, 283,826 oz.; 1899, 191, 1900, 187,842 oz.; 1901, 173,724 oz. were from mines in Britain. Estimated annual tion of silver throughout the world, 14 value, 37,360,000*l.* (1892). Pattinson's proc obtaining silver from lead ore was introduced 1829. social reformers called ST. SIMONIANS, after their founder, Claude H. comte de St. Simon (born 1760), sprang up in France in 1819, and attracted considerable attention; the doctrines were advocated in England, particularly by Dr. Prati, who lectured upon them in London, 24 Jan. 1834. St. Simon died in 1825, and his follower, Père Enfantin, died 1 Sept. 1864.

SIMONY (trading in church offices) derives its name from Simon desiring to purchase the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts viii. 18, 19). It is forbidden in England by the canon law, and by statute 31 Eliz. c. 6, "for the avoiding of simony and corruption in presentations, collations, and donations of and to benefices," &c., 1588-9; and by statute of 12 Arne 2, stat. 12 (1713). The rev. James John Merest was convicted of simony, 26-29 Nov. 1869, and deprived.

The bishop of Peterborough (Dr. Magee) moved for a committee on the laws relating to simony: appointed . . . 21 April, 1874

SIMPLON, a mountain road, leading from Switzerland into Italy, constructed by Napoleon in 1801-7. It winds up passes, crosses cataracts, and passes by galleries through solid rock, and has eight principal bridges. The number of workmen employed at one time varied from 30,000 to 40,000. The new Simplon tunnel boring operations began 13 Nov. 1898; Herr Brandt, the chief engineer, died, Nov. 1899. The piercing of the tunnel completed 24 Feb. 1905. The new tunnel, which is 21,576 yards, or a little over 12½ miles in length, is the largest in the world. It is almost straight from end to end, from Brigue, in Switzerland, to Iselle, in Italy. The portion finished is one of the two tunnels; the second, partially made, will remain in its rough state until the earnings of the first amount to 2,000*fr.* per kilometre. The finished tunnel is egg-shaped, about 6 yards high and 4½ broad. The distance apart of the two tunnels is about 50 yards. The frontier line passes almost exactly in the middle of the tunnel. The average height of the mountain above the tunnel is 3,470 ft., the highest point, situated on the Italo-Swiss frontier, being 7,004 ft. above the level of the tunnel. The original cost of the tunnel was estimated at 2,800,000*fr.*, but in view of the enormous difficulties encountered, the price was raised to 3,140,000*fr.* The new tunnel shortens the journey between Calais and Milan most materially. The distance by the Mont Cenis Tunnel is 680 miles, and by the St. Gotthard Tunnel 665 miles, whereas by the Simplon Tunnel it is reduced to 585 miles.

SINAI, MOUNT. Here the ten commandments were promulgated, 1491 B.C. Exod. xx. After much investigation and discussion by many persons, Dr. Beke stated that he had discovered the true Sinai, Feb. 1874.

SINDE (N.W. India), was traversed by the Greeks under Alexander, about 326 B.C.; conquered by the Persian Mahometans in the 8th century A.D.; tributary to the Ghaznevide dynasty in the 11th century; conquered by Nadir Shah, 1739; reverted to the empire of Delhi after his death, 1747; after various changes of rulers, Sind was conquered by the English under Sir Charles Napier, see India and Mesopotamia, and annexed, March, 1843. SINKING FUND. First projected by sir Robert Walpole to redeem the debt to the bank of England; act passed in 1716. The act establishing the sinking fund of Mr. Pitt, devised by Dr. Price, was passed in March, 1786. A then estimated surplus of 900,000*l.* in the revenue was augmented by new taxes to make up the sum of 1,000,000*l.* which was to be invariably applied to the reduction of the national debt. The fallacy of the scheme was shown by Dr. Hamilton in 1813. In July, 1828, the sinking fund was limited to one-fourth of the actual surplus of revenue.

A new sinking fund was established by act passed 2 Aug. 1875. The annual charge of the national debt of the year ending 31 March, 1877, to be 27,700,000*l.*; subsequent years to be 28,000,000*l.* This act was temporarily suspended in 1897; again during the S. African war in 1900 and 1901; restored 1902.

SINOPE, an important Greek colony on the Euxine, after resisting several attacks was conquered by Mithridates IV., king of Pontus, and made his capital. It was the birth-place of Diogenes, the cynic philosopher. On 30 Nov. 1853, a Turkish fleet of seven frigates, three corvettes, and two smaller vessels, was attacked by a Russian fleet of six sail of the line, two sailing vessels, and three steamers, under admiral Nachimoff, and totally destroyed, except one vessel, which conveyed the tidings to Constantinople. Four thousand lives were lost by fire or drowning, and Osman Pacha, the Turkish admiral, died at Sebastopol of his wounds. In consequence of this act (considered treacherous) the Anglo-French fleet entered the Black Sea, 3 Jan. 1854.

SION COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL, situated on the site of a nunnery, which, having fallen to decay, was purchased by William Elsyng, a citizen and mercer, and converted into a college and hospital, called from his name Elsyng Spital. In 1340 he changed it to an Austin priory, which was afterwards granted by Henry VIII. to sir John Williams, master of the jewel-office, who, with sir Roland Hayward, inhabited it till its destruction by fire. In 1623, Dr. Thomas White having bequeathed 3000*l.* towards purchasing and building a college and almshouse on the ancient site, his executors erected the present college. It is held by two charters of incorporation, 6 Chas. I. 1630 and 16 Chas. II. 1664. It contains a valuable library (easily accessible to the public), and an almshouse for ten men and ten women. New buildings erected on the Thames Embankment; memorial stone laid 21 April, 1885; opened by the prince of Wales (now king Edward VII.), 15 Dec. 1886.

SIRENE, an instrument for determining the velocity of aerial vibrations corresponding to the different pitches of musical sounds, was invented by baron Cagniard de la Tour of Paris in 1819. The principle was shown in an apparatus exhibited by Robert Hooke before the Royal Society, 27 July, 1681.

SISTERHOODS in the English church were begun by Lydia Priscilla Sellon about 1846, in Devonshire; she died, Nov. 1876.

SISTERS OF CHARITY, an order for the service of the sick poor, was founded by Vincent de Paul, in 1634. Their establishment in London began in 1834.

SIX ACTS, a term given to certain acts, also named "Gagging Acts," 60 Geo. III. & 1 Geo. IV. cc. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 9, passed in 1819-1820 to suppress seditious meetings and publications.

SIX CLERKS, officers of the court of chancery, who were anciently clerici or clergy. They were to conform to the laws of celibacy, and forfeit their places if they married; but when the constitution of the court began to alter, a law was made to permit them to marry; statute 24 & 25 Hen. VIII. 1533. The six clerks continued for many years officers of the chancery court, and held their offices in Chancery-lane, London, where proceedings by bill and answer were transacted and filed, and certain patents issued. Law Dict. The six clerks were discontinued by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103, 1841.

SIXTEEN (seize), a large French political club, in the reigns of Henry III. and IV., sixteen members of which took charge of the sixteen quarters of Paris. They at first supported the catholic league, and attempted to overthrow Henry III. in 1587, but vacillating in their policy, and committing many crimes, their power was annihilated by Mayenne in 1591, and several of them were executed.

SIXTY CLUB (constitutional), instituted by A. E. Southall, limited to 60 members; president, the earl of Hardwicke; inaugural dinner, 13 Jan. 1898.

SLAVERY IN ENGLAND. Laws respecting the sale of slaves were made by Alfred. The English peasantry were commonly sold for slaves in Saxon and Norman times; children were sold in Bristol market like cattle for exportation. Many were sent to Ireland and to Scotland. Under the Normans the vassals (termed villeins, of and pertaining to the vill) were devisable as chattels during the feudal times.

Severe statutes were passed in the reign of Richard II., 1377 and 1385; the rebellion of Wat Tyler, 1381, arose partly out of the evils of serfdom.

A statute was enacted by Edward VI. that a runaway, or any one who lived idly for three days, should be brought before two justices of the peace, and marked V with a hot iron on the breast, and adjudged the slave of him who bought him for two years. He was to take the slave and give him bread, water, or small drink, and refuse meat, and cause him to work by beating, chaining, or otherwise; and, if within that space, he absented himself fourteen days, was to be marked on the forehead or cheek, by a hot iron, with an S, and be his master's slave for ever; second desertion was made felony. It was lawful to put a ring of iron round his neck, arm, or leg. A child might be put apprentice, and, on running away, become a slave to his master . . . 1547

Queen Elizabeth ordered her bondsmen in the western counties to be made free at easy rates . . . 1574
 Serfdom was finally extinguished in 1660, when tenures in capite, knights' service, &c., were abolished.

A slave named Somerset, brought to England, was, because of his ill state, turned adrift by his master. By the charity of Mr. Granville Sharp he was restored to health, when his master again claimed him. A suit was the consequence, which established, by decision of the Court of King's Bench, in favour of Somerset, that slavery could not exist in Great Britain, . . . 22 June, 1772

SLAVERY IN UNITED STATES. Before the war of independence all the states contained slaves.
 In 1783 the statement in the Massachusetts Bill of Rights, "All men are born free and equal," was declared in the supreme court at Boston to bar slave-holding in that state. Slaves in the United States in 1790, 697,897; in 1810, 1,191,364; in

SLAVE TRADE. The slave trade from Congo and Angola was begun by the Portuguese in 1481. From then the commerce in man brutalised a tract fifteen degrees on each side of the equator, and forty degrees wide, or of 4,000,000 of square miles; and men and women were bred for sale to the Christian nations, and war carried on to make prisoners for the Christian market. The Abbé Raynal computed (1777) that, at the time of his writing, 9,000,000 of slaves had been consumed by the Europeans. The slave-trade is now approaching extinction.

In 1768 the slaves taken from Africa amounted to 104,100. In 1786 the annual number was about 100,000.

In 1807 it was shown by documents, produced by government, that since 1792 upwards of 3,500,000 Africans had been torn from their country, and had either perished on the passage or been sold in the West Indies.

SLAVONIA or SCLAVONIA, a province of Austria, derives its name from the Slavians, a people who replaced the Avars in the early in the 9th century. In 864 Cyril and Methodius, Greek missionaries, preached here, at the Greek alphabet to the Slavonian language letters of which have since been a little different. The country, after having been held at first by Greeks, Turks, and Hungarians, and the sanguinary conflicts, was ceded finally to Austria in 1699, at the peace of Carlowitz. During the Slavonian provinces of Austria were at Moscow and St. Petersburg, May, 1848. Croatian-Slavonian diet, at Agram, was opened, May, 1867. It protested against incorporation with Hungary. The Slavonian family of languages includes Russian, Polish, Servian, Bohemian, Wendic, Slovak, and Polabic. For details, see Turkey, 1875-6.

SLUYS (Holland), near which Edward III. gained a signal naval victory over the French in 1340. The English had the wind of the enemy, and turned their backs, and began this sanguinary action. Hundred and thirty French ships were taken, and thousands of Frenchmen were killed, with two admirals ; the loss of the English was insignificant : 24 June, 1340.

SMALCALD (Hesse), TREATY OF, entered into between the elector of Brandenburg and the other princes of Germany in favour of Protestantism, 31 Dec. 1530; see Protestants. The emperor, apprehensive that the kings of France and England would join this league, signed the treaty of Passau, 31 July, 1532, allowing liberty of conscience.

SMALL HOLDINGS, See Agricultural.

SMALLPOX, variola (diminutive of varus, a pimple), a highly contagious disease, supposed to have been introduced into Europe from the East by the Saracens. Rhazes, an Arabian, described it accurately, about 900. From Europe it was carried to America, soon after its discovery, and raged there with great severity, destroying the Indians by thousands. In 1694, queen Mary of England died of smallpox, as did in 1711 and 1712 the emperor of Germany, the dauphin and dauphiness of France and their son, in 1730 the emperor of Russia, in 1741 the queen of Sweden, and in 1774 Louis XV. of France. It is stated that in the middle of the 18th century two millions perished by it in Russia. In London in 1723 one out of fourteen deaths was caused by smallpox, and in France in 1754 the rate was one in ten. For the attempts to alleviate this scourge, see Inoculation, introduced into England in 1722, and Vaccination, announced by Dr. Jenner in 1798. Smallpox Hospital, established 1746. Smallpox raged in parts of London, and thousands died, 1870-1; a temporary hospital was established at Hampstead (which see). Many parents were fined for opposing the vaccination of their children, 1870-98. In Sept. and Oct. 1862, a great many sheep died of smallpox in the West of England, till successful preventive measures were resorted to. Many cases and deaths, adults and children, in London, 1876-8; and in 1901-2. The Vaccination act of 1898 modified in many important particulars the law previously existing. It provides for domiciliary vaccination, the use of glycerinated calf lymph (supplied by the Local Government board), and exempts the conscientious objector from penalties, see Vaccination.

Smallpox prevalent in London, 88 deaths 1-7 May; 103 deaths 15-21 May; diminishing July, 1881.
Deaths, June, 1880-June, 1881, 1532, 637 not vaccinated; in N.E. London, May, deaths about 36 a week, June, 1884; deaths decreasing reported, 24 July; reappears, but subsides, Dec. 1884.
Severe epidemic of smallpox at Sheffield and neighbourhood, March, 1887; disappearing, April, 1888.
Severe at Manchester and Leicester, about 16 Jan. 1893; at Gloucester, 1896.
Epidemics in London, August et seq.: 1,743 cases, 257 deaths in 1901; severe in winter; 1,604 cases in hospitals, 11 March, total cases 9,659, deaths 1,663, 1901-2. Outbreak at Cambridge, July, Aug. 1903; Newcastle-on-Tyne, Aug.; isolation hospitals cost over 500,000*l.*; subsides, June et seq. 1902; prevalent in United States, Feb. 1902.
In London, 1903, 416 cases, 13 deaths.

See Vaccination.

SMALL TENEMENTS ACTS (59 Geo. III. c. 12, 1819); 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 99), provided for owners paying rates of houses instead of the occupiers. This was annulled by the new Reform act, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 7 (1867). Small Dwellings Acquisition act passed, 1899.

SMECTYMNUUS, the initials of certain non-conformist writers against episcopacy in the seventeenth century: Stephen Marshall, Edmund Calamy, Thomas Young, Matthew Newcomen, William Spurstow. They were answered by bishop Hall in his "Divine Right of Episcopacy," 1640.

SMITH'S CHARITY (FOR POOR KIN).

Alderman Henry Smith, by will dated 26 April, 1647, left 1000*l.* for relief of captives held by Turkish pirates, and 1000*l.* for his poor kinsmen.

The former object having become obsolete, an act was passed in 1772 to divert all the property to the poor kinsmen. In 1868 these were 412 in number. The value of the property was 17,000*l.* a year in 1886. The master of the rolls decided in Dec. 1887, that the funds should be applied to general charitable purposes. On appeal, the decision was in favour of the "poor Smiths," 12 Feb. 1878.

SMITHFIELD, WEST, in the heart of London, was once a favourite walk of the London citizens, outside the city walls. Sir W. Wallace was executed here, 23 Aug. 1305. On 15 June, 1381, Wat Tyler was met by Richard II. at this place, and was stabbed by Walworth the mayor. Many tournaments were also held here. In the reign of Mary (1553-8), many persons perished by fire; and Bartholomew Leggatt, an Arian, was burnt here, 18 March, 1612.—Bartholomew fair was held here till 1853.—This place is mentioned as the site of a cattle market as far back as 1150. The space devoted to this purpose was enlarged from about three acres to four and a half, and in 1834 to six and a quarter. The ancient regulations were called the "statutes of Smithfield." In one day there were sometimes assembled 4,000 beasts and 30,000 sheep. The annual amount of the sales was about 7,000,000*l.*

Sold here 226,132 beasts, 1,593,270 sheep and lambs, 26,356 calves, 33,531 pigs. (About 160 salesmen) 1846

The contracted space of the market, the slaughtering places adjoining, and many other nuisances, gave ground to much dissatisfaction, and after investigation, an act was passed appointing metropolitan market commissioners with powers to provide a new market, slaughtering places, &c.; and to close the market at Smithfield. 1 Aug. 1851
Smithfield was used as a cattle market for the last time on 11 June; and the new market in Copenhagen-fields was opened on 13 June (see Metropolitan Market) 1855

The Smithfield Club, to promote improvements in the breed of cattle, was established 17 Dec. 1798; first president, Francis, duke of Bedford; first secretary, Arthur Young. The members established an annual cattle show, held first in Dolphin-yard, Smithfield, Dec. 1799; next in Barbican, 1805; in Goswell-street, 1806; removed to Baker-street, 1839; and to the new Agricultural hall, Liverpool-road, Islington, 1862.

The show, suspended in Dec. 1866, on account of the cattle plague, was partially resumed Dec. 1867; wholly, Dec. 1868. Annually in December since.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, "for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," a handsome building at Washington, U.S., was founded in 1846, by means of a legacy of above 100,000*l.* bequeathed for the purpose to the United States government by James Smithson, illegitimate son of sir Hugh Smithson, who became duke of Northumberland in 1766. It includes the U.S.

national museum, the zoological park, and the astrophysical observatory, and publishes and freely distributes scientific memoirs and reports. The library was burnt on 25 Jan. 1865. Professor Joseph Henry, the first secretary, died, 13 May, 1878; succeeded by Mr. Spencer F. Baird, died, 19 Aug. 1887; succeeded by Professor S. P. Langley. The Hodgkins medal (first gold medal given by the institution for scientific work) awarded to prof. James Dewar for his discoveries in the liquefaction of air, April, 1899.

SMOKE NUISANCE. An act was passed in 1853 to abate this nuisance, proceeding from chimney shafts and steamers above London bridge. In 1856 another act, obtained for its further application to steamers below London bridge, and to potteries and glass-houses previously exempted, came into operation, 1 Jan. 1858; enactments have been made for all the kingdom.

Other committees formed at Glasgow and other places; many reports with recommendations issued (Times) 3 Aug. 1896.

Coal smoke abatement society formed through the exertions of sir W. B. Richmond, 1898; some prosecutions, Nov. 1899 et seq.

SMOLENSKO (Russia). The French in most sanguinary engagements here were three times repulsed, but ultimately succeeded in entering Smolensko, and found the city, which had been bombarded, burning and partly in ruins, 16, 17 Aug. 1812. Barclay de Tolly, the Russian commander-in-chief, incurred the displeasure of the emperor Alexander because he retreated after the battle, and Kutusoff succeeded to the command.

SMUGGLING. The customs duties, instituted to enable the king to afford protection to trade against pirates, afterwards became a branch of public revenue, and gave rise to much smuggling. The Smugglers' act was passed in 1736, and its severity was mitigated in 1781 and 1784. A revision of these statutes took place 1826 and 1835. Lieut. the hon. H. N. Shore's "Smuggling Days and Smuggling Ways," published 1892.

SMYRNA, see Seven Churches.

SNEEZING. The custom of saying "God bless you" to the sneezer originated, according to Strada, among the ancients, who, through an opinion of the danger attending it, after sneezing made a short prayer to the gods, as "Jupiter, help me." The custom is mentioned by Homer, the Jewish rabbis, and others, and is found in savages. Polydore Vergil says it too the time of the plague, 558, when the down dead sneezing, though seeming health.

SOCIETY ISLANDS, Pacific Ocean covered by De Quiros in 1606; re-discovered by Wallis, 1767, who gave Otaheite the name of King George's Island. Captain Cook visited them in 1769 and 1777, naming Society Islands in honour of the Royal Society they now belong to France. An insurrection suppressed, 3 Jan. 1897. Destructive cane and huge wave; about 1,000 natives and islands devastated, 13 Jan. 1903. See

SOCINIANS, persons who accept the doctrine of Faustus Socinus (died 1562), and his son Lælius (died 1604), Siemese noblemen. They held—1. That the Eternal Father was the one God, and that Jesus Christ was no otherwise God than by his superiority to all other creatures; 2. That Christ was not a mediator; 3. That hell was a punishment for a time, after which the soul and body were destroyed; 4. That it is unlawful for men to make war. Hook. The Socinians established a church at Rakow, in Poland, and made progress in Transylvania, 1563. They were expelled from Poland in 1658. The Rakovian catechism published in 1574; see Unitarians.

SOCIOLOGY, a term applied by Comte to the study of mankind in their social relations. It recommends the prevention of national wars by arbitration, and the settlement of the war of boards of conciliation. Schools or departments for the study of sociology are in operation in Edinburgh, Paris, and the United States.

Herbert Spencer published The Study of Sociology, 1872; Principles of Sociology, 1876-96, see Political Economy.

SOCOTRA (Dioscoridis insula), an island in the Indian ocean, belonging to the imam of Muscat, 120 miles E. of cape Guardafui, Eastern Africa. In the summer of 1878, it was said to have been given up to the British; formally annexed, Nov. 1886. The island explored by Mr. Theodore Bent and Mr. E. N. Bennett, British resident, reforms needed, slavery existing, Times, 13 March, 1897. Results of a scientific expedition under Mr. W. R. Ogilvie-Grant and others, 7 Dec. 1898—22 Feb. 1899, reported in Nature, 1 June, 1899.

SODIUM, a remarkable metal, first obtained in 1807 by sir Humphry Davy, from soda (which was formerly confounded with potash, but proved to be a distinct substance by Duhamel in 1736). This metal, like potassium, was obtained by the agency of the electric battery. In consequence of Deville's improved processes, sodium manufactured by Bell Brothers, of Newcastle, at 10s. a pound (1868). It is an important agent in the modern production of aluminium. Common salt (chloride of sodium) is a compound of sodium and chlorine. Mr. H. Y. Castner's (of New York) new process for the enlarged production of sodium, and through sodium of aluminium and magnesium, announced in June, 1887. His works were set up at Oldbury, near Birmingham; he died Oct. 1899. See Alkalies and Aluminium.

SODOM AND GOMORRAH (Palestine), with their inhabitants, were destroyed by fire from heaven, see Gen. xix.

SODOR, said to be derived from Sodor-eyes, or south isles (the Ebrides or Hebrides), in distinction from Orkneys, the north isles. The southern or western isles were made an episcopal diocese by Magnus, king of Norway, 1098, and joined to the isle of Man about 1113. See Man.

SOFAS, a West African tribe, see Sierra Leone and Senegal.

SOFIA, a manufacturing town in Bulgaria; founded by Justinian on the ruins of the ancient Sardica; became the capital of the new principality. A palace and other buildings were erected, Aug. 1881. It contains 30 mosques and 10 churches. Destructive thunderstorm with loss of life, 31 May, 1890; see Bulgaria. Population, 1900, 67,920.

SOFFARIDES DYNASTY reigned in Persia, 872-902.

SOFTAS, Mahometan students devoted to the Koran only. See Turkey, May, 1876.

SOHO BAZAAR AND THEATRE, see Bazaars and Theatres.

SOISSONS (France), capital of the Gallie Suessiones, was subdued by Julius Cæsar, 57 B.C. It was held by Syagrius, after his father Ægidius, till his defeat by Clovis, A.D. 486. Several councils have been held at Soissons (in 744, 1092, 1122). Its academy was established in 1674. During the Franco-Prussian war, Soissons, after three weeks' investment and four days' bombardment, surrendered to the Germans under the grand-duke of Mecklenburg, 16 Oct. 1870. 99 officers, 4,633 men, 128 guns, &c., were said to be taken.

SOLAR SYSTEM, nearly as now accepted, is said to have been taught by Pythagoras of Samos, about 529 B.C. He placed the sun in the centre, and all the planets moving in elliptical orbits round it—a doctrine superseded by the Ptolemaic system (which see). The system of Pythagoras, revived by Copernicus (1543), is called the Copernican system. Its truth was demonstrated by sir Isaac Newton in 1687. See Planets.

SOLDIERS' DAUGHTERS' HOME was established at Hampstead, near London, in Aug. 1857, by the surplus of the money collected by the central association in aid of the wives and families of soldiers in active service during the Crimean war, and opened by the prince consort, 18 June, 1858.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association founded 1885. The princess of Wales, afterwards queen Alexandra, appeals for funds, 31 Dec. 1900; warmly seconded by lord Roberts, 4 Jan. 1901; Mr. W. Astor, 5,000l., sir E. Cassel, 2,500l., the king of Portugal, 200l., Feb. 1901; the queen presides at a meeting in the queen's hall; col. (knt. 1902) Gilden reports 1,310,019l. had been received since Oct. 1899; the queen gave 5,000l. from her war fund, over 1,250,000l. received; 1,204,050l. expended to about 200,000 families, reported, annual meeting 26 June, 1903.

SOLEBAY or SOUTHWOLD BAY (Suffolk), where a fierce naval battle was fought between the fleets of England and France on one side, and the Dutch on the other, the former commanded by the duke of York, afterwards James II., 28 May, 1672. The English lost four ships, and the Dutch three; but the enemy fled, and were pursued to their coasts. The earl of Sandwich was blown up, and thousands were killed and wounded.

SOL-FA SYSTEM, see Music.

SOLFERINO (in Lombardy), the site of the chief struggle on the great battle of 24 June, 1859, between the allied French and Sardinian army commanded by their respective sovereigns, and the Austrians under general Hess; the emperor being present. The Austrians, after their defeat at Magenta, gradually retreated across the Mincio, and took up a position in the celebrated quadrilateral, and were expected there to await the attack. But the advance of Garibaldi on one side, and of prince Napoleon and the Tuscans on the other, induced them to recross the Mincio and take the offensive, on 23 June. The conflict began early on the 24th, and lasted fifteen hours. At first the Austrians had the advantage; but the successful attack of the French on Cavriana and Solferino changed the fortune of the day, and the Austrians, after desperate encounters, were compelled to retreat. The French attribute the victory to the skill and bravery of their emperor and the generals MacMahon and Niel; the Austrians, to the destruction of their reserve by the rifled cannon of their adversaries. The Sardinians maintained a fearful contest of fifteen hours at San Martino, it is said against double their number. Loss of the Austrians, 630 officers, and 10,311 soldiers; of the allies, 8 generals, 936 officers, and 17,305 soldiers killed and wounded. This battle closed the war; preliminaries of peace being signed at Villa Franca, 12 July. On 24 June, 1870, on the site of the battle, three ossuaries, containing the bones of thousands of the slain, were consecrated in the presence of representatives of Austria, France, and Italy. The Ossuary tower inaugurated, and a colossal statue of king Victor-Emmanuel, unveiled by king Humbert, 15 Oct. 1893.

SOLICITOR. see Attorney. By the Supreme Judicature Act, attorneys in future are to be styled solicitors; an act for regulating their examination was passed, 23 July, 1877; amended in 1894; another bill passed, 6 June, 1899. See Trials, Jan. 1901.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL, the legal officer next in rank, and deputy to the attorney-general, whom he frequently succeeds.

SOMBRERO (West Indies). On this desert isle, Robert Jeffery, a British man-of-war's man, was put ashore by his commander, the hon. captain W. Lake, for having tapped a barrel of beer when the ship was on short allowance. After sustaining life for eight days on a few limpets and rain-water, he was saved by an American vessel, 13 Dec. 1807; and returned to England. Sir Francis Burdett advocated his cause in parliament, and he received 600*l.* as a compensation from captain Lake, who was tried by a court-martial, and dismissed the service, 10 Feb. 1810.

and other buildings levelled in 1549, by the protector Somerset, whose residence fell to the crown after his execution, 22 Jan. 1552. Here resided at times queen Elizabeth, Anne of Denmark, and Catherine, queen of Charles II. Old Somerset-house, a mixture of Grecian and Gothic, was demolished in 1775, and the present edifice, from a design by sir William Chambers, was erected for public offices. The Royal Academy of Arts first assembled in the apartments given to the members by the king, 17 Jan. 1771. The Royal Society met here, 1780-1857; and apartments here were also held by the Society of Antiquaries and the Geological Society; all three now at Burlington House. Large suites of government buildings were erected in 1774. The Navy-office, Pipe-office, Victualling and other offices, were removed herein 1788, and various government departments since. The east wing forming the King's College (see King's College) was completed in 1833. By an act passed in 1854, the offices of the duchy of Cornwall were transferred to Pimlico.

SOMERSET THE BLACK, see Slavery in England.

SOMERS-TOWN, a populous district in St. Pancras parish, N. London: named after earl Somers, whose family acquired the property about 1695. The building began about 1786; and many French refugees settled in it. Much of the district has been occupied by the railway companies.

SOMMERVILLE COLLEGE, see Women.

SOMNATH GATES, the gates of an ancient Hindoo temple at Guzerat, which was destroyed by Mahmoud of Ghuznee in 1025. The priests wished to preserve the idol; but Mahmoud broke it to pieces and found it filled with diamonds, &c. He carried the gates to Ghuznee. When that city was taken by general Nott, 6 Sept. 1842, lord Ellenborough ordered the gates to be restored after an exile of 800 years, and issued a proclamation much censured at the time. The gates are made of sandal wood, and are described and figured in the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. xxx.

SOMOFORM, an anæsthetic composed of chloride, bromide, and iodide of ethyl, possesses the property of producing complete insensibility in 30 to 60 seconds. First used 1902.

SOMORROSTRO, see Spain, 1874.

SONATA (Italian, sound-piece), the highest form of instrumental music, consisting of three or four movements, intending to express diverse kinds of human feelings.

It was developed from the suite, varied dance music (Tartini, 1624, and others). The form fixed by Corelli (1653-1713), was adopted and modified by Scarlatti, the Bachs, Handel, Mozart, Haydn, and culminated in the master-pieces of Beethoven (1770-1827). Fine sonatas have been composed by Dussek, M. Clementi, Weber, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Wm. Sterndale Bennett, Chopin, Liszt, and Rubinstein.

SONDERBUND, see Switzerland, 1846.

SONNET, a poem in fourteen lines, with rhymes adjusted by rules, was invented, it is said, by Guido d'Arezzo, about 1024. The most celebrated sonnets are those by Petrarch (about 1327), Shakspeare (1609), Milton (about 1650), and Wordsworth (1820).

SONNITES, the orthodox Mahometans who now possess the Turkish empire; see Mahometanism.

SONS OF THE CLERGY, see Clergy.

SONTAY, see Tonquin, Dec. 1883.

SONTHALS, a tribe of Northern India, brought to Bengal about 1830, where they prospered, till, partly from the instigation of a fanatic, and partly from the exactions of money-lenders, they broke out into rebellion in July, 1855, and committed fearful outrages. They were quite subdued early in 1856, and many were removed to the newly-conquered province of Pegu.

SOOLOO, see Sulu.

SOPHIA, ST. (in Constantinople). The first church was dedicated to St. Sophia (holy wisdom) by Constantius II., 360; this having been destroyed, the second, the present edifice, was founded by Justinian, 531, and dedicated 537. Since the Mahometan conquest in 1453, it has been used as an imperial mosque. Its length is 260 feet, and its breadth 243 feet. Six of its pillars are of green jasper, from the temple of Diana, at Ephesus; and of porphyry, from the temple of the Sun, at Rome. Four minarets were added by Selim II., who reigned in 1566. The interior of the dome is beautifully ornamented with mosaic work.

SOPHIA, see Sofia.

SOPHISTS, teachers of youth in Athens, who were censured by Socrates, and consequently were instrumental in causing his judicial murder, 399 B.C. The controversy against them was carried on by Plato and his disciples.

SORBONNE, a society of ecclesiastics at Paris, founded by Robert de Sorbonne in 1252. The members lived in common, and devoted themselves to study and gratuitous teaching. They soon attained a European reputation as a faculty of theology, their judgment being frequently appealed to, from the 14th to the 17th centuries. The influence of the Sorbonne was declining when the society was broken up in 1789. The buildings are now devoted to education. The new Sorbonne buildings were opened on 5 Aug. 1889; this is the virtual reconstruction of the university of Paris. Gymnastic education introduced, 1892.

SORCERERS AND MAGICIANS. A law was enacted against their seductions, 33 Hen. VIII. 1541; and another statute equally severe was passed, 5 Eliz. 1563. The pretension to sorcery was made capital, 1 James I. 1603; see Witchcraft.

SOULAGES COLLECTION. A. M. Soulagès of Toulouse collected 790 works of Italian art and workmanship, &c. They were bought for 11,000*l.* by 73 English gentlemen, the view of first exhibiting them to the public afterwards selling them to the government, gradually purchased them between 1858 and 1871. They formed part of the "Art Treasures" at Manchester in 1857.

SOUND DUTIES. Till the year 1858 a merchant ship was allowed to pass the narrow channel separating Zealand from Sweden) without clearing at Elsinore and paying toll. These duties had their origin in an agreement between the king of Denmark and the Hanse towns (1348), by which the former undertook to maintain lighthouses, &c., along the Cattegat, and the latter to pay duty for the same. The first treaty with England in relation to this was in 1450; other countries followed. In 1855 the United States determined to pay the dues no more; and in the same year the Danish government proposed that these dues should be capitalised; which was eventually agreed to, the sum being 30,476,325 rix-dollars. In Aug. 1857, the British government paid 10,126,855 rix-dollars (1,125,206*l.*) to the Danes as their proportion.—The passage of the Sound was effected, in defiance of strong fortresses, by sir Hyde Parker and lord Nelson, 31 March, 1801; see Baltic Expedition.

SOUNDINGS AT SEA. Captain Ross, of H.M.S. Edipus, in 1840, took extraordinary soundings at sea. In the latitude 33° S. and longitude 9° W. about 300 miles from the Cape of Good Hope, 2,266 fathoms were sounded; the weight employed amounted to 450 lbs. On 13 July, 1857, lieutenant Joseph Dayman, in the North Atlantic Ocean, lat. 51° 9' N., long. 40° 2' W., in sounding, found a bottom at 2,424 fathoms. The deepest sounding known (3,875 faths.) was taken by the Challenger, capt. Nares, 24 March, 1873, in the North Atlantic, north of St. Thomas's. See Deep Sea Soundings.

SOUTH AFRICA CONFEDERATION to comprise the three British colonies—Cape Town, Natal, and West Griqualand (1873)—and the two Dutch republics, Orange River free state, and the South Africa or Transvaal republic (1852). The formation was proposed by the earl of Carnarvon, colonial secretary, in a despatch to sir Henry Barkly, governor of Cape Town, 4 May, 1875, and advocated by the historian, J. A. Froude, on a visit. It was much opposed at the Cape. See Cape.

Report of the Royal Commission.—The Commission reports adversely on the military preparations; the deficiencies in stores and material disclosing "a condition of affairs justly described by lord Lansdowne in his minute of 21 May, 1900, as 'full of peril to the empire,' inasmuch as 'we were not sufficiently prepared even for the equipment of the comparatively small force which we had always contemplated might be employed beyond the limits of this country in the initial stages of a campaign.'" Various deficiencies are mentioned, as the fact that out of 151,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition (Mark IV.) in stock at the beginning of the war 65,000,000 rounds were unavailable; at the end of 1899 it was discovered that 200,000 reserve rifles in stock, 25,000 of which had been issued, were so badly sighted as to shoot 18 in. to the left at a range of 500 yds.; none of the complete kits of clothing in stock for 82,000 reservists could be used, except greatcoats, because they were red and blue clothing unsuitable for Africa or indeed for most countries where the British army is likely to see fighting. The various deficiencies are enumerated in detail; complaints of a similar nature were made as to swords, ammunition pouches, and entrenching implements, the supply of officers and men, and their training, the equipment of the army medical personnel and establishment; the lack before the war of cohesion and co-ordinated action among the different departments of the war office, and the want at the war office of a supreme board of control. The weakness of the staff of the intelligence division as it stood in 1899 is criticised, and the opinion expressed, "that it was undermanned for the work of preparation for a great war will scarcely be denied." Attention is directed to the position of the commander-in-chief. While not dissenting from the judgment delivered by the court of inquiry acquitting gen. Trueman from personal blame, and recognising, as urged by that court, that "the demands were of unprecedented magnitude," the commission says: "It is incredible that anyone who gave any thought to the matter could imagine that in the event of any war which necessitated the mobilisation of two army corps—and that, we have been persistently told, was the standard of preparation—it could have been possible for the inspector-general of remounts to continue to buy 'in a leisurely way,' through accustomed channels, from recognised dealers; and thus supply not only the first demand wastages of war. It is unnecessary to point that in the matter of remounts for war were inadequate, or the state of things must not occur as report dealing with the supply of number of men of all ranks employed beginning to the end of the war, off mated at 448,435; of these 256,340 to the regular army, 109,048 came from Kingdom as militia, volunteers or yeomanry, 30,633 came from the colonies, and 52,414 were raised in shows that the supply of men, 70,000 phase of the war, was quite inadequate; the evidence taken from officers showed a consensus of opinion monie, including in that term the courage, endurance, discipline, and c under adverse circumstances, left nothing to be desired." The personal devotion of the medical officers, the engineers and army service corp efficiency of the sea transport service mended. The commission acquitted t of the charge of throwing impeding way of expenditure urgently require war office. Report issued . . .

SOUTH AUSTRALIA was visited by capt. Sturt in 1830, and explored shortly after by capt. Parker and Mr. Kent, the former of whom was killed by the natives. The boundaries of the province were fixed by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 95 (1834); and it was occupied 25 Dec. 1836, by capt. Hindmarsh, the first governor. It was colonised according to Mr. E. Gibbon Wakefield's scheme, which was carried out by the South Australian Colonisation Association. The colony for several years underwent severe trials through the great influx of emigrants, land-jobbing, building speculations, &c., which produced almost universal bankruptcy in 1839. In five years after, by the energy and liberality of Sir George Grey, the colonists had overcome their difficulties, and the prosperity of the colony appeared fully established. In 1842 the highly productive Burra Burra copper mines were discovered, and large fortunes were suddenly realised; but in 1851 the discovery of gold in New South Wales and Victoria almost paralysed this province by drawing off a large part of the labouring population. Very little gold was found in South Australia; but a reaction took place in favour of the copper mines and agriculture, &c. Before the discovery of gold, little trade existed between Adelaide (the capital of South Australia, pop. 1904, 170,720) and Melbourne; but in 1852 gold was transmitted from the latter to the former to the amount of 2,215,167*l.* principally for breadstuffs, farm produce, &c. SOUTHERN CONTINENT. The Southern Ocean was first traversed by Magellan in 1520; and explored by Wallis and Carteret in 1766; and by Cook in 1773 and 1774. Of the southern continent little more is known than that it is ice-bound, and contains active volcanoes. It was discovered in the first instance by capt. John Biscoe, on 27 Feb. 1831, in lat. 65° 57' S., long. 47° 20' E., extending east and west 200 miles,—this he named Enderby Land, after the gentleman who had equipped him for the voyage. Capt. Biscoe also discovered Graham's Land on 15 Feb. 1832, situated in lat. 67° 1' S., long. 71° 48' W. The Messrs. Enderby equipped three other expeditions in search of the southern continent, the last (in connection with some other gentlemen) in 1838, when capt. Balleny had command, who, on 9 Feb. 1839, discovered the Balleny Islands, in lat. 67° S., long. 165° E., and in March, 1839, Sabrina Land, in lat. 65° 10' S., long. 118° 30' E. In 1840, a French expedition, under the command of admiral D'Urville, and an American expedition, under the command of commodore Wilkes, greatly added to our knowledge in respect to the existence of a southern continent, and this was again increased by the expedition which sailed from England in 1839, under the command of capt. sir James Clark Ross, who discovered Victoria Land in 1841, and subsequently penetrated as far south as 78° 11'. SOUTHWARK (S. London) was governed by its own bailiffs till 1327. The city, however, found great inconvenience from the number of malefactors who escaped thither, in order to be out of the reach and cognizance of the city magistrates; and a grant was made of Southwark to the city of London by the crown, for a small annuity. In Edward VI.'s reign it was formed into a city ward, and was named Bridge Ward Without, 1550.—Southwark bridge was designed by John Rennie, and built by a company, 1815-19, at an expense of 800,000*l.* It consists of three great cast-iron arches, resting on massive stone piers and abutments; the distance between the abutments is 708 feet; the centre arch is 240 feet span, the two others 210 feet each; and the total weight of iron 5308 tons. The bridge was freed from toll on 8 Nov. 1864, the company receiving a compensation from the city. An act for the payment of dividends to shareholders was passed in 1872.—Southwark park was opened, 19 June, 1869. The Roman Catholic diocese of Southwark formed, 1840. By the Seats act (1885), Southwark sends three members to parliament. Municipal borough, by London Government act, 1899 (10 aldermen, 60 councillors).

Bishops suffragan: Woolwich, John Cox Locke; Kingston-on-Thames, Cecil Hooke, consecrated, 28 Oct. "

SOUTHWELL, Nottinghamshire, an ancient Saxon town, where a church was founded by Paulinus, archbishop of York, 627; made collegiate before the conquest, refounded by Henry VIII., and made a bishopric by Henry VIII., 1541; dissolved by Edward VI. Collegiate church restored by Elizabeth, 1586. Near here Charles I. surrendered himself to the Scotch army in 1646. The Bishopric act, authorising the establishment of a see at Southwell, was passed, 16 Aug. 1878. Constituted (to consist of the counties of Derby and Nottingham), 2 Feb. 1884. The restored minster re-opened as cathedral, 2 Feb. 1888.

First bishop, George Ridding, consecrated 1 May, 1884; resigned 20 July, 1904; died 30 Aug. 1904.

SOUTHWOLD, see Solebay.

SOVEREIGN, an ancient and modern British gold coin. In 1489 22½ pieces, in value 20*s.*, "to be called the sovereign," were ordered to be coined out of a pound of gold. Ruding. In 1542 sovereigns were coined in value 20*s.*, which afterwards, in 1550 and 1552 (4 & 6 Ed. VI.), passed for 2*s.* and 3*s.* "Sovereigns" of the new coinage were directed to pass for 20*s.* 1 July, and half-sovereigns for 10*s.* 10 Oct. 1817; see Coin and Gold. By the Coinage act, 1870, the weight of the sovereign is fixed at 123.27447 grains troy; specific gravity, 17.57; (916.07, gold being 1000); half-sovereigns, 61.63723 grains. The dragon sovereigns were re-issued in 1871.

SPA-FIELDS (N. London). Here about 30,000 persons assembled to vote an address from the distressed manufacturers to the prince regent, 15 Nov. 1816. A second meeting, 2 Dec. following, terminated in an alarming riot; the shops of several gunsmiths were attacked for arms by the rioters; and in the shop of Mr. Beckwith, on Snowhill, Mr. Platt was wounded, and much injury was done before the tumult was suppressed. For this riot, Cashman, a seaman, was hanged, 12 March, 1817. Watson, the ringleader, escaped to America.

Spa-fields Chapel, a dome building, originally a place of entertainment named the Pantheon, erected, 1770, was after several changes purchased by the countess of Huntingdon and used as a place of worship for her "connection" (see Whitefieldites). This chapel was pulled down in . . . 1887

Mr. Richa Hutton, an able scholar, was editor from 40 years, he died 9 Sept. 1897.

SPECTRUM, the term given to the i the sun or any other luminous body form wall or screen, by a beam of light received through a small hole or slit, and refracted by a prism. The colours thus produced are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. The phenomena were first explained by Newton, whose "Optics" was published in 1704. Several of these colours are considered to be compounds of three primary ones: by Mayer (1775), red, yellow, and blue;—by Dr. Thos. Young (1801), red, green, and violet;—by Prof. Clerk Maxwell (1860), red, green, and blue. As the colour of a flame varies according to the substance producing it or introduced into it, so the spectrum varies. This led to the invention of a method of chemical analysis by professors Bunsen and Kirchhoff (1860), by which they discovered two new metals, and drew conclusions as to the nature of the atmosphere of the sun and stars, and of the light of the nebulae, by comparing the spectrum with that produced by flames into which iron, sodium, and other substances have been introduced. For the invisible rays of the spectrum, see Calorescence, Fluorescence, Bolometer, and Röntgen Rays.

Fraunhofer's Lines. In 1802 Dr. Wollaston observed several dark lines in the solar spectrum; in 1815 Joseph Fraunhofer not only observed them, but constructed a map of them, giving 550 lines or dark bands. By the researches of Brewster and others the number observed is now above 2000.

Mr. Fox Talbot observed the orange line of strontium in the spectrum in 1826; and sir David Brewster observed other lines, 1833-42-3. In 1862-3 Mr. William Huggins analysed the light of the fixed stars and of the nebulae; and in 1865 Dr. Bence Jones, by means of spectrum analyses, detected the presence of minute quantities of metals in the living body, introduced only a few minutes previously.

A spectroscopic society in Italy published a journal early in 1872.

H. Schellen's "Spectralanalyse" published 1870; new edition 1883.

SPECULATIVE SOCIETY, Edinburgh (which had included among its members David Hume), celebrated its hundredth anniversary on 14 Oct. 1863; see Philosophy.

"SPELLING-BEES," meetings to test the proficiency in correct spelling; introduced into London from the United States of America; the first at Holloway, London, N., in the autumn of 1875. Geographical, musical, and other bees followed, and were popular for a time.

SPELLING REFORM. A resolution in favour of it was adopted by the London School Board, in 1877; a conference and public meeting were held at the Society of Arts, 29 May, 1877.

A Spelling Reform Association formed; Dr. Temple, bishop of Exeter (archbp. of Canterbury), Robert Lowe, E. B. Tylor, and Max Müller were among the members, 1879; another association formed in the United States; professor F. A. March, president.

Mr. T. B. Sprague's article on a Marriage and Mortality Table, in the Journal of the Institute of Actuaries, is printed according to phonetic spelling July, 1879.

SPHERES. The celestial and terrestrial spheres and sun-dials are said to have been invented by Anaximander, 552 B.C.; and the armillary sphere by Eratosthenes, about 225 B.C. The planetarium was constructed by Archimedes before 212 B.C. Pythagoras maintained that the motions of the twelve spheres must produce delightful sounds, inaudible to mortals, which he called the music of the spheres.

SPHYGMOGRAPH (from the Greek, sphygmos, a pulsation), an instrument for investigating disease, by showing the state of the pulse, invented by M. E. J. Marey, of Paris, and described by him in 1863.

SPICES. Imported into Great Britain: cinnamon and other spices, exclusive of pepper; 1846, 1,910,584 lbs.; 1856, 4,154,167 lbs.; 1867, 12,831,953 lbs.; 1877, 17,186,572 lbs.; 1879, 19,340,817 lbs.; 1883, 24,344,895 lbs.; 1887, 23,783,960 lbs.; 1890, 23,508,493 lbs.; 1902, 27,000,290 lbs.; 1904, 20,191,465 lbs.

SPICHEREN, see Saarbruck.

SPINET, a clavichord or keyed instrument, used in the 17th century, a modification of the virginals, which see. Bull, Gibbons, Purcell, and especially Domenico Scarlatti composed for this instrument.

SPINNING was ascribed by the ancients to Minerva, the goddess of wisdom. Arcas, king of Arcadia, taught his subjects the art about 1500 B.C. Tradition reports that Lucretia with her maids was found spinning, when her husband Collatinus paid a visit to her from the camp, that the wife of Tarquin was an excellent spinner, and that a garment made by her, worn by Servius Tullius, was preserved in the temple of Fortune. Till 1767, the spinning of cotton was performed by the hand spinning-wheel, when Hargreaves, an ingenious mechanic, near Blackburn, made a spinning jenny, with eight spindles, and also erected the first carding machine, with cylinders. Arkwright's machine for spinning by water was an extension of the principle of Hargreaves; but he also applied a large and small roller to expand the thread, for which he took out a patent in 1769. At first he worked his machinery by horses; but in 1771 he built a mill on the stream of the Derwent, at Cromford. In 1774-9, Crompton invented the mule (which see).

SPINTHARISCOPE, a contrivance for showing the scintillations of radium nitrate, exhibited at Royal Society soirée, May 15, 1903.

SPIRES (in Bavaria). The emperors held many diets at Spire since 1309, and it was the seat of the imperial chamber till 1689, when the city was burned by the French, and not rebuilt till after the peace of Ryswick, in 1697. The diet to condemn the reformers was held at Spire, called there by the emperor Charles V. 1529; see Protestants.

SPIRIT-LEVEL. The invention is ascribed to J. Melchisedec Thvenot, who died 1692.

SPIRIT-MOTOR. Mr. Yarrow explained to the Institute of Naval Architects his method of employing vaporised spirit instead of steam in the propulsion of steam launches, thus dispensing with the use of a boiler, &c., March, 1888. Petroleum is used as fuel in some railway locomotives, and petrol as the generating power for driving motor-cars.

SPIRITS, see Distillation. In all nations spirituous liquors have been considered as a proper subject of heavy taxation for the support of the state; the duty imposed on spirits in 1746 led to much smuggling, which see; see Alcohol, Brandy, Rum, Methylated Spirits, Whisky, &c.

In 1840 England made about ten millions of gallons of spirits, Scotland about seven millions of gallons, and Ireland about nine millions of gallons.

In 1851 the number of gallons on which duty was paid for home consumption was 23,976,596. The total amount paid was 6,017,218*l.*, of which 3,758,186*l.* were paid by England, 1,252,297*l.* by Scotland, and 1,006,735*l.* by Ireland.

In 1858, 9,195,154*l.* were paid as duty on 27,370,934 gallons.

In 1859, 27,657,721 gallons of spirits were distilled in the United Kingdom. The uniform duty of 8*s.* per gallon was paid on 24,254,403 gallons for home consumption, producing 9,701,764*l.* In the year 1865-6 the tax produced about 13,955,000*l.*, being the largest sum then ever raised by indirect taxation. In 1871-2, 16,798,344*l.* (customs and excise); in 1875-6, 21,295,663*l.*; in 1877-8, 20,675,928*l.*; in 1883-4, 18,435,957*l.*; in 1887-8, 17,312,550*l.*; in 1888-9, 17,175,797*l.*; in 1889-90, 18,531,277*l.*; in 1890-1, 19,263,541*l.*

In 1861 an act was passed repealing wholly or in part 26 previous acts, and embodying all regulations for the guidance of manufacturers and dealers in spirits.

In 1870, about 89,000,000*l.* spent in spirits; 58,000,000*l.* by working classes.

Proof spirits distilled in the United Kingdom in 1873, 36,479,648 gallons (England, 9,531,058; Scotland, 16,421,701; Ireland, 10,526,889); in 1874, 35,352,232 gallons; duty paid, 10*s.* a gallon; in 1904-5, England, 12,156,652 gallons; Scotland, 28,185,255 gallons; Ireland, 11,798,155 gallons.

Exported from the United Kingdom: 1876, 1,308,456 gallons; 1880, 2,060,193; 1885, 2,760,041; 1889, 3,431,320; 1890, 3,658,658; 1893, 3,407,282; 1896, 4,678,862; 1900, 5,721,434; 1904-5, 6,954,037.

Additional duty of 6*d.* per gallon on spirits imposed, 17 April, 1890; addition of 6*d.*, 31 July, 1894, increasing the duty to 12*s.* per gallon.

Eight distilleries at work in England, 152 in Scotland, and 28 in Ireland, in the year ended 30 Sept. 1904.

SPIRITS ACT (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), passed 26 Aug. 1880, consolidated and amended the law relating to the manufacture and sale of spirits.

SPIRITUAL COMBATANTS (Dukhobortsy). A Russian communistic religious sect formed by a quaker missionary near the end of the last century, now settled in the Caucasus, about 20,000 members. Its leading tenet, the refusal of all military service, so important in a country like Russia, has led to its repression and severe punishment. The sect also opposes legal tribunals, oaths, &c. Peter Veriguin, their energetic leader, was exiled to Siberia, 1894-5; count Leo Tolstoi gave a description of the sect and its sufferings, Times, 23 Oct. 1895. Continued prosecution of the sect, Oct. 1896, 1,129 exiles land at Larnaka, Cyprus, under British protection, 30 Aug. 1898; the climate being unsuitable about 7,000 leave for Manitoba, Canada, 1898-9; count Tolstoi gives 5,000 dols. for their relief, Dec. 1899; deeming it wrong to keep animals in servitude, they turn their horses, cows, &c., adrift, Aug. 1902; their petition for land to live in under no authority than that of God, refused by the British Columbian Government, 23 Oct. 1902; they leave their homes to christianize the world, about 28 Oct.; great suffering and distress; their march stopped at Minnedosa by mounted police; all sent back by special trains to their homes, 9-12 Nov. 1902.

Large number of fanatical Dukhobors, settled in the Saskatoon district, turned their cattle and horses loose, and began a fresh march to m reported 27 Sept. 1904. They were the police.

SPITZER COLLECTION, formed by Frederick Spitzer, a Jew, consisted chiefly of articles of virtu connected with the Middle Ages and Renaissance with some antiques but no paintings. It included metal work, faience, and majolica ware, arms and jewellery. He built an hotel at Paris to receive them, and died in 1890, aged about 75. The collection, valued at about 500,000*l.*, was sold for about 400,000*l.*, 17 April—17 June, 1893.

SPONGE, the name applied to a class of animals, porifera, intermediate between the protozoa and coelenterata. Sponges are in general composed of an internal supporting framework of horny fibres interlaced with calcareous or siliceous spires (spicula) covered with a soft gelatinous substance, called sarcode. Their food consists chiefly of microscopic organisms contained in the water which constantly circulates through the minute pores of the sponge, and finds its outlet by the larger apical openings. Sponges exist in a variety of forms; one is the beautiful Venus's flower-basket. Several species of sponges are used for economic purposes; two species are chiefly brought from the Levant, and one of a coarser kind from the W. Indies and Florida. They are also artificially cultivated in the Adriatic by planting cuttings in waters favourable to their growth. A considerable trade is carried on in sponges, about 600 boats and some 5,000 men being employed in the Levant, and a similar number in the W. Indian trade, to the annual value respectively of 100,000*l.* and 70,000*l.*

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION of the human body, declared by most chemists to be impossible, although some cases have been recorded. The case of the countess of Görnitz, 1847, disproved by confession of her murderer, March, 1850.

SPONTANEOUS GENERATION. The origin of the germs of infusorial animalcules developed during putrefaction, &c., has been warmly debated by naturalists. Spallanzani (about 1766), and especially M. Pasteur and others, assert that these germs are really endowed with organic life existing in the atmosphere. Needham (about 1747), and especially M. Pouchet and his friends in our day, assert that these germs are spontaneously formed out of organic molecules.—Pouchet's "Hétérogénie" appeared in 1859. Bastian's "Beginnings of Life," 1872. The researches of professor Tyndall, supporting Pasteur, and opposing Bastian, were published 1876-8. The late professor Huxley, in his presidential address to the British Association at Liverpool, 1870, affirmed that the doctrine of biogenesis (that life proceeds only from life) "was victorious all along the line" (see his article in Nineteenth Century, Jan. 1878).

"Spontaneous generation" (also termed generatio aquivoca, epigenesis, and abiogenesis) has been still further disproved by the laborious microscopic investigations of Dr. W. H. Dallinger, 1875-8. He found germs to stand a much greater heat than perfect organisms.

Experiments, carried out by Mr. J. Butler Burke in the Cavendish laboratory, Cambridge, on the action of radium chloride and radium bromide upon a gelatin medium commonly used for bacterial cultures, result in the production of microscopic growths, which, in Mr. Burke's opinion, after careful study, were highly organised bodies; to these he applied the name of radiobes (which see), announced in Nature, May, 1905.

M. Raphael Dubois, in a lecture at Lyons university, 4 Nov. 1904, referring to experiments he had made of a similar kind, calls the growths ebes. M. Dubois states (1905) that the same results are obtainable by non-radiiferous chloride of barium. Experiments with pure barium salts on a gelatin medium by Prof. Rudge, see Nature, Oct. and Nov. 1905.

SPORTS. The first "Book of Sports," under the title of "The King's Majestie's Declaration to his Subjects concerning Lawful Sports to be used" on Sundays after evening prayers, was published by king James I. 24 May, 1618. The second "Book of Sports," with a ratification by his majesty Charles I., is dated 18 Oct. 1633. On the publication of the first "Book of Sports," there arose a long and violent controversy among English divines on certain points; see Sabbatarians, Sunday, &c. The book was ordered to be burnt by the hangman, and the sports were suppressed by the parliament. The "Sporting League" established to maintain British sports in opposition to the Anti-Gambling league, first meeting in London, earl of Coventry in the chair, 19 Dec. 1894. SPRINGFIELD (Missouri), near which was fought the desperate battle of Wilson's Creek, in which the federals had the advantage over the confederates, but lost their brave general, Nathaniel Lyon, 10 Aug. 1861.

SPURS. Anciently the difference between the knight and esquire was that the knight wore gilt spurs (equus auratus), and the esquire silver ones. Two sorts of spurs seem to have been in use at the time of the Conquest, one called a pryck, having only a single point, the other a number of points of considerable size. Spurs nearly of the present kind came into use about 1400; see Plating.

SPURS, BATTLE OF. Henry VIII. of England, the emperor Maximilian, and the Swiss, in 1513, entered into an offensive alliance against France. Henry VIII. landed at Calais in the month of July, and soon formed an army of 30,000 men. He was joined by the emperor with a good corps of horse and some foot, the emperor as a mercenary to the king of England, who allowed him a hundred ducats a day for his table! They invested Teroüenne with an army of 50,000 men; and the duc de Longueville, marching to its relief, was signally defeated on the 16th of August, at Guinegate. This battle was popularly called the battle of Spurs, because the French used their spurs more than their swords. The name was really obtained from the village of Spurs near which it was fought. Lodge. The English king laid siege to Tournay, which submitted in a few days. Hénault. See Courtrai, for another "battle of spurs."

STABAT MATER, a Latin hymn, by Jacopone, 14th century, sung during Passion week in Catholic churches. Rossini's music to this hymn (1842) is often performed.

STADE DUES. At a castle near the town of Stade, in Hanover, certain dues on goods were charged by the Hanoverian government. The British government settled these dues in 1844. They were resisted by the Americans in 1855, and were abolished in June, 1861. Great Britain paid 160,000*l.* as her share of the compensation (3,000,000*l.*).

STAFFA, a small uninhabited island in the Hebrides, 6 miles distant from Iona, celebrated for its caves and the columnar basalt cliffs. Here is the famous Fingal's Cave, the sides of which are formed of basaltic columns, while from the roof, 66 feet in height, hang clusters of short columns, whitened with calcareous stalactite. The cave is 227 ft. in length and 42 ft. wide at the entrance.

STAFF COLLEGE (Sandhurst), for providing an education to qualify military officers for the duties of the staff. The foundation stone was laid by the duke of Cambridge on 14 Dec. 1859.

STAFFORD, Staffordshire, a municipal and parliamentary borough, returning, since 1885, one M.P. A castle was erected here by Ethelreda, countess of Mercia, 913; taken by the parliamentarian forces in 1643, it was demolished; a new castle, not completed, built by sir G. Jerningham, 1810-15. A charter was granted by king John, 1207, and the grammar-school was rebuilt and endowed by Edward VI., 1550. The two old churches of St. Mary and St. Chad are of interest. Isaac Walton was baptised in the former. Principal industries are boot and shoe manufacture and brewing. Population, 1881, 19,977; 1891, 20,270; 1901, 20,894. Fire at the workhouse infirmary, 7 deaths, 16 May, 1901.

STAGE COACHES, so called from the stages or inns at which the coaches stopped to refresh and change horses. Bailey. The stage-coach duty act passed in 1785. These coaches were made subject to salutary provisions for the safety of passengers, in 1810; to mileage duties, 1815. The acts were consolidated in 1832, and amended in 1833 and 1842. See Mail Coaches, &c.

STAGYRITE, properly Stagirite, see Aristotelian.

STAMFORD BRIDGE (York). In 1066 Tostig, brother of Harold II., rebelled against his brother, and joined the invading army of Harold Hardrada, king of Norway. They defeated the northern earls and took York, but were defeated at Stamford-bridge by Harold, 25 Sept., and were both slain. The loss by this victory no doubt led to his defeat at Hastings, 14 Oct. following. The claim of Mr. William Grey for the earldom of Stamford, was granted by the house of Lords, 3 May, 1892.

STAMP-DUTIES. By 22 & 23 Charles II. (1670-1) duties were imposed on certain legal documents. In 1694 a duty was imposed upon paper, vellum, and parchment. The stamp-duty on newspapers was commenced in 1711, and every year added to the list of articles upon which it was made payable.

Stamp act, which ordered a stamp to be affixed to all legal documents, in the colonies, and to assist the revenue of Great Britain, was passed 22 March, 1765. It excited great opposition in N. America, with rioting, and consequently repealed, 21 Feb. 1766. The resistance of the colonists to taxation, without representation, led to the American war, 1775-4.

Stamp duties in Ireland commenced 1801. Stamps on notes and bills of exchange in 1810. The stamp-duties produced in England, in 1855, a revenue of 3,126,535*l.*

Many alterations made in 1853 and 1857. In 1855, the stamp-duty on newspapers as such totally abolished; the stamp on them being left forth for postal purposes.

In July and Aug. 1854, 19,115,000 newspapers were issued; in the same months, 1855, 6,870,000.

Drafts on bankers to be stamped. Additional stamp duties were enacted in 1855, leases, bills of exchange, dock warrants, &c. from registers of births, &c.; in 1851 (on licences to house-agents, &c.).

Stamp-duties reduced in 1864, 1865.

All fees payable in the superior courts of law, 31 Dec. 1865, are to be collected by stamps, act passed in June, 1865. Also in Public Office.

By the Stamp acts, 10 Aug. 1870, newspapers were abolished after.

New stamp duties imposed; came into effect 1d. receipt and postage stamps used for each after.

Stamp-duties imposed on foreign or colonial certificates, bonds, &c., by Customs act, 1854. A new consolidating act relating to stamps passed 21 July, 1854.

Certain exemptions made by the Finance Act, 1854.

The changes are noticed in the Finance act annually.

STANDARD for gold and silver is fixed by law, 1300. Standard gold is 2 of 24 of pure gold, the other two parts being silver or copper. The standard 11 oz. 2 dwts. of fine silver alloyed with copper, or 37 parts out of 40 pure silver, parts copper. In 1300 these 12 oz. of gold were coined into 20 shillings; in 1412 they were into 30 shillings; and in 1527 into 45 shillings. Henry VIII. coined 6 oz. of silver alloy into 48 shillings; and the next year 4 oz. of silver and 8 oz. of alloy into the Elizabeth, in 1560, restored the old standard 60 shillings; and in 1601 in 62 shillings average proportions of silver to gold at mint are 15½ to 1. STANFORD COURT, Worcestershire, the ancient mansion of sir Francis Winnington, burnt 5-7 Dec. 1882; valuable portraits, books, MSS. &c., destroyed.

STANHOPE ADMINISTRATION was formed by James (afterwards earl) Stanhope and the earl of Sunderland, 15 April, 1717. Stanhope was premier and chancellor of the exchequer; lord (afterwards earl) Cowper, lord chancellor; earl of Sunderland and Joseph Addison, secretaries of state, &c. In March, 1718, Addison resigned, and the earl of Sunderland became premier.

STANNARY COURTS of Devon and Corn- wall for the administration of justice among the tin miners, whose privileges were confirmed by 33 Edw. I. 1305. They were regulated by parlia- ment in 1641, and at many times since. A "Stan- neries act" was passed in 1869; another act in 1887. The Stannaries court (abolition) act, passed 14 Aug. 1896, came into force 1 Jan. 1897.

STAPLE (literally that which is fixed). The chief English staple commodities which were traded in by privileged merchants, and on which customs were levied, were wool, skins, leather, tin, lead and sometimes cloth, butter, and cheese; certain towns were appointed for the collection of the duties; statutes relating to the staple were passed by Edward III., Richard II., and Henry VI. Edward III.'s "ordinacio stapularum" (ordinance of the staple) was enacted in 1353.

STARCH is a sediment produced at the bottom of vessels wherein wheat has been steeped in water: it is soft and friable, easily broken into powder, and is used to stiffen and clear linen, with blue; its powder is employed to powder the hair. The art of starching linen was brought into England by Mrs. Dinghein, a Flemish woman, 1 Mary, 1553. Stow. Patents for obtaining starch from other substances have been taken out: from potatoes by Samuel Newton and others in 1707; from the horse-chest- nut by Wm. Murray in 1796; from rice by Thomas Wickham in 1823; from various matters by Orlando Jones in 1839-40.

STAR-CHAMBER, COURT OF. So called haply from its roof being garnished with stars. Coke. This court of justice was called Star-Chamber, not from the stars on its roof (which were obliterated even before the reign of queen Elizabeth), but from the Starra, or Jewish covenants, deposited there by order of Richard I. No star was allowed to be valid except found in those repositories, and here they remained till the banishment of the Jews by Edward I. The court was instituted or revived, 3 Hen. VII. 1486, for trials by a committee of the privy council, which was in violation of Magna Charta; as it dealt with civil and criminal causes unfettered by the rules of law. In Charles I.'s reign it exercised its power upon several bold inno- vators, who gloried in their sufferings, and con- tributed to render government odious and contemptible. It was abolished in 1640. There were in this court from 26 to 42 judges, the lord chan- cellor having the casting voice. The judicial com- mittee of the privy council is the Star-chamber revived under another name.

STAR OF INDIA, an order of knighthood for India, instituted by letters patent 23 Feb., gazetted 25 June, 1861, enlarged in 1866 and 1903.

It comprised the sovereign, the grand master, 25 knights (Europeans and natives), and extra or honorary knights. The prince of Wales (now king) held a grand chapter at Calcutta, 1 Jan. 1876.

STARS, THE FIXED. They were classed into constellations (which see), it is supposed, about 1200 B.C. Hicetas, of Syracuse, taught that the sun and the stars were motionless, and that the earth moved round them, about 344 B.C. (this is mentioned by Cicero, and perhaps gave the first hint of this system to Copernicus). Job, Hesiod, and Homer mention several of the constellations. The Royal Library at Paris contains a Chinese chart of the heavens, made about 600 B.C., in which 1460 stars are correctly inserted. The aberration of the stars was discovered by Dr. Bradley, 1727; see Astronomy, and Solar System. Maps of the stars were published by the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge in 1839, and a set of Celestial Maps, issued under the superintendence of the Royal Prussian Academy, was completed in 1859. See Photometer.

Tycho Brahe discovered a new star in Cassiopeia in 1572.

Temporary stars were observed in 1876 and 1885.

A list of about 200 stars, which vary in their brightness and sometimes disappear, has been published by Mr. G. F. Chambers in his "Handbook on Astronomy," 1889-90. A variable star, named  $\alpha$  Ceti, or Mira Ceti, observed by David Fabricius in Aug. 1596, disappeared in Oct. following. It was observed again in 1603 and 1638, and since.

Bessel discovered the annual parallax of star  $\delta$  Cygni (hence he calculated its distance from the earth to be about 60 billions of miles) 12 Feb. 1841

Struve made it 40 billions [supported by Brünnow and R. S. Ball] 1853

* This statue is of brass, cast by Le Sueur, in 1633, at the expense of the Howard-Arundel family. During the civil war, the parliament sold it to John River, a brazier, in Holborn, with strict orders to break it to pieces; but he concealed it underground till the Restoration, when it was erected, in 1675, on a pedestal executed by Grinling Gibbons. The first equestrian statue of bronze, founded at one cast, was that of Louis XIV. of France, 1699; it was elevated about 1724.

STATUTES, see Acts of Parliament, Clarendon, Merton, &c. Statute Law Revision acts were passed in 1863-1894. The subject was referred to a joint committee of both houses, 14 March, 1892. Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure act, 44 & 45 Viet. c. 59, passed 27 Aug. 1881. "Statutes; Revised Edition: (1325-1878)," in 18 volumes, published 1870-85. The number of volumes since greatly reduced. Select commons' committee on the subject, met 17 July, 1891.

STATUTORY DECLARATIONS. By 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 62 (1835), persons objecting to oaths are permitted to make declarations before magistrates, judges, &c.; commencing: "I —, do solemnly and sincerely declare that"—an indulgence sometimes abused.

Mr. Alexander Chaffers having made a declaration against the character of Lady Twiss, wife of sir Travers Twiss, was prosecuted for libel. She withdrew during the examination, and the prosecution ceased: but Chaffers was severely censured by the magistrate, and by the attorney-general in parliament March, 1872.

STEAM CARRIAGE (for ordinary roads), invented by the earl of Caithness, was said to be successful in 1860. It travelled over rough roads at the rate of 8 miles an hour, at a cost of less than 1d. per mile. His lordship made a journey of 140 miles in two days; see Road Steamers and Carriages.

STEAM ENGINE AND NAVIGATION. Hero of Alexandria, in his "Pneumatics," describes various methods of employing steam as a power; and to him is ascribed the Æolopile, which, although a toy, possesses the properties of the steam-engine: he flourished about 284-241 B.C. Roger Bacon appears to have foreseen the application of steam-power; see Railways, Locomotives, Road Steamers, Carriages, &c.

GREAT EASTERN, for a short time

(1857-8) called Leviathan . . . 692 ft. 83 ft.
Horse Power:—Paddles, 1000; screw, 1600;
 Weight of ship, 12,000 tons; ordinary light draught, 12,000 tons; said to have cost 732,000*l*.

She was designed by Mr. I. K. Brunel [who died 15 Sept. 1859], and built by Messrs. Scott Russell and Co., at Millwall; launching lasted from 3 Nov. 1857, to 31 Jan. 1858.

The capital subscribed having been all expended, a new company was formed to fit her for sea.

On 7 Sept. 1859, she left her moorings at Deptford for Portland-roads. On the voyage an explosion took place (off Hastings), through some neglect in regard to the casing of one of the funnels, when ten firemen were killed and many persons seriously injured. After repairs she sailed to Holyhead, arriving there 10 Oct.; she endured the storm of 25-26 Oct. well; and proceeded to Southampton for the winter, 4 Nov.

In 1862 she performed several voyages to and from New York; but in Aug. ran on a rock near Long Island and injured her bottom.

She was repaired and arrived at Liverpool 17 Jan. 1863, and sailed to New York (16-27 May).

She was bought by Glass, Elliot, and Co. in March or April, 1864, and was chartered to convey the Atlantic telegraph cable; sailed from Sheerness 15 July; and returned 19 Aug. 1865; see under Electric Telegraph.

She sailed for New York, prepared for 2000 passengers, 26 March, and returned with 191. She was seized by the seamen, claiming their wages, May, 1867; and the case was carried into Chancery in July.

At the meeting of the shareholders 10 Feb. 1868, no dividend was declared.

employed to lift up and let fall the constituting the hammer, which is to the end of a piston-rod passing bottom of an inverted steam cylinder directly over the anvil.

In 1842, Mr. Nasmyth applied his steam driving piles, which has importantly execution of great public works. On range of power, forged iron-work can be executed on a scale, and for a variety with an ease and perfection not previously. Parts of gigantic marine steam-engines Armstrong guns, as well as the most machinery, as in Enfield rifles, are steam-hammer.

A steam-hammer, said to be the then world, completed at Woolwich: the weights 40 tons, and when used with the has the force of 51 tons, April, 1874. Works, Creuzot, France; weight between Dec. 1877.

Mr. Nasmyth, aged 81, died 7 May, 1880; biography, edited by Dr. S. Smiles, w 1883.

STEAM-PLOUGHS were patented by Callaway and R. A. Purkes, 1849; 1850; and others. John Fowler's of approved.

STEAM-RAM (to be used in war) was invented by Mr. James Nasmyth communicated to the Admiralty in 1861; rams built by Mr. James Laird of Glasgow for the Confederates in N. America, were eventually bought by the British government.

STEARINE (from stear, suet) oils and fats which is solid at common temperature. The nature of these substances was known by Chevreul, in 1823, who showed they were compounds of peculiar acids, termed glycerine; of these compounds stearine, margarine, and elaine; see

STEEL, metal, a compound of iron exists in nature, and has been fabricated earliest times. It was certainly used by the Egyptians, and Greeks. It replaced cast iron in ship building, &c. Reaumur discovered the direct process of steel by immersing malleable iron in cast iron.

A manufactory for cast steel is said to have been set up by Benjamin Huntsman at Heanley near Sheffield.

The manufacture of shear steel began in 1840.

German steel was made at Newcastle previously to 1840.

The inventions of Mushat (1800), Lucks (1839), and Heath (1839), were important steps in the history of steel; see Engraving.

Reipe patented his "puddled steel" in 1840. Mr. (aft. sir) H. Bessemer made steel by passing air through liquid iron, 1856. By this process tons of crude iron have been converted into steel in 23 minutes.

Tungsten steel was made in Germany, 1859. Fremy made steel by bringing red-hot iron in contact with carbonate of ammonia.

* For this invention he had received 1,507,748*l*. up to 1879; also many foreign patents. He died 19 Jan. 1883.

STEAM GUN; suggested by Wm. Murdoch, 1803. One patented by Messrs. Perkins, in 1824, was ineffectual.

STEAM HAMMER, invented by Mr. James Nasmyth in 1838, and patented by him 18 June, 1842. Its main feature is the absolutely direct manner by which the elastic power of steam is

M. Alfred Krupp exhibited an ingot of steel weighing 4500 lbs. in 1851, and one weighing 20 tons in 1862 [about 15,000 men were employed at his works at Essen, 1887; 46,000 in 1902.]

STEEL PENS. "Iron pens" are mentioned by Chamberlayne in 1685. Steel pens, made long before, began to come into use about 1820, when the first gross of three-slit pens was sold wholesale for 7½ ds. In 1830 the price was 8s., and in 1832, 6s. A better pen is now sold for 6d. a gross. Birmingham in 1858 produced about 1000 million pens per annum, and the output has greatly increased since. Women and children are principally employed in the manufacture. Perry, Mitchell, and Gillott are eminent makers. Joseph Gillott, originally a mechanic, made a large fortune by steel-pen making. He died 5 Jan. 1872, aged 72.

STEEL-YARD. An ancient instrument, the same that is translated balance in the Pentateuch. The Statera Romana, or Roman steel-yard, is mentioned in 315 B.C.—THE STEEL-YARD or STILL-YARD COMPANY, London merchants, who had the steel-yard in Thames-street assigned to them by Henry III., about 1232, were Flemings and Germans, and the only exporters, for many years after, of the staple commodities of England. Anderson. The company lost its privileges, finally, in 1578; and the merchants were expelled from England in 1597.

STEFANO. SAN, a small village on the sea of Marmora, S.W. of Constantinople; here the grand duke Nicholas established his head quarters, 24 Feb.; and here was signed a treaty of peace with Turkey, 3 March, 1878, much modified by the treaty of Berlin, signed 13 July, following. The Russians quitted San Stefano, 22 Sept. 1878.

It established independence of Montenegro, Servia, and Roumania; constituted Bulgaria a tributary principality; required a heavy indemnity from Turkey for Russia, who was to gain a port on the Black Sea and Kars; to exchange the Dobruddsha for Bessarabia; to obtain rights for Christians; to open the Bosphorus and Dardanelles in peace and war; &c.

STENOGRAPHY (from stenos, narrow), the art of short-hand, said to have been practised by the ancients. Its improvement is attributed to the poet Ennius, to Tyro, Cicero's freedman, and still more to Seneca. The Ars Scribendi Characteris, written about 1412, is the oldest system extant. Dr. Timothy Bright's "Characterie, or the Arte of Shorte, Swifte, and Secrete Writing," published in 1588, is the first English work on short-hand. Peter Bales, the famous penman, published on stenography in 1590; and John Willis published his "Stenographie" in 1602. Since then many systems and modifications have been produced. See Phonography.

Edmund Willis's system, 1618; Thomas Shelton's system, 1620 (used by Samuel Pepys); Wm. Cartwright's, 1642-69 (known as Rich's); Wm. Mason's, 1672, improved by Thos. Gurney (1720) (known as Gurney's, officially used in parliament since 1813); John Byrom's, published after his death, 1767; Wm. Mavor's, 1780; Sam Taylor's, on which are based ("Odell's and Harding's"), 1786; Rev. Richard Roe's, 1820, first Script system; James H. Lewis's, 1812-15; Isaac Pitman's (phonographic), 1837, see Phonography; A. M. Bell's, 1849; Prof. Everett's, 1877; T. Cooper ("Parliamentary shorthand," Gurney's), 1853; E. STEPHEN'S CHAPEL, ST. (Westminster), built by king Stephen, about 1135. It was rebuilt by Edward III. in 1347, and by him made a collegiate church, to which a dean and twelve secular priests were appointed. Soon after its surrender to Edward VI., about 1548, it was applied to the use of Parliament; see Parliament. It was destroyed by fire, 16 Oct. 1834. The Society of Antiquaries published memorials of it about 1810; and Mr. Mackenzie's work appeared in 1844. The restoration of the beautiful crypt was completed in Jan. 1870.

STOCKINGS of silk are said to have been first worn by Henry II. of France, 1547. In 1560 queen Elizabeth was presented with a pair of knit black silk stockings, by her silk-woman, Mrs. Montague, and she never wore cloth ones any more. Howell. He adds, "Henry VIII. wore ordinary cloth hose, except there came from Spain, by great chance, a pair of silk stockings; for Spain very early abounded with silk." Edward VI. was presented with a pair of Spanish silk stockings by his merchant, sir Thomas Gresham; and the present was then much taken notice of. Idem. Others relate that William Rider, a London apprentice, seeing at the house of an Italian merchant a pair of knit worsted stockings from Mantua, made a pair like them, the first made in England, which he presented to the earl of Pembroke, 1564. Stow. The art of weaving stockings in a frame was invented in England by the rev. Mr. Lee, of Cambridge, in 1589, twenty-five years after he had learnt to knit them with wires or needles. Cotton stockings were first made in 1730; see Cotton. Digitated stockings (like gloves), introduced 1882.

STOCKPORT (in Cheshire) became eminent on account of the cotton trade. Heaton Norris, in Lancashire, is united to it by a bridge over the river. Here the Manchester blanketweavers were dispersed, 11 March, 1817; and here was a serious religious riot, when two Roman catholic chapels were destroyed, and the houses of many Roman catholics gutted, and their furniture and other contents smashed or burnt, 29 June, 1852. Great mill fire, 9 deaths, 5 Nov. 1902.

STORTHING, the Norwegian ps said to have been first held at Bergen by in 1223.

STOVES. The ancients used stoves which concealed the fire, as the German stoves yet do. They lighted the fire also in a large tube in the middle of the room, the roof being open. Apartments were warmed by portable braziers. Stoves on this old principle, improved, continue in use in many houses and public establishments in England, and generally on the continent. Dr. Franklin and count Rumford (who invented a stove) pointed out the waste of fuel in our open fires; and Dr. Neil Arnott patented his "improvements in the production and agency of heat," 14 Nov. 1821. Dr. C. William Siemens described his smokeless stove in "Nature" for 11 Nov. 1880. See Chimneys, and Cottager's Stove.

Mr. T. Pridgin Teale publishes his inventions, in which he revives the principles of count Rumford with additions, 1835-6.

STRASBURG, the Roman Argentoratum, the capital of Alsace. Here Julian defeated the Alemanni, 357, who captured it, 455. It was annexed to Germany, 870. Louis XIV. seized it 28 Sept. 1681, and retained it by the treaty of Ryswick, 1697. The citadel and fortifications, which he constructed, have been so much augmented that Strasburg may be considered one of the strongest places in Europe. It was confirmed to France by the peace of Ryswick in 1697, but captured by the Germans, 28 Sept. 1870, and retained at the peace, May, 1871. The cathedral, an epitome of Gothic art, was founded by Clovis, and reconstructed by Pepin and Charlemagne. After destruction by lightning, 1007, it was principally rebuilt by Erwin de Steinbach and his son in the 14th century. The lofty tower was completed in 1439. STYLE ROYAL, see England, King, Majesty, and Titles. The styles of the English sovereigns are given in the later editions of Nicolas's "Chronology of History." The Royal Style and Titles Act, giving power to add to queen Victoria's titles "empress of India," after much opposition in the commons, received royal assent 27 April; proclamation issued 28 April; announced in India, by the viceroy, 19 Aug. 1876; proclamation announcing the insertion of the words "and of the British dominions beyond the seas" in the king's style of titles, 4 Nov. 1901.

STYLITES, see Monachism.

STYRIA (Austria), part of the ancient Noricum and Pannonia, was held successively by the Romans, Ostrogoths, and Avars. It was conquered by Charlemagne, and divided among his followers, styled counts, among whom the count of Styria, about 876, was the most powerful. The count became margrave about 1030; and Ottocar VI., in 1180, was made duke. At his death, 1192, Styria was annexed to the duchy of Austria. In 1246 it was acquired by Bela IV. of Hungary; in 1253, by Ottocar II. of Bohemia; after whose defeat and death, at Marchfeld, in 1278, it reverted to Rudolph of Austria, and was annexed to his possessions. Population, 1890, 1,282,708; 1900, 1,356,058.

Subsidies were raised upon the people of England by James I. 1624; but they were included in a bill for the redress of grievances, 1639. Four subsidies (the last) were granted to Charles II. in 1663.*

SUBWAY, see Tunnels.

SUCCESSION ACTS, see Settlement.

SUCCESSION, WAR OF (1702-1713), distinguished by the achievements of the duke of Marlborough and the earl of Peterborough, and their unprofitable results, arose on the question whether an Austrian prince or a French prince should succeed to the throne of Spain. The British court opposed Louis, and Marlborough was victorious; but the allies withdrew one after another, and the French prince succeeded; see Spain and Utrecht.

SUCCESSION DUTY ACT (16 & 17 Viet. c. 51), after much discussion, was passed 4 Aug. 1853. By this act the legacy duty was extended to real estate, and was made payable on succession to both landed and personal property; see Legacies. Additional duties imposed by customs, &c., acts of 1888 and 1889. The probate and succession duty replaced by the estate duty, 1894 (which see).

SUFFRAGAN BISHOPS. Power to appoint them was given by parliament in 1534 to Henry VIII. as head of the church. Suffragan bishops bill passed, 1 July, 1898. See Bishops and Supremacy.

SUGAR* (Saccharum officinarum) is supposed to have been known to the ancient Jews. Found in the East Indies by Nearchus, admiral of Alexander, 325 B.C.—Strabo. An oriental nation in alliance with Pompey used the juice of the cane as a common beverage.—Lucan. It was prescribed as a medicine by Galen, 2nd century. Brought into Europe from Asia, A.D. 625;—in large quantities, 1150. Attempted to be cultivated in Italy; not succeeding, the Portuguese and Spaniards carried it to America about 1510.

The sugar-cane transported from Syria to Cyprus about 1148; from Madeira about 1420; and to the West Indies . . . about 1506

It is not known at what date sugar was introduced into England, but it seems to have been prior to the reign of Henry VIII. Mr. Whitaker, in the History of Whalley, p. 109, quotes an instance in 1497

A manuscript letter from sir Edward Wotton to lord Cobham, dated Calais, advertises him that sir Edward had taken up for his lordship twenty-five sugar-loaves at six shillings a loaf, "whiche is eight pence a pound" . . . 6 March, 1546

Sugar first taxed (by James II.) . . . 1685

Duties on free and slave-grown sugars equalized, . . . Aug. 1846

Duties reduced and regulated . . . Sept. 1848

Duty increased (war) . . . 1855

Reduced, 1857, 1864; modified, 1867; greatly reduced, 1 Aug. 1870; further reduced, May, 1873;

abolished from . . . 1 May, 1874

Sugar industries committee recommend a protective duty on the import of sugar from certain countries . . . Aug. 1880

Sugar-refining was made known to Europeans by a Venetian, 1503, and was first practised in England in 1659, though some say we had the art a few years earlier. The invaluable vacuum-pan was invented by Howard, 1812. Dr. Scofield's processes were patented in 1848-50, but not adopted in Britain.

Sugar manufactured from sorghum in United States Dec. 1832; success reported . . . March, 1888

Manufacturers and colonies protest strongly against French and German bounties on beet sugar . . . 1882-9

International Conference on Sugar Bounties, representatives from Germany, France, Austria and others, not United States; first meeting in London, baron H. de Worms chosen president, 24 Nov.; a protocol with a convention signed condemning bounties and recommending legislation for their abolition . . . 19 Dec. 1887

The mission of baron de Worms to various courts reported successful . . . Feb. 1888

Finally signed for Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Russia, Spain, Belgium, and the Netherlands; declined by France, Denmark, and Sweden . . . 30 Aug. "

International commission to examine the laws to enforce the convention meet . . . 1 May, 1889

Bill for the adoption of the convention brought into the commons May; deferred by the government 17 June, "

* Sugar, long considered a neutral substance, without congeners, has become the head of a numerous family, viz.: Cane-sugar (sacrose, from the sugar-cane; boiled with dilute acids it becomes glucose); Fruit-sugar (from many fruits); Grape-sugar (glucose, from dried fruits and altered starch); sugar of milk; mellitose (from eucalyptus, by Berthelot in 1856); sorbin (from the berries of the mountain ash, by Pelouze); inosite (from muscular tissue, Scherer); dulcose (by Laurent); mannite (from manna, obtained from the fraxinus ornus, a kind of ash); quercite (from acorns); to these have been added mycose, by M. Mitscherlich, and melezetose and rehalose, by M. Berthelot.

A secret process of refining sugar by electricity said to have been invented by prof. Henry C. Friend of New York, announced 1885. He succeeded in organizing the New York Electric Sugar Refining company to carry out the invention; the scheme collapsed and occasioned much loss in America and England by credulous persons, the whole affair being an imposture . . . 1888

It caused a temporary panic in Liverpool Jan.; Mrs. Friend, then a widow, and her daughter were arrested in Michigan . . . Feb. 1889

William E. Howard, one of the company, was sentenced to imprisonment for "grand larceny," 21 June, "

SUICIDE (from sui, self; cedere, to kill), the slayer of himself. The first instances recorded in Jewish history are those of Samson, about 1120, and Saul, 1055 B.C. The Greek and Roman philosophers deemed it a crime, and burned the offending hand apart from the rest of the body. In the reign of Tarquin I., the Roman soldiers, thinking themselves disgraced by being ordered to make common sewers, destroyed themselves, 606 B.C. Cato committed suicide, 46 B.C.* In the Roman catholic church, in the 6th century it was ordained that no commemoration should be made in the Eucharist for such as committed self-murder. This ecclesiastical law continued till the Reformation, when it was admitted into the statute law of England by the authority of parliament, with the confiscation of land and goods. Till 1823 the body of the suicide was directed to be buried in a cross-road, and a stake to be driven through it. A new act, suppressing the barbarous customs, was passed in 1882. It is now usually buried in consecrated ground without a religious ceremony. Thomas Cooper, the eminent Chartist, author of "The Purgatory of Suicides," an epic poem, published in 1845, died, aged 87, 15 July, 1892. Dr. Henry Morsell published "Suicides: an Essay," 1881. There were 7,572 suicides in France in 1887.

* Three instances of self-destruction by fire: the philosopher Empedocles threw himself into the crater of Mount Etna; a Frenchman threw himself, in 1820, into the crater of Vesuvius; and an Englishman, who jumped into the furnace of a forge about the year 1811. Plutarch relates that an unaccountable passion for suicide seized the Milesian virgins, from which they could not be prevented by the tears and prayers of their friends; but a decree being issued that the body of every young maid who did self-murder should be drawn naked through the streets, a stop was soon put to the extraordinary frenzy.

SUITORS' FUND (in the court of chancery) in 1862 amounted to 1,290,000*l.* As this money has no specific owner, a proposal was made by government to apply it to the building of new law-courts, payment of all legal claims being guaranteed, which was directed by the "Courts of Laws Fees" act, passed 20 Aug. 1867.

SULPHUR has been known from the earliest times. Basil Valentine mentions its production from green vitriol. Sulphuric acid (vitriol), produced by him from burning sulphur, was introduced into England about 1720. Sulphur has been the object of research of many eminent chemists during the present century, and many discoveries have been made, such as its allotropic condition, &c. It is the inflammable constituent in gunpowder, and a deleterious ingredient in coal gas. The sulphur mines of Sicily have been wrought since the 16th century, but the exportation was inconsiderable till about 1820; in 1838 the trade increased so much that Great Britain alone imported 38,654 tons. In that year the Neapolitan government was induced to grant a monopoly of the trade to a French company; but a firm remonstrance from the British government led to a discontinuance of this impolitic restriction in 1841, which, however, gave a great and lasting impetus to the British sulphur manufacture.

SULPHURY FLUORIDE, a colourless, odourless gas, which can be liquefied and solidified at low temperatures; prepared by Moissan and Lebeau, by the action of fluorine on sulphur dioxide; reported, 17 Aug. 1901.

SULU, Sooloo or Soluk Archipelago, a group of above 60 islands in the Malay Archipelago.

SUMATRA, an island in the Indian ocean, called Java Minor by Marco Polo, and visited by Nicolo di Conti prior to 1449. Mainly on account of the pepper trade, the Dutch acquired a settlement at Padang about 1649, and the British at Bencoolen about 1685. The Dutch possessions with Java were acquired by the British in 1811; but were restored in 1816. In 1824 the Dutch acquired all the British settlements in Sumatra, in exchange for Malacca and some possessions in India. Restrictions on their progress in Sumatra were removed by treaty Feb. 1872. Severe fighting between the Dutch and the Achinese natives with varying results, mostly in favour of the Dutch, April 1873 to 1879. Dutch successful in war, peace announced, Aug. 1879. New war; great victory of the Dutch, 13 Sept. 1882. Sumatra suffered much by the volcanic eruptions and earthquakes of 26-27 Aug. 1883. See Java and Holland, 1896 et seq.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION ACT, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, 11 Aug. 1879. It amends the law respecting the jurisdiction of magistrates, in regard to fines, imprisonments, &c. It came into operation 1 Jan. 1880. Amended 1881, 1884 and 1895; again, powers extended, 1899.

SUMPTUARY LAWS restrain excess in dress, furniture, eating, &c. The laws of Lycurgus were severe against luxury, probably 9th century B.C. Those of Zaleucus ordained that no sober woman should go attended by more than one maid in the street, or wear gold or embroidered apparel, 450 B.C. — Diog. Laert. The Lex Orchia among the Romans (181 B.C.) limited the guests at feasts, and the number and quality of the dishes at an entertainment; and it also enforced that during supper, which was the chief meal among the Romans, the doors of every house should be left open. The English sumptuary laws, chiefly of the reigns of Edward III. and Henry VIII., were repealed in 1856; see Dress.

Fizeau and Foucault (1864). "The error corrected corresponds to the apparent breadth of a human hair at 125 feet, or of a sovereign 8 miles off." — Herschel. Distance computed by sir G. B. Airy from results of the observation of transit of Venus (9 Dec. 1874), 93,321,000 miles, Oct. 1877; 92,600,000, June, 1878. From the transit of 1882 by professor Harkness (an American), 92,385,000 miles, October, 1888. stability of the sun, about 280 B.C. Numerous theories were ventured during fifteen centuries, and astronomy lay neglected till about A.D. 1200, when it was brought into Europe by the Moors of Barbary and Spain. The Copernican system was made known in 1530; see Copernican System and Solar System. Galileo and Newton maintained that the sun was an igneous globe. The transit of Mercury was observed by Gassendi, 1631. For recent discoveries, see Eclipses, Spectrum, and Venus.

SUPREMACY over the church was claimed by pope Gelasius I. as bishop of Rome, 494. On 15 Jan. 1535, Henry VIII. by virtue of the act 26 Hen. VIII. c. 1, formally assumed the style of "on earth supreme head of the church of England," which was retained by Edward VI., Mary I. (for a time), but was refused by Elizabeth, and has never been revived by succeeding sovereigns. The bishop of Rochester (Fisher) and the ex-lord chancellor (sir Thomas More) and many others were beheaded for denying the king's supremacy in 1535; and in 1578, John Nelson, a priest, and Thomas Sherwood, a young layman, were executed at Tyburn for the same offence. The "act of Supremacy," repealed by 1 & 2 Phil. and Mary,
 c. 8 (1554), was re-enacted 1 Eliz. c. 1 (1559).

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE
 was constituted by the Judicature act 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, passed 5 Aug. 1873, to come into operation 1 Nov. 1874. In 1874 this was deferred to 1 Nov. 1875. The "Council of Judges" appointed by this act met to consider questions relating to the reform of the law, 18 Jan. 1892. See under Judges.

The existing courts were to be united into one Supreme Court, divided into the High Court of Justice and the Court of Appeal. The High Court to consist of the lord chancellor, the two lord chief justices, the vice-chancellors, and the other judges; (hereafter the court to consist of 21 judges.)
 Five divisions: 1. Chancery, 2. Queen's Bench, 3.
 Common Pleas, 4. Exchequer, and 5. Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty; subject to alteration.

The Court of Appeal to consist of five ex-officio judges (viz., lord chancellor, two lord chief justices, lord chief baron, master of the rolls), and such others as may be appointed (§§ 20, 21, 22).

Appeals to the house of lords or the judicial committee of the privy council to be discontinued.

Law and equity to be concurrently administered;
 law terms abolished; and sittings in vacation provided for. See under Terms.

The act passed 11 Aug. 1875, suspended §§ 20, 21, and 22, converted the proposed court of appeal into an intermediate court till 1 Nov. 1876. (See

The Supreme Court of Judicature (comprising the High Court of Justice, Chancery division, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer subdivisions, Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty division
 (all which see) began 2 Nov. 1875

After one term, it was said in the Times, "its operation has tended to economise judicial power and to prevent delay of justice" 29 Nov. "

By the Appellate Jurisdiction act (1876) the house of lords retains its powers as a court of ultimate appeal; the court to consist of the lord chancellor, two lords of appeal (to be created peers for life, with 6000*l.* salary), and any peers who are or have been lawyers. Act to come into operation 1 Nov. 1876

The court may sit during prorogation of parliament. The statute relating to the judicial committee of the privy council and to the intermediate court of appeal is amended. 1876

By this act also the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer divisions of the Supreme Court are converted into 15 courts of first instance or primary courts.

Additional judge for chancery division appointed.

Style of ordinary judges:—of the court of appeal to be "lord justices of the appeal;" other judges, "justices of the high court;" by act passed, 24 April, 1877

An amendment act (42 & 43 Vict. c. 78), relating to offices, fees, &c., passed 15 Aug. 1879

At a meeting of the judges it was resolved to recommend the abolition of the exchequer and common pleas, and their consolidation into one, termed the "queen's bench division," under the lord chief justice of England, 30 Nov.; order in council, 16 Dec. 1880

Carried into effect; old divisions at an end; judiciary act carried out for the first time, 7 March, 1881

Further changes made by the act 44 & 45 Vict. sec. 68, passed 27 Aug. 1881, by it the master of the rolls was made a judge of appeal only, and the chief justice of England was endowed with the powers of the chief justice of common pleas and the chief baron of the exchequer.

New code of rules of procedure issued about 9 July; came into force 24 Oct. 1883. See Circuits.

Amendment act passed (combining other acts), 14 Aug. 1884; other acts passed 14 Aug. 1890, 11 May, and 5 Aug. 1891 and 1894

SURAT (E. Indies). Before the English East India company obtained possession of Bombay, the presidency of their affairs on the coast of Malabar was at Surat; and they had a factory here established under captain Best in 1611. The Great Mogul had here an officer who was styled his admiral. An attack of the Mahratta chief Sivajee, on the British factory, was defeated by sir George Oxenden, 1664. The English were again attacked in 1670 and 1702, and often subsequently. The East India company, in 1759, fitted out an armament, which dispossessed the admiral of the castle; and, soon after, the possession of this castle was confirmed to them by the court of Delhi. Surat was vested in the British in 1800 and 1803. A fourth part of Surat was destroyed by fire 6, 7 April, 1889.

Parliament empowered the commissioners of woods to erect (among other improvements there) a suspension bridge at Battersea, Sept. 1846; and many bridges of similar construction have been erected in various parts of the kingdom. Lambeth and Westminster suspension bridge was opened 10 Nov. 1862; see Menai Strait, Hungerford, Clifton, &c.

SUSPENSORY BILL, the name given to "a bill to prevent for a limited time [to 1 Aug. 1869] new appointments in the church of Ireland; and to restrain, for the same period, in certain respects, the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland." This bill was introduced into the commons by Mr. Gladstone, 14 May, and passed through committee, 5 June; rejected by the lords (192 to 97), 30 June, 3 A.M., 1868. A similar bill, with limitations relating to Wales and Monmouthshire, introduced by Mr. Asquith, read first time (301 to 245), 23 Feb. 1893; withdrawn, Sept. 1893; see Church of England, May, 1893.

SUTLEJ, a river in N.W. India, the ancient Hyphasis or Hypana, on the banks of which were fought the desperate battles of Aliwal, 28 Jan., and Sobraon, 10 Feb. 1846 (which see).

SUTTEE, the burning of widows. This custom began in India from one of the wives of "Bramah, the Son of God," sacrificing herself at his death, that she might attend him in heaven. Seventeen widows have burnt themselves on the funeral pile of a rajah; and in Bengal alone, 700 have thus perished in a year. The English government, after long discouraging suttees, by the agency of lord William Bentinck, formally abolished them, 7 Dec. 1829; but they have since occasionally taken place. The wife of the son of the rajah of Beygoon thus perished, June, 1864, and several wives of sir Jung Bahadoor, minister of Nepal, 1 March, 1877. Suttees still occur.

About 20,000,000 women in enforced widowhood; much profligacy, 1885. Legislative interference with the Hindoo marriage laws declared by lord Dufferin, viceroy, to be ineffectual and unnecessary; moral influence progressing (see Brahmo Samaj, under Deism) announced. Oct. 1886

SUWANOW (or SUWOROFF), a group of small uninhabited isles in the Pacific, about 450 miles N.W. of the Samoan isles, annexed by Great Britain, 1889.

SWABIA, a province in S. Germany; was conquered by Clovis, and incorporated into the kingdom of the Franks, 496. After various changes of rulers, it was made a duchy by the emperor Conrad I., in 912, for Erchanger; according to some, in 916, for Burckhardt. The duchy became hereditary in the house of Hohenstaufen in 1080. Duke Frederick III. became emperor of Rome, commonly styled of Germany, as Frederick I. (usually styled Barbarossa, red beard), in 1152. Conradin, his descendant, was defeated at the battle of Tagliacozzo (which see), in 1268, and beheaded shortly after. The breaking up of the duchy gave rise to many of the small German states; part of Swabia is included in Wurtemberg and Switzerland. Swabia was made a circle of the empire in 1387 and 1500. A league, composed of Swabian cities and states, about 1254, was the germ of the great Swabian league, formed for the preservation of the peace of Germany, under the auspices of the emperor Frederick, in 1488.

In 1905 there were over 70 churches in Great Britain connected with the General Conference, and independent congregations. In America there were 81 connected with the General Convention, and many important circles in affiliation. In Canada there were several places of worship, and others in Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa. Also in France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Sweden, Denmark, &c.

Their belief is that the whole Godhead is centred in Jesus Christ, who is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; Creator, Redeemer, and Saviour; one in essence and person; in whom is a Trinity of Love, Wisdom, and Power, answering to the trinity in man of soul, body, and their operation; that Salvation is effected by faith in Him and obedience to Him, the Lord operating with the man, and the man co-operating with the Lord, and that Charity and Faith are together in good works; that the Sacred Scripture is the Word of God or the Divine Truth itself, the literal sense being the basis and continent of a spiritual sense in all and every part, and that the word is in all the heavens and the wisdom of the angels is thence derived; that man is a spiritual being fitted for life in the spiritual world, clothed temporarily with a material body for life in this world, which at "death" he lays aside for ever; that the last Judgment was effected in the spiritual world during Swedenborg's lifetime; and that the Lord's Second Coming has taken place in the revelation to man by the Lord, through the instrumentality of Swedenborg, of a new system of truth derived from the inner or spiritual sense of Scripture, based upon the literal sense when properly understood, and having special application to the spiritual life and needs of man, here and hereafter.

SWEET-BAY, Laurus nobilis, was brought to these realms from Italy before 1548. Laurus indica, or Royal Bay, was brought from Madeira in 1665. The Sweet-Fern bush, Comptonia asplenifolia, came from America, 1714. Laurus aggregata, or the Glaucous Laurel, came from China in 1806.

SWIMMING. Leander is said to have swum across the Hellespont, between Sestos and Abydos, about one mile; and Lord Byron and lieut. Ekenhead did the same, 3 May, 1810. On 24 Aug. 1872, Mr. Johnson, styled the "hero of London-bridge," and swimming champion of the world, attempted to swim from Dover to Calais, but was prevented by cold. He was said to have swum seven miles in about sixty-five minutes. "Swimming," by Archibald Sinclair and William Henry (Badminton Library), 1894, contains remarkable records.

Capt. Matt. Webb swam from Blackwall to Gravesend, 20 miles, in 4 hours 53 minutes, 3 July; and from Dover to Calais (22 miles) in 21½ hours, 24-25, Aug. 1875; drowned while attempting to cross the rapids of Niagara . . . 24 July, 1883

Agnes Beckwith, aged 14, swam from London bridge to Greenwich, 5 miles, in 1 h. 8 min. 1 Sept. 1875
Emily Parker, aged 15, swam from London bridge to Blackwall, 7 miles, in 1 h. 35 min. . . 4 Sept. "

World's swimming championship won by J. A. Jarvis, 500 mètres in 8 min. 33-5 sec. at Paris, 16 Aug. 1903

William Finney, a professional diver, aged 28, died, at Walsall hospital, from injuries received in diving from a platform 30 feet high into a tank containing 4 feet of water. He was engaged for some years at the Westminster Aquarium, where he dived in a burning sack into a shallow tank; he performed three years in Berlin (his brother James was champion swimmer of the world at nearly all distances from 1853 to 1889), end of Aug. "

Mr. Montague Holbein makes his fourth attempt to swim across the Channel, Dover to Calais; when within about 7 miles of the French coast, he abandons the attempt, after being 17½ hours in the water (his best performance was on 27 Aug. 1902, from Cape Grisnez to Dover, when he got within 5 miles of Dover, after remaining in the sea 22½ hours) . . . 1, 2 Sept. "

Attempts made by Holbein and others to swim the English channel, fail . . . 20 Aug. 1904

Messrs. Burgess and Holbein and Miss Kellerman make unsuccessful attempts to swim the channel, 24 Aug. 1905

SWINEY PRIZE A prize of 100*l.*, and a silver cup of the same value, given every 5 years, for a work on jurisprudence. Awarded in 1904 to sir Fredk. Pollock and prof. W. Maitland for their book on "The History of English Law before Edward I."

SWING. Between 1830 and 1833 many haystacks and barns were fired in the rural districts of England, and attributed to an imaginary person named "Swing." Many persons were caught and punished. The probable cause was disputes between the farmers and their dissatisfied labourers.

SWISS GUARDS, Royal, in France, formed in 1616; massacred while defending the Tuilleries, 10 Aug. 1792; re-organised Sept. 1815; defeated during the insurrection, 28 July, 1830; dismissed by Charles X. Aug. 1830.

SWITHIN'S DAY, ST., 15 July. St. Swithun lived in the 9th century; and, having been the preceptor to king Ethelwulf, was made bishop of Winchester in 852, and died 2 July, 862. The tradition states that it rained forty days in consequence of the proposed removal of his remains from the churchyard to the cathedral.

SWITZERLAND was in ancient times inhabited by the Helvetii (which see). The country was colonised by the Romans after Caesar's victory over the Helvetii in their invasion of Gaul, 58 B.C., and the people were gradually combined with the Romans and partook of the fortunes of their empire. The canton Schweiz has given name to the whole confederacy. — The present national council is elected every third year, at the rate of one member for 2000 persons. The president of the confederation of the 22 cantons is elected annually. The revised federal constitution was voted 19 April, 1874. See Referendum. Area, 15,976 sq. miles. Population, Dec. 1860, 2,507,170; 1870, 2,669,147; 1880, 2,846,102; June 1888, 2,917,754; Dec. 1900, 3,313,817. TABERNACLE, the Holy Place of the Israelites, till the erection of Solomon's temple, was constructed by Divine direction, 1491 B.C. The tabernacle set up at Shiloh by Joshua, 1444 B.C. was replaced by the temple erected by Solomon, 1004 B.C. The chapel erected for George Whitefield in Moorfields in 1741, being of a temporary nature, received the name of Tabernacle, which was afterwards given to their chapels by the Calvinistic Methodists. Whitefield's Tabernacle in Tottenham-court-road was erected in 1756, and enlarged in 1760. His lease expired in 1828; the chapel was opened by the Independents in 1830, taken down in 1890, and a new chapel erected on the site. A large metropolitan tabernacle, erected for the ministrations of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon (died, 31 Jan. 1892), in Newington Butts, was opened on 31 March, 1861; burnt down, 20 April, 1898; rebuilt, 1899.

TALAVERA DE LA REYNA (central Spain), was taken from the Mahometans by Ordoño, king of Leon, 913. Here a battle was fought 27, 28 July, 1809, between the united British and Spanish armies under sir Arthur Wellesley, and the French army commanded by marshals Victor and Sebastiani. After a conflict on the 27th, both armies remained on the field during the night, and the French at break of day renewed the attack, and were again repulsed by the British with great slaughter. At noon Victor charged the whole British line, was repulsed at all points, and retreated with a heavy loss. As Soult, Ney, and Mortier were in the rear, the British retired after the victory.

TALKING-MACHINE, see Automatons.

TALLY OFFICE in the Exchequer took its name from the French word tallier, to cut. A tally is a piece of wood written upon both sides, containing an acquittance for money received; which, being cloven asunder by an officer of the exchequer, one part, called the stock, was delivered to the person who paid, or lent, money to the government; and the other part, called the counter-stock, or counter-foil, remained in the office, to be kept till called for, and joined with the stock. This manner of striking tallies is very ancient. — Beaton. The practice was ordered to be discontinued in 1782. See Exchequer. On 16 Oct. 1834, the houses of parliament were burnt down by too many of these tallies being used in heating the stoves in the house of lords.

TALMUD (from lamad, to teach), the compendium of ancient Jewish oral or unwritten law, as distinguished from the Pentateuch, or written law; its origin is coeval with the return from the Babylonish captivity, 536 B.C. Its compilation in Hebrew was begun by the Scribes, and by their successors the work was carried on till 220 B.C. It is composed in prose and poetry, and contains two elements, legal and legendary. The morality resembles that of the New Testament, and the philosophy is rather Platonic than Aristotelian.

The Mishna, comprising the work of the rabbis, termed Tannaim, was compiled by Jehuda Hanassi, in the middle of the second century, A.D., and forms the Jerusalem Talmud, written at Tiberias, in Palestine, about 230. The Babylonian Talmud contains also the Gemara or Ghemara, the work of the rabbis termed Amoraim, criticisms and comments on the Mishna. The part named Halacha is dogmatic, legal, and doctrinal; the Agaba is illustrative, narrative, and legendary.

After being almost universally condemned, and the MSS. often burnt, the defence of the Talmud was undertaken by the German reformer Reuchlin, in the 16th century, and between 1520 and 1523, the "Talmud Babylonicum," in 12 vols. fol., and the "Talmud Hierosolymitanum," in one vol. fol., were printed at Venice. A discourse on the Talmud, was given at the Royal Institution, 15 May, 1868, by Mr. Emanuel Deutsch, whose article in the "Quarterly Review," Oct. 1867, had attracted much attention.

Vol. I. of the first English translation of the Jerusalem Talmud by Dr. Moise Schwab, appeared in 1885; he had published part of a French translation.

TANCRED'S CHARITIES. Valuable exhibitions for students at Cambridge are maintained by Christopher Tancred's endowment, 1721; established by chancery, 1757.

TANDY ARREST. James Napper Tandy proposed a plan of reform in 1791. In the French expedition against Ireland he acted as a general, Aug. 1798. After its failure he fled to Hamburg, and was there delivered up to the English, 24 Nov.; for which Bonaparte declared war upon Hamburg, 15 Oct. 1799. Tandy was liberated after the peace of Amiens in 1802.

TANGANYIKA, a lake of eastern central Africa, 420 miles in length, 15 to 80 miles in breadth. Discovered by Speke and Burton, 1858. The supposition that the lake belonged to the basin of the Nile was disproved by Livingstone and Stanley, 1871. Cameron, 1874, discovered an outlet, the Lukuga, on the west side of the lake, which Stanley, in 1876, proved to be a communication with the Lualaba or Upper Congo.

TANGIER (Morocco, N.W. Africa), besieged by prince Ferdinand of Portugal, who was beaten and taken prisoner, 1437. It was conquered by Alfonso V. of Portugal in 1471, and given as a dowry to princess Catherine, on her marriage with Charles II. of England, 1662; who, in 1683, caused the works to be blown up, and the place abandoned. Tangier afterwards became a piratical station. See Morocco.

TANISTRY (in Ireland), the equal division of lands, after the decease of the owner, amongst his sons, legitimate or illegitimate. If one of the sons died, his son did not inherit, but a new division was made by the taniist or chief. Abolished 1604.

TANJORE (W. India). About 1678, Vencajee, a Mahratta chief, brother of the great Sevajee, made himself rajah. In 1749 a British expedition endeavoured to restore a deposed rajah without success; the reigning prince bought them off by the cession of territories. Much intervention ensued. In 1799 the company obtained possession of the country, engaging to support the rajah with nominal authority. The last is said to have died in 1855.

TANNENBERG (E. Prussia). Here Ladislaus V. Jagellon of Poland defeated the Teutonic knights with great slaughter, the grand master being among the slain, 15 July, 1410. The order never recovered from this calamity.

TANNHÄUSER, the name of one of Wagner's operas, founded on the German legend of the hero of that name.

TANNING leather with the bark of trees was early practised. Great improvements have been made in tanning by chemical processes.

TANTALUM, a rare metal, discovered in an American mineral by Hatchett, in 1801, and named by him columbium; and in a Swedish mineral by Ekeberg, who gave it its present name. Wollaston pointed out the identity of the two metals in 1809; and Berzelius prepared pure metallic tantalum in 1824. In 1846 Rose discovered that tantalum was really a mixture of three metals, which he named tantalum, niobium, and pelopium.—Gmelin.

TANZIMAT, see Turkey, 1839-44.

TAOISM, one of the three religions of China. The name is derived from the Tao, a treatise written by Li Urh, or Laou-ti, a contemporary of Confucius in the sixth century B.C. "Way" is the quiet, passionless duty, "Heaven" not being a pattern. Taoism was modified by the influence of Buddhism.

TAPESTRY. An art of weaving from the Saracens, and hence its origin in France were called Sarazinois. The tapestry hangings belongs [the date mentioned] to the Netherlands.—Guicciardini factured in France under Henry II. invited from Flanders, 1606. The art into England by William Sheldon; manufactory of it was established at sir Francis Crane, 17 James I. 16 Under Louis XIV. the art of tapestry improved in France; see Gobelin Tapestry early instances of making tapestry are the ancient poets, and also in Scripture Saracens' manufacture is a revival of the tapestry said to have been wrought queen of England, see Bayeux Tapestry.

Italy) founded by the Greek Phalantus, a people of Tarentum assisted by Pyrrhus of Epirus, supported a war which had been begun B.C. 281 by the Romans, to avenge the Tarentines had offered to their ships their harbours; it was terminated after 300,000 prisoners were taken, and Tarentum subject to Rome. Except the citadel was captured by Hannibal, 212, but not by Fabius, 209 B.C. Tarentum has seen the revolutions of Southern Italy, and remains.

TARGUMS or EXPLANATIONS, to certain ancient Chaldean paraphrases of the Testament. The most remarkable are Onkelos, Jonathan-ben-Uzziel, and Joseph the Blind. The Targum of Onkelos is referred by some writers to the first century A.D.

TARIFA (S. Spain), the ancient Joza and Julia Traducta, where Muza landed when invading Spain, 712. It was taken from the Moors by Sancho IV. of Castile, 1291 or 1292; and was relieved, when besieged by them, after a great victory over the kings of Morocco and Granada, by Alfonso XI. of Castile and Alfonso IV. of Portugal, 28 or 30 Oct. 1340. The conflict is called the battle of Salado, having been fought on the banks of that river. Tarifa was taken by the French in 1823.

TARIFF (said to have been derived from Tarifa, where duties were formerly collected), a book of duties charged on goods exported or imported. Our tariff in 1840 comprised 1042 articles; the number was reduced (by sir Robert Peel) in 1845 and 1847. It comprised 439 articles in 1857; this number was greatly reduced in 1860. For Mr. McKinley's tariff bill, see United States, Oct. 1890.

TARIFF REFORM LEAGUE, inaugurated 21 July, 1903, for the employment of the tariff with a view to its use to consolidate and develop the resources of the Empire, and to defend the industries of the United Kingdom. The league, which is independent of political parties, carries on its propaganda by means of meetings, lectures, and literature on the subject; it also supports members of parliament and parliamentary candidates who are in favour of tariff reform. Branches of the league have been formed in every constituency in England and Wales, with the exception of the counties of Worcestershire, Warwick, Shropshire, and Staffordshire, which form the area worked by the Imperial tariff committee at Birmingham. President of the league, the duke of Sutherland. Sec., J. Ratcliffe Cousins; office, 7, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

TARPEIAN ROCK (Rome), owed its name to the tradition that Tarpeia, daughter of Tarpeius, the keeper of the Roman citadel, was here crushed to death by the shields cast on her by the Sabines, whom she treacherously admitted, having bargained for the gift of what they wore on their left arms, meaning their bracelets; about 750 B.C.

TARRAGONA (N.E. Spain), occupied as a naval station by the British before their capture of Gibraltar in 1704. It was stormed and sacked by the French under Suchet, 29 Jan. 1811, and the inhabitants put to the sword. Population, 1887, 27,225.

TARTAN or HIGHLAND PLAID, the dress of the Scottish Highlanders, said to have been derived from the ancient Gauls, or Celtæ, the Galli non braccati.

TARTARIC ACID is said to have been the first discovery of the eminent chemist, Scheele, who procured it in a separate state by boiling tar with lime, and in decomposing the tartrate of lime thus formed by means of sulphuric acid, about 1770. In 1859 baron Liebig formed tartaric acid from other sources.

TARTARY, a name given in the middle ages to a part of Central Asia and Eastern Europe, see Turkestan and Crimia. The Tatars, or Tartars, or Mongols, or Moguls, were known in antiquity as Scythians. During the decline of the Roman empire, these tribes began to seek more fertile regions; and the first who reached the frontier of Italy were the Huns, the ancestors of the modern Mongols. The first acknowledged sovereign of this vast country was the famous Genghis Khan. His empire, by the conquest of China, Persia, and all central Asia (1206-27), became one of the most formidable ever established; but it was split into parts in a few reigns. Timur, or Tamerlane, again conquered Persia, broke the power of the Turks in Asia Minor (1370-1400), and founded the Mogul dynasty in India, which began with Baber in 1525, and formed the most splendid court in Asia till the close of the 18th century; see Golden Horde. The Calmucks, a branch of the Tartars, expelled from China, settled on the banks of the Volga in 1672, but returned in 1771, and thousands perished on the journey.

The duke of Monmouth was proclaimed king at Taunton, 20 June, 1685; and it was the scene of the "bloody assize" held by Jeffreys upon the rebels in August. The castle restored and a fine museum opened by lord Cork, 21 May, 1902. Population, 1881, 16,614; 1891, 18,026; 1901, 21,078.

TAVERNS may be traced to the 13th century. "In the reign of king Edward the Third, only three taverns were allowed in London: one in Chepe, one in Walbrook, and the other in Lombard-street."—Spelman. The Boar's Head, in Eastcheap, existed in the reign of Henry IV., and was the rendezvous of prince Henry and his dissolute companions. Shakspeare mentions it as the residence of Mrs. Quickly, and the scene of Falstaff's merriment.—Shakspeare, "Henry IV." The White Hart, Bishopsgate, established in 1480, was rebuilt in 1829. Taverns were licensed in 1752.

Taverns were restricted by 7 Edward VI. 1552-3, to 40 in London, 8 in York, 4 in Norwich, 3 in Westminster, 6 in Bristol, 3 in Lincoln, 4 in Hull, 3 in Shrewsbury, 4 in Exeter, 3 in Salisbury, 4 in Gloucester, 4 in Chester, 3 in Hereford, 3 in Worcester, 3 in Southampton, 4 in Canterbury, 3 in Ipswich, 3 in Winchester, 3 in Oxford, 4 in Cambridge, 3 in Colchester, 4 in Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

TAXES were levied by Solon, the Athenian legislator, about 594 B.C. The first class of citizens paid an Attic talent of silver, about 55*l.* of our money. Darius, the son of Hystaspes, levied a land-tax by assessment, which was deemed so odious that his subjects styled him, by way of derision, Darius the Trader, 480 B.C.—D'Eon. Taxes in specie were first introduced into England by William I., 1067, and he raised them arbitrarily; yet subsidies in kind, as in wool, leather, and other products of the country, continued till the accession of Richard II., 1377.—Camden; see Revenue and Income Tax. "TAXES ON KNOWLEDGE" (see Advertisement Duty, Newspaper Stamp, and Paper Duty). For his exertions in repealing these, a testimonial was presented to Mr. T. Milner Gibson in 1861. The assessed taxes now include land tax, house duty, and property and income tax. The Taxes Management act, 43 & 44 Viet. c. 19, passed 6 Aug. 1880 (see below). Mr. Stephen Dowell's "History of Taxation and Taxes in England," published in 1884-8. The elder Wm. Pitt, in his great speech on the Stamp act imposed on the colonies without their consent, 1765-66, said that taxation and representation should go hand in hand. See Stamp Duties. The Statistical Abstract published annually by the government gives much information respecting taxation, revenue, and expenditure for 15 years. TE DEUM, a song of praise used by the Romish and English churches, beginning "Te Deum Laudamus—We praise thee, O God," supposed to be the composition of Augustin and Ambrose, about 390. The original music is very ancient.

TEETOTALER, a term applied to an abstainer from all fermented liquors, originated with Richard Turner, an artisan of Preston, who, contending for the principle at a temperance meeting about Sept. 1833, asserted "that nothing but te-tot-total will do." The word was immediately adopted. He died 27 Oct. 1846. These facts are taken from the "Staunch Teetotaler," edited by Joseph Livesey, of Preston (an originator of the movement in 1832, he died, aged 90, 2 Sept. 1884), Jan. 1867. See Energetics, Good Templars, Temperance, and United Kingdom.

TELEGRAPHONE, a development of the telephone and phonograph invented by Mr. Poulsen, a Dane, by which the voice may be directed to any number of points simultaneously, Nature, 17 May, 1900; another by Mr. Kumberg, reported, 27 Oct. 1900.

TELEGRAPHS (from the Greek, tele, afar, and grapho, I write). Æschylus, in his Agamemnon

(n.c. 500), describes the communication of intelligence by burning torches as signals. Polybius, the Greek historian (who died about 122 B.C.), calls the different instruments used by the ancients for communicating information, pyrsia, because the signals were always made by fire. In 1663, a plan was suggested by the marquis of Worcester, and a telegraph was suggested by Dr. Hooke, 1684. M. Amontons is also said to have been the inventor of telegraphs about this period. James II., while duke of York, originated a set of navy signals, which were systematised by Kempenfeldt in 1780; and a dictionary was compiled by sir Home Popham. M. Chappe then invented the telegraph first used by the French in 1792, and two were erected over the Admiralty-office, London, 1796. The semaphore was erected there 1816. The naval signals by telegraph enabled 400 previously concerted sentences to be transmitted from ship to ship, by varying the combinations of two revolving crosses. Baron Reuter's telegraph agency founded at Aix la Chapelle, 1851. Acts relating to telegraphs were passed in 1863 and 1866. The telegraph act, passed 31 July, 1868, enabled the postmaster-general to purchase existing electric telegraphs (not less than 1s. for a telegram, 20 words). Mr. Seudamore was appointed director, Jan. 1872. The principle of a 6rd. telegram adopted by the commons, 29 March, 1883, and enacted to come into operation 1 Oct. 1883; deferred; bill introduced by Mr. Shaw-Lefevre 30 March; act passed 14 Aug.; came into operation 1 Oct. 1885. Another telegraph act passed 28 June, 1892, and 1899. See Telephone. Great destruction of telegraph posts and wires by gale and snowstorm; London streets blocked by fallen wires 26-27 Dec. 1886. The Society of Telegraph Engineers founded 1871; held first general meeting, 28 Feb. 1872, Chas. Wm. Siemens, president; incorporated 1883. Present title "Institution of Electrical Engineers." See Electric Telegraph and Wireless Telegraphy, under Electricity and Telegraphs, under Post Office, 1869 et seq. The Telegraphic Journal began 15 Nov. 1873.

For wireless telegraphy, see Electricity.

TELEKOUFONON, or speaking telegraph, consisted of piping of gutta percha, caoutchouc, glass, or earthenware, with a terminal mouthpiece of ivory, bone, wood, or metal. It was used for dockyards and large establishments. It was described by Mr. Francis Whishaw at the meeting of the British Association August, 1848.

TEL-EL-KEBIR, Egypt, the s. entrenched camp of the rebel general, his force being about 17,500 regular cavalry, 6000 Bedouins and other irregulars; captured by the British 13 Sep.

Sir Garnet Wolseley broke up his camp at night of 12 Sept. and began his advance, his force being about 21,000 infantry, 240 guns; the troops marched rapidly. At daybreak they arrived at the camp, the Egyptians filled the trench well under cover; but when the parapets, they at first resisted afterwards fled, being hotly pursued cavalry, leaving all their guns, and in the hands of the victors. Thousands or made prisoners. Arabi Pasha fled. Arabi Pasha's army was completely the British entered Cairo the next British killed about 52, and 380 wounded killed and wounded about 1500. The bore the brunt of the action.

TELEMETER, &c., an instrument measuring the distance between a gun and a fired at. Lieut. von Ehrenberg and taudon, in Baden, constructed a tele of a watch, by which the distance is shown on a dial by the action of a Telepometer, another apparatus for the distance from point to point, in Luigi Cerebotani, was announced in two telescopes are employed.

TELEPATHY, "the supersensory of thoughts and feelings from one mind to the principal subject of "Phantasms" edited by Messrs. Edmund Gurney, F and Frank Podmore, and issued by psychological research about 30 Oct. 1897.

TELEPHONE (from Greek, telos, voice, sound), a name now given to transmitting articulate and music means of wire, vibrating rods, thread electricity. See Electrophone [in a city], Phonograph, Microphone, Pho

TEMPLARS. The military order of "soldiers of the temple," to protect pilgrims, was founded about 1118 by Baldwin II., king of Jerusalem, confirmed by pope Honorius II., 1128. The Templars were numerous in several countries, and came to England before 1185. Their wealth having excited the cupidity of the French kings, the order was suppressed by the council of Vienne, and part of its revenues was bestowed upon other orders about 1312. Numbers of the order were tried, condemned, and burned alive or hanged in 1308-10, and it suffered much persecution throughout Europe; 68 knights were burnt at Paris, 1310. Pope Clement V. abolished the order, April, 1312. The grand master Molay was burnt alive at Paris, 18 March, 1314. Their property in England was given to the Hospitallers, and the head of the order in England died in the Tower. See Good Templars.

TEMPLE (London), the dwelling of the Knights Templars, consecrated by Heraclius, patriarch of Jerusalem, 1185, at the suppression of the order, was purchased by the professors of the common law, and converted into inns, 1311, afterwards called the Inner and Middle Temple. THAMES EMBANKMENT: recommended by Sir Christopher Wren, 1666, and by Wm. Paterson, founder of the bank of England, about 1694. The corporation embanked a mile in 1767. It was further recommended by Gwynne, 1767; by Sir Frederick Eden, 1798; by Sir Frederick Trench, 1824; by James Walker; by the duke of Newcastle, 1844; and by John Martin the painter, 1856. In 1860, the Metropolitan Board of Works recommended that the north bank of the Thames should be embanked, whereby the bed of the river would be improved; a low-level sewer could be easily constructed beneath a broad roadway; docks to be constructed within the embankment wall; the expense to be defrayed by the city duties on coal, and by means provided by government. The principle of this recommendation was approved by parliament, and a committee was appointed, which sat for the first time, 30 April, 1861

THEATRES IN ENGLAND. The first royal edict for a theatre in England was in 1574, to or Burbage and four others, servants of the of Leicester, to act plays at the Globe, Bank.

It is stated the first play-house in London erected at Shoreditch, and called the "Theatre" 576, and that the Curtain near it, was erected 577. The Blackfriars was built in 1596. The London theatres in Elizabeth's reign were the Friars, Rose, Hope, Swan, Red Bull, Cockpit Phoenix, and several others. Shakespeare and fellow actors erected the Globe theatre on Bank, about 1594. The prices of admission are said to have been—gallery, 2d.; lords' rooms, 1s.; see ama, Drury Lane, and other theatres. The theatres were closed by parliament, 1642-60.

The first play-bill was dated 8 April, 1662, and issued from Drury-lane; it runs thus: "By his Majesty's his company of comedians at the New Theatre in Drury-lane, will be acted a comedy called the Humorous Lieutenant." After detailing the characters, it concludes thus: "The play will begin at three o'clock exactly" . . . 8 April, 1663

THEATRICAL FUNDS. The Theatrical fund of Covent Garden was established in 1760, incorporated 1774; that of Drury Lane by Garrick 1766; incorporated 1775. They grant pensions to members and their families. The Royal General Theatrical fund was established in 1839, incorporated 1853.
 The Theatrical Mission and Institute for the benefit of theatrical employes, started in 1876. The princess Christian inaugurated for them "Macready" house, Covent Garden 30 Nov. 1887.

THEATROGRAPH, see Kinetoscope, March, 1896.

THEATROPHONE, a form of the telephone specially adapted for hearing theatrical performances at a distance. The apparatus of the "compagnie du theatrophone" of Paris was exhibited at the Savoy hotel, and by its means the performance of the "Nautch Girl" at the Savoy theatre was said to be well heard, 11 Dec. 1891. The Electro-phone Company, London, has many subscribers, 1905.

THEBAN LEGION, according to tradition, was composed of Christians, and submitted to marty-dom rather than attack their brethren during the persecution of the emperor Maximin, or sacrifice to the gods, about A.D. 286. Their leader Maurice was canonised.

THEBES or LUXOR, in Upper Egypt, called also Diospolis, as being sacred to Jupiter. Homer.
 Its foundation is mythically attributed to Osiris. It is said to have been the magnificent capital of Egypt about 1600 B.C., having a circuit of about 14 geographical miles. It was then the chief seat of the worship of Ammon, or Ammoun, the Zeus Ammon of the Greeks, and the Jupiter Ammon of the Romans, and hence was called No Ammon by the Hebrews. Thebes was ruined by Cambyases, king of Persia, 525 B.C., and by the foundation of Alexandria, 332 B.C.; it rebelled and was taken by Ptolemy Lathyrus, 86 B.C., and few traces of it were seen in the age of Juvenal; see Memnonium. After centuries of neglect, its wonderful ruins have been greatly visited since the explorations of Belzoni, 1817. — The tombs of Amenophis II. abt. 1500 B.C., XVIII. dynasty, and 7 other royal mummies, discovered by M. Loret in perfect preservation, March, 1898. THEBES, N. Greece (the capital is mythically said to have been founded by Cadmus.) The legendary history of Edipus and his family, celebrated by the Greek tragic poets, belongs to Thebes. It became a republic about 1120 B.C., and flourished under Epaminondas 378-362 B.C. The "sacred band" formed by him, 377 B.C., was revived in 1877. Thebes' seven gates are mentioned by Homer. See Baotia and Greece. Thebes suffered much by earthquake shocks, end of May, 1893, and was nearly destroyed by earthquakes, 20 April et seq. 1894; active relief measures were organized.

Funerary temple or mortuary chapel of king Mentukhep III., of the XIII. dynasty, 2500 B.C., the oldest temple at Thebes, discovered by M. Edouard Neville and Mr. H. R. Hall working on the site of Deir-el-Bahari, in connection with the excavations of the Egypt Exploration Fund, during the winter season of 1903-4. The temple, in an exceptionally good state of preservation, and the best preserved of the few Egyptian temples in situ of earlier date than the XVIIIth dynasty, is situated near to the beautiful temple erected by queen Hatshepsu (or Hatasu), of the XVIIIth dynasty. Many results of great importance to the knowledge of Egyptian art and architecture and their development, raised by this discovery (see Times, 23 April, 1904). Further excavations; interesting discoveries of sarcophagi, statues, reliefs, &c., made in the temple during the winter of 1904-5.

THEFT was punished by heavy fines among the Jews; by death at Athens, by the laws of Draco; see Draco. The Anglo-Saxons nominally punished theft with death, if above 12*d.* value; but the criminal could redeem his life by a ransom. In the 9th of Henry I. this power of redemption was taken away, 1108. The punishment of theft was very severe in England, till mitigated by Peel's acts 9 & 10 Geo. IV. 1829. The laws respecting theft were consolidated in 1862. Larceny act passed 14 Aug. 1896; another passed, 2 Aug. 1901.

THEISTS (Theos, God), a name given to deists about 1660.—Dean Martin. See Deism, Unitarians, and Voysey.

THELLUSSON'S WILL, a most singular document. Mr. Peter Isaac Thellusson, a Genevese and an affluent merchant of London, left 100,000*l.* to his widow and children; and the remainder of his property, more than 600,000*l.*, he left to trustees, to accumulate during the lives of his three sons, and the lives of their sons; then the estates, directed to be purchased with the produce of the accumulated fund, were to be conveyed to the eldest lineal male descendant of his three sons, with the benefit of survivorship. Should no heir then exist, the whole was to be applied, by the agency of the sinking fund, to the discharge of the national debt. It is said that Mr. Thellusson held much property in trust, and that he desired a sufficient interval of time to elapse for the appearance of just claimants. He died 21 July, 1797. His will incurred much public censure, and was contested by the heirs-at-law, but finally established by a decision of the house of lords, 25 June, 1805. The last surviving grandson died in Feb. 1856. A dispute then arose whether the eldest male descendant or the male descendant of the eldest son should inherit the property. The question was decided on appeal by the house of 1859), in favour of the latter, by and Charles S. Thellusson confirmed of the Master of the Rolls in 1858. of the legal expenses the property is ceded greatly its value in the testator 28 July, 1800, the Thellusson act straining testators from devising the purposes of accumulation for longer after death; any other direction to

The mode of construction by substituting quicksilver for spirits was invented some years subsequently. Halley proposed it in 1697.

Mr. L. M. Casella issued a minimum thermometer in Sept. 1861. It registers degrees of cold by means of mercury. Mr. Casella made many improvements in thermometers, &c., and died, 23 April, 1897.

Negretti and Zambra's registering minimum thermometers, adapted for deep-sea purposes, made known early in 1874.

Letter from Mr. James J. Hicks, of London, stating that since 1861, he makes about 250,000 or more thermometers of all kinds, annually, hundreds of which are tested at the Kew Observatory, and are superior to those of foreign manufacture, Times, 23 March, 1897.

THERMOPHONE, in which sonorous vibrations are produced by the expansion of heated bodies connected with an electro-magnet. The apparatus was constructed by Theodor Wieselndanger, and described by him in October, 1878.

THERMOPYLÆ (Doris, N. Greece). Leonidas, at the head of 300 Spartans and 700 Thespians, at the defile of Thermopylæ, withstood the whole force of the Persians during three days, 7, 8, 9 Aug. 480 B.C., when Ephialtes, a Trachinian, perfidiously leading the enemy by a secret path up the mountains, brought them to the rear of the Greeks, who, thus placed between two assailants, perished gloriously on heaps of their slaughtered foes. One Greek only returned home, and he was received with reproaches for having fled.* Here Antiochus the Great, king of Syria, was defeated by the Romans, 191 B.C.

THERMUM, THERMUS, or THERMA (Greece), a strong city, the Acropolis of Ætolia, N. Greece, was captured and ravaged by Philip V. of Macedon, 218 and 206 B.C., on account of its favouring the Romans.

THESAURUS (treasury), a title given in the 17th and 18th centuries to large collections of small works on history and archaeology. The most celebrated are—

"Thesaurus Antiquitatum Græcorum," by J. Gronovius. 13 vol. fol. 1697-1702
"Thesaurus Antiquitatum Romanorum," by J. G. Grævius. 12 vol. fol. 1694

* The distich, in the Greek Anthology, by Simonides, their contemporary, is thus translated by Bowles:—
"Go, tell the Spartans, thou that passest by,
That here, obedient to their laws, we lie."

"Thesaurus Antiquitatum et Historicum Italie, Siciliæ," &c., by G. Grævius and P. Burnannus. 45 vol. fol. 1725
"Thesaurus Antiquitatum Sacrarum," by B. Ugo-linus. 34 vol. fol. 1744-09

THESPLÆ, a city of Bœotia, N. Greece. 700 of its citizens perished with Leonidas at Thermopylæ, Aug. 480 B.C. It suffered through the jealousy of the Thebans, who destroyed its walls in 372 B.C.

THESSALONICA (now Salonica), a city in Macedonia, N. Greece, originally Therme, but rebuilt by Cassander, and said to have been named after his wife, Thessalonica, daughter of Philip, after 315 B.C. Here Paul preached, 53; and to the church here he addressed two epistles in 54. In consequence of seditions, a frightful massacre of the inhabitants took place in 390, by order of the emperor Theodosius. Thessalonica partook of the changes of the Eastern empire. Thessalonica was taken by the Saracens, with great slaughter, 30 July, 904; by the Normans of Sicily, 15 Aug. 1185; and after various changes was taken from the Venetians by the Turks under Amurath, 1430. Population, 1885, 159,000; 1901, about, 105,000.

A young Bulgarian Christian girl, said to be an unwilling convert to Mahometanism, was rescued from the Turks and taken to the American consul's, 5 May; riots ensued on 6 May; the German and French consuls, Abbott and Moulin, were murdered; the Western powers intervened; reparation was ordered by the Sultan; several murderers were executed 16 May; other persons were imprisoned; and 40,000, said to be paid to the families of the victims, Aug. 1876.

Destructive fire; 10,000 persons homeless; the mosque and church, &c., destroyed; estimated loss, 800,000, 4 Sept., see Mansion House Fund, 1890.

Dynamite plot and outrage, Ottoman bank, and other buildings destroyed by bombs, many people killed and injured, 28 April, 1903.

THESSALY (N. Greece), the seat of many of the adventures described by the poets. The first king of whom we have any certain knowledge was Hellen, son of Deucalion, from whom his subjects were called Hellenists, a name afterwards extended to all Greeks. From Thessaly came the Achæans, the Ætolians, the Dorians, the Hellenes, &c. The two most remarkable events in the early history of this country are the deluge of Deucalion, 1548 B.C., and the expedition of the Argonauts, 1263 B.C.; see them severally. Thessaly long aimed at neutrality in Grecian affairs, but became involved through its rulers, the tyrants of Phære;—Lycophron, about 404 B.C.; his son Jason, 374, assassinated 370; Alexander, the most eminent, defied Athens and Thebes; assassinated 359. Philip of Macedon, after a defeat (353 B.C.), gained a victory over the tyrants, 352; and subjugated the country wholly, 343. The Romans gave a nominal freedom to Thessaly after their victory at Cynoscephalæ, 197. It is now included in the kingdom of Greece by the treaty of 24 May, signed 2 July, and occupied Aug.—Sept. 1881. Railway from Volo to Larissa the capital, opened by the king, 4 May, 1884. See Inundations, 1883; Greco-Turkish War and Greece, 1897-8.

THETFORD (Norfolk), said to have been the Roman Sitomagus, and an important Saxon town, was a bishopric from 1075 to 1091, when the see was removed to Norwich. It was made a suffragan bishopric by Henry VIII.; the power given him 1534. Dr. A. T. Lloyd (bp. of Newcastle, 1903); Dr. J. P. A. Bowers, 29 June, 1903. Pop. 1891, 4,247; 1901, 4,600.

THIBET or TIBET (central Asia), is said to have been a kingdom 313 B.C., conquered by Genghis Khan 1206, and gradually subdued by and annexed to China, 1255-1720. Buddhism, introduced about 639, became the dominant religion about 905; and the Lamas have absolute power in religious and temporal affairs. Thibet was visited by Marco Polo, 1278; by Jesuits about 1661-2; Bogle and Hamilton, 1774; and Thomas Manning, 1810. An astronomical survey was carried on surreptitiously by two pundits of semi-Thibet origin, under the superintendence of capt. Montgomerie, 1865-7. War with Nepal, May; peace, June, 1884. Hon. Colman Macaulay's expedition to Lachen valley, to promote commerce; well received, announced 30 Nov. 1884.

THIEVES' ISLAND, see Ladrones.

THIEVES' SYNOD, at Ephesus, 349 or 449, where the doctrines of Eutyches respecting Christ's incarnation were approved, received the name because his opponents were silenced or excluded.

THIMBLES are said to have been found at Herculaneum, and long ago used by the Chinese. Their invention in Europe is traditionally ascribed to Nicolas van Benschoten, of Amsterdam, in the 17th century. The art of making them was brought to England by John Lofting, a mechanic, from Holland, who set up a workshop at Islington, near London, and practised the manufacture in various metals with profit and success, about 1695.

A Thimble League patronised by queen Victoria 1886; the object being to provide employment for distressed needlewomen; there was a sale of the work at lady Winchelsea's house, 23, Ennismore-gardens, 24-25 Oct. 1888.

THIONVILLE, the ancient Theodonis villa, a fortified city on the Moselle, N. E. France. It was the occasional residence of Charlemagne and his successors, and on the extinction of his race it was successively held by private lords, the counts of Luxemburg, the dukes of Burgundy, the house of Austria, and the kings of Spain. It was taken by the duke of Guise, 23 June, 1558, after an obstinate defence, and returned to Philip II. by the peace of Cateau-Cambrésis. It successfully resisted the marquis de Feuquières in 1637, but was taken after four months' siege by the due d'Enghien, 10 Aug. 1643, and remained with France. It successfully resisted the Austrians in 1792, and the Prussians in 1814. It was invested by the Germans in Aug. 1870, and after bombardment, being in flames, surrendered 24 Nov. following.

THIRTEEN CLUB, about 130 members, formed in London, Oct. 1889, to counteract vulgar prejudices respecting unlucky numbers, days, &c.

THIRTY TYRANTS, a term applied to the governors of Athens, in 404 B.C., who were expelled by Thrasybulus, 403; and also to the numerous aspirants to the imperial throne of Rome during the reigns of Gallienus and Aurelian, A.D. 259-274.

THIRTY YEARS' WAR, in Germany, between the catholics and protestants. It began in Bohemia in 1618, and ended with the peace of Westphalia in 1648. It is renowned for the victories of Wallenstein and Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, and for its history by Schiller, published 1790-93. See Battles, 1618-48.

THISTLE,* ORDER OF THE, SCOTLAND, founded by James V. 1540. It consisted originally

* Some Scottish historians make the origin of this order very ancient. The abbot Justinian says it was of himself, as sovereign, and twelve knights, in imitation of Christ and his twelve apostles. In 1542, James died, and the order was discontinued, about the time of the Reformation. The order was renewed by James VII. of Scotland and II. of England, by making eight knights, 29 May, 1687; increased to twelve by queen Anne in 1703; to sixteen by George IV. in 1827. The original knights of 1687 were killed in a duel, 1712.

John, marquis of Athol.

James, earl of Arran, afterwards duke of Hamilton;

Alexander, earl of Moray.

James, earl of Perth; attained.

Kenneth, earl of Seaforth; attained.

George, earl of Dumbarton.

John, earl of Melfort; attained.

THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, ST. (Southwark), was founded as an almshouse by Richard, prior of Bermondsey, in 1213, and surrendered to Henry VIII. in 1538. In 1551 the mayor and citizens of London, having purchased of Edward VI. the manor of Southwark, including this hospital, repaired and enlarged it, and admitted into it 260 poor, sick, and helpless objects; upon which the king, in 1553, incorporated it, together with Bethlehem, St. Bartholomew's, &c. It was rebuilt in 1693. In 1862, the site was sold to the South-eastern railway company, and the patients were removed to the Surrey music hall. The foundation stone of the new hospital, erected at Stangate, near the Surrey side of Westminster-bridge, was laid by queen Victoria, 13 May, 1868; and the new hospital was opened by her majesty, 21 June, 1871.

THOMITES or TOMITES, a body of enthusiasts who assembled at Boughton, near Canterbury. An insane Cornish publican named John Nicholls, called Thom, or Tom, assumed the name of sir W. Courtenay, knight of Malta and king of Jerusalem, came into Kent, was an unsuccessful candidate for parliament, and incited the rabble against the Poor Law act. On 31 May, 1838, a farmer of the neighbourhood, whose servant had joined the crowd which attended Thom, sent a constable to fetch him back; but on his arrival on the ground he was shot dead by Thom. The military were then called out, and lieut. Bennett proceeded to take the murderer into custody; but Thom advanced, and, firing a pistol, killed the lieutenant on the spot.

Instituted by Achaius I. of Scotland, 809, when that monarch made an alliance with Charlemagne, and then took for his device the thistle. It is stated that the king Hungus, the Piet, had a dream, in which St. Andrew made a midnight visit, and promised him a sure victory over his foes, the Northumbrians; and that the next day St. Andrew's Cross (x) appeared in the air, and the Northumbrians were defeated. On this story, it is said, Achaius framed the order more than 700 years before James V.

THORINUM, a very rare metal (a heavy gray powder), discovered by Berzelius in 1828.

THORN (on the Vistula, Poland) was founded by the Teutonic Knights in 1231. Here they acknowledged themselves to be vassals of Poland in 1466. Thorn was taken by Charles XII. of Sweden in 1703. Many protestants were slain here (after a religious riot) at the instigation of the Jesuits, 7 Dec. 1724. Thorn was acquired by the Prussians in 1793; taken by the French in 1806; restored to Prussia at the peace in 1815. Population, 1890, 27,007.

THOROUGH. The name given by Thos. Wentworth, earl of Strafford, to his unsuccessful scheme for making Charles I. an absolute monarch. He was attainted and beheaded, 12 May, 1641.

THORPE, see Railway Accidents, 1874.

THOUGHT READING. In 1881 Mr. W. Irving Bishop professed to be able to read a person's thoughts by touching some part of the skin. On June 11 in the presence of Mr. G. J. Romanes, professor E. Ray Lankester, Mr. F. Galton, and others; he was successful with some persons, and failed with others (Nature, No. 608).

In 1883 he was challenged by Mr. Labouchere, M.P., to operate under certain conditions, at St. James's Hall on 12 June, but virtually declined the tests. Other experiments by Mr. Bishop, 3, 4 June, 1884; success doubted.

Mr. Bishop sentenced to pay 10,000*l.* damages to Mr. Maskelyne for libel in Truth (23 July, 1884), 15 Jan.; appeal disallowed, 28 Jan.; damages reduced to 500*l.*, 2 July, 1885. He died of cataplexy at New York, 13 May, 1889.

fices to their goddess Kali or Bhowain. The English commenced suppressing them about 1810, but did not succeed till about 1830, when a plan for the purpose was adopted by lord Wm. Bentinck.

THUMB-SCREW, an instrument used in the first stages of torture by the Spanish inquisition. In Great Britain, rev. Wm. Carstares, a presbyterian minister, was the last who suffered by it, before the Scotch privy council, to make him divulge secrets entrusted to him, which he firmly resisted. After the revolution in 1688, the thumb-screw was presented to him by the council. King William expressed a desire to see it, and tried it on, bidding the doctor to turn the screw; but, at the third turn, he cried out "Hold—hold! doctor: another turn would make me confess anything."

THUNDERER, see Navy of England, 1872, 1876, 1879.

THUNDERING LEGION. During a contest with the invading Marcomanni, the prayers of some Christians in a Roman legion are said to have been followed by a storm of thunder, lightning, and rain, which tended greatly to discomfit the enemy; and hence the legion received the name, 174.

THURII or THURIUM, a Greek city, S. Italy, founded after the fall of Sybaris, about 443 B.C. It suffered from the incursions of the Lucanians, by whom the Thuriens were severely defeated, 390 B.C. It became eventually a dependent ally of Rome; was ravaged by the troops of Hannibal, 204; was established as a colony by the Romans, 194; and was captured by Spartacus in the Servile war, who levied upon it heavy contributions, 72.

THURINGIA, an early Gothic kingdom in central Germany, was overrun by Attila and the Huns, 451; the last king, Hermanfried, was defeated and slain by Thierry, king of the Franks, who annexed it to his dominions, 530. It formed two duchies, 630-717, and 849-919; a margraviate, 960-1090; landgraviate and county, 1130-1247; and was, after various changes and many conflicts, absorbed into Saxony in the 15th century. In 1815 it was surrendered to Prussia.

THURLES (S. Ireland). Here was held a synod of the Roman catholic archbishops, bishops, inferior clergy, and religious orders, under the direction of archbishop Cullen, the Roman catholic primate, 22 Aug. 1850. It condemned the Queen's Colleges, and recommended the foundation of a Roman catholic university, 10 Sept. following. The acts were forwarded to Rome for approval of the pope, Pius IX., and published, 1 Jan. 1852.

THUROT'S INVASION. Thurot, an Irish commodore in the French service, became a terror to all the merchant-ships of this kingdom. He had the command of a small armament, and landed 1000 men at Carriekfergus in Ireland, and plundered the town. He reached the Isle of Man, and was overtaken by captain Elliot, with three frigates, who engaged his little squadron, which was taken, and the commodore killed, 28 Feb. 1760. Thurot's true name was O'Farrell. His grandfather had followed the fortunes of James II.; but his mother being of a family of some dignity in France, he assumed her name.—Burns.

THURSDAY, the fifth day of the week, named from Thor, the most valiant son of Odin, a deified hero worshipped by the northern nations, particularly by the Scandinavians and Celts. His authority was said to extend over the winds, seasons, thunder and lightning, &c. Thursday is in Latin dies Jovis, or Jupiter's day.

THYATIRA (Asia Minor), the place assigned for the battle at which the rebel Procopius was defeated by the army of the emperor Valens, 366. See Seven Churches.

THYMBRA (Asia Minor). Here Cyrus the Great defeated the confederate army aiding Croesus, and obtained supremacy in Asia, B.C. 548.

TIARA, head ornament of the ancient Persians. The name is given to the triple crown of the pope (anciently called regnum), indicative of his civil rank, as the keys are of his ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The right to wear a crown is said to have been granted to the bishops of Rome by Constantine the Great, and by Clovis, founder of the French monarchy. Their ancient tiara was a high round cap. Pope Damasus II. first caused himself to be crowned with a tiara, 1048. "Boniface VIII. encompassed the tiara with a crown; Benedict XII. added a second; and John XXIII. a third."—Rees.

TIBER (central Italy), the river on whose banks Rome was built. In the flourishing times of the city the navigation of the river was enormous. Livy states that the Tiber was frozen over, 398 B.C. A commission was appointed to dredge the bed of the river near Rome, Dec. 1871. Garibaldi's scheme for improving the river, making a new port, &c., laid before the Italian parliament, 25 May, 1875; works begun, March, 1877.

TIBERIAS, a city in Palestine, built by Herod Antipas, and named after the emperor Tiberius, 39. Near it Guy de Lusignan, king of Jerusalem, and the crusaders, were defeated by Saladin, 3, 4 July, 1187; and Jerusalem fell into his hands.

TIBET, see Thibet.

TIBUR (now Tivoli), a Latin town more ancient than Rome, and frequently at war with it. The Tiburtines were defeated 335 B.C., and the subjection of all Latium followed; for which Furius Camillus obtained a triumph and an equestrian statue in the forum.

TICHBORNE CASE, see Trials, 1871-4. Dr. Kenealy, the claimant's counsel, elected M.P. for Stoke, moves for a royal commission to inquire into the trial; rejected, 433 to 3 (Dr. Kenealy, Mr. Whalley, and the O'Gorman); 26 April, 1875. See Englishman.

TIDES. Homer is the earliest ancient author who speaks of the tides. Posidonius of Apamea accounted for the tides from the motion of the moon, about 79 B.C.; and Caesar speaks of them in his fourth book of the Gallic war. The theory of the tides was first satisfactorily explained by Kepler, 1598; but the honour of a complete explanation of them was reserved for sir Isaac Newton, about 1683. Sir Wm. Thomson, at the Royal Institution, 9 April, 1875, described a valuable tide-calculating machine.

TIMES NEWSPAPER. Mr. John Walter published the first Daily Universal Register, price 2d. logographic system (invented by compositor), in which types and words were employed instead

- Jan. 1788, the paper was named the Times.
- 1803, when Mr. John Walter gave up the paper to his son John, the circulation was about 1000; that of the Morning Post being 4500.
- Mr. John Walter (I.), born, 1739; died, 16 Nov. 1812.
- Mr. Stoddart (satirised as Dr. Slop by Moore the poet) became editor in 1812, but five years after retired and set up in opposition the New Times, an unprofitable speculation. Thomas Barnes became next editor. He died 7 May, 1841, and was succeeded by his assistant John Thaddeus Delane (son of W. F. A. Delane, financial manager) who retired in 1877, and died 22 Nov. 1879.
- 28 Nov. 1814, the Times was first printed by steam power (the invention of F. König), 1200 per hour, afterwards increased to 2000 and 4000.
- It is asserted that the Times was termed the "Thunderer" in consequence of an article by Edward Sterling in which are the words, "We thundered forth articles on reform, &c." when Barnes was editor.
- 19 Jan. 1829, the first double number appeared.
- 17 July, 1834, an attack of Mr. O'Connell in the house of commons on the correctness of the reports of the debates in the Times was signally defeated.
- Shortly after began the convenient summary of the debates, written in the first instance by Mr. Horace Twiss.
- 1841 the Times was instrumental in detecting and exposing a scheme organised by Allan George Bogle and others, to defraud by forgery all the influential bankers of Europe. This brought on the proprietors an action for libel (in the case Bogle v. Lawson). The jury found the charge to be true, giving a verdict of one farthing damages, but the judges refused costs. Subscriptions were set on foot at the Mansion-house and in all parts of Europe to reimburse the proprietors for the immense outlay in defending the action. This they firmly declined; and the money was expended in establishing Times Scholarships at Oxford and Cambridge, and at Christ's Hospital, and other schools; a marble tablet also, commemorating the event, was set up in the Royal Exchange and at the Times office. These were the greatest honours ever conceded to a newspaper.
- In Oct. 1845, the Times express was for the first time conveyed to India overland, by the agency of Lieut. Waghorn.
- Of the number of the Times containing the life of the duke of Wellington for 19 Nov. 1852, 70,000 were sold—the ordinary number being then 36,000; the circulation is stated to vary from 50,000 to 60,000 (1868).
- The Times (a slip) announcing permission to relax restriction of issue of bank-notes, published 24 Oct. 1847.
- Mr. John Walter (II.) died 28 July, 1847.
- In 1854, the proprietors sent Mr. W. H. Russell as their special correspondent to the seat of war in the Crimea; in 1857 to India.
- Times Fund*.—On the 12th of Oct. 1854, Sir Robert Peel originated by a letter in the Times a subscription for the sick and wounded in the Crimean war, and in less than a fortnight 15,000l. were sent to the Times office to be thus appropriated. Mr. Macdonald was sent out by the proprietors as special commissioner to administer the fund, from which large quantities of food and clothing were supplied to the sufferers, with inestimable advantage; see Scutari and Nightingale.
- In Dec. 1858, the Times drew attention to the state of the houseless poor of London; and in a few days 8000l. were subscribed for their relief.
- In 1857, 13,000,000 copies were sold; in 1857, 16,100,000; in 1859, 16,900,000; in 1860, 16,670,000.
- The Times of 21 June, 1861, contained 4076 advertisements (about 1810 it contained 150 advertisements). Stereotypes from papier-mâché moulds introduced, 1856; much improved 1860.
- The "Walter press," invented by John Cameron Macdonald (aft. manager) and Joseph Calverley, prints about 15,000 an hour, perfected, 1862-71.
- A list of the contents, inserted over the first leader, appeared first, 3 Feb. 1869.
- 34 pages tables of metropolitan charities appeared 17 Feb. 1869.
- John Walter (IV.) drowned 24 Dec. 1870.
- Special train for conveying the Times, North-Western Railway, began to run, 4.55 a.m., 16 Feb. 1875.
- Annual summaries, 1851-75, reprinted, price 1s. (type set-up by composing-machines).
- 12,000 perfect sheets per hour printed by "Walter press," Jan. 1876.
- Weekly issue, price 2d., began, 5 Jan. 1877.
- The Rapiet electric lamp adopted in the machine-room, Nov. 1878.
- Summary of the Times published daily, 3d. about 26 July, 1883; stopped, Oct. 1884.
- Death of Thomas Chenery, six years editor, long correspondent, 11 Feb.; succeeded by G. E. Buckle, Feb. 1884.
- Death of Chas. Ross, aged 84, 63 years a parliamentary reporter and 30 years a chief, 6 Dec. 1884.
- Edwin Murray (watch dealer) v. Times, libel case, farthing damages, 26-27 Oct. 1886.
- Articles "Parnellism and Crime," published 7, 10, 14 March; article on Mr. Dillon, 2 May, declared by the commons not to be a breach of privilege, 4-6 May, 1887.
- Centenary of the publication of the Times; special leader 2 Jan. 1888.
- O'Donnell v. Walter and another (see under Parnellites); verdict for the defendant, 2-3 July, 1888.
- No. 37,725 (5 April, 1886) published as a book at Leipzig with German notes by Dr. F. Landmann, Oct. 1888; the number for 14 Nov. 1888, published as a book at Paris, with French notes by M. M. A. & G. Elwall, Dec. 1889.

TOBACCO. Nicotiana tabacum, received its name from Tobacco, a province of Yucatan, New Spain; some say from the island of Tobago, one of the Caribbees; others from Tobasco, in the Gulf of Florida. It is said to have been first observed at St.
Domingo, in Cuba, 1492; and to have been used freely by the Spaniards in Yucatan in 1520.
Tobacco was either first brought to England in 1565, by sir John Hawkins; or by sir Walter Raleigh and sir Francis Drake, in 1586. It was manufactured only for exportation for some years.
Stow's Chron. The Pied Bull inn, at Islington, is said to have been the first house in England where tobacco was smoked. In 1584 a proclamation was issued against it. James I. published "A Counter-blaste against Tobacco," and the star-chamber ordered the duties to be 6s. 10d. per pound, 1614.
Its cultivation was prohibited in England by Charles II., 1684. Act laying a duty on the importation was passed 1684. The cultivation was allowed in Ireland, 1779. The tax was increased and put under the excise, 1789. Anderson; Ashe.
Various statutes have passed relative to tobacco.

Permission to grow tobacco in England with conditions granted by the Board of Trade, April, 1886.

Tobacco successfully cultivated by Messrs. James Carter and Co., near Bromley, Essex, Sept. 1886; and by others in 1887.

Duty per lb. on unmanufactured tobacco reduced from 3s. 6d. to 3s. 2d.; cigars 5s.; snuff 3s. 6d. or 4s. 6d.
1887; 1808-9, tobacco reduced 6d. per pound; 1900-1, increased 4d. per pound; 1904-5, stripped unmanu-factured tobacco increased from 3s. to 3s. 3d. per pound; foreign cigars increased from 5s. 6d. to 6s.

TOBAGO (West Indies), discovered by Columbus in 1498; settled by the Dutch 1642. Taken by the English, 1672; retaken, 1674. In 1748, it was declared a neutral island; but in 1763 it was ceded to the English. Tobago was taken by the French under De Grasse in 1781, and confirmed to them in 1783. Again taken by the English, 14 April 1793, but restored at the peace of Amiens, 6 Oct.
1802. The island was once more taken by the British under general Grinfield, 1 July, 1803, and was confirmed to them by the peace of Paris, in 1814. Population in 1887, 19,937. Tobago is one of the Windward isles, which see. Tobago was united with Trinidad by parliament in 1887.
Population of Tobago, 1891, 18,353.

TOBITSCHAU (Moravia). In a sharp action here, on 15 July, 1866, the Austrians were defeated by the army of the crown prince of Prussia with the loss of 500 killed and wounded and 500 prisoners, and seventeen guns.

TOBOGGANNING, the name of a sport very popular in Canada and the northern United States.
The toboggan in popular use for "coasting" is formed of a single plank curved backward in front and held in position by leather cords, and is guided by the foot of the steerman, which drags behind with the toe turned downward. International contests are held at Davos, Switzerland.

TOGOLAND, a large German West African territory between the Gold Coast and Dahomey, extending inland. Anglo-German delimitation expedition began work, autumn, 1901; finished, Aug. 1902.

stamped on the neck of the Spanish king. They were raised to the value of 5s. 6d. 14 Nov. 1811. Bank tokens were also current in Ireland, where those issued by the bank passed for 6s. and lesser sums until 1817. They were called in on the revision of the coinage. Tradesmen were permitted to issue tokens as small coins from 1648 till 16 Aug. 1672, when their circulation was prohibited by royal proclamation. These tokens are figured and described in a work by Wm. Boyne, 1858.

TOKIO, the name given to Jedo, the capital of Japan, about 1869. It is the residence of the mikado. Great fire; 5,000 houses destroyed, and 45 persons perish, 10 April, 1892. Another great fire, 600 houses destroyed; reported 14 Nov. 1892. See Jedo. Population, 1900, 1,507,642.

TOLBIAC (now ZULPICH), near the Rhine, where Clovis totally defeated the Allemanni, 496.

TOLEDO, the ancient Toletum (Central Spain), made capital of the Visigothic kingdom by Athanagild, 554; taken by the Saracens, 712. Toledo was taken after the war begun 1081, by Alfonso I. of Castile, 25 May, 1085. In 1088 the archbishop was made primate of Spain. The university was founded in 1499. Toledo sword-blades have been famed since the 15th century. Population, 1887, 20,837.

The alcazar, ancient Moorish palace, used by the emperor Charles V., destroyed by fire, 9-10 Jan. 1887.

TOLENTINO (Italy, formerly in the Papal states), where a treaty was made between the pope and the French, 19 Feb. 1797. Here Joachim Murat, having resumed arms against the allies, was defeated by the Austrians, 3 May, 1815, taken prisoner, and shot.

TOLERATION ACT, passed in 1689, to relieve Protestant dissenters from the church of England. Their liberties were, however, greatly endangered in the latter days of queen Anne, who died on the day that the Schism bill was to become a law, 1 Aug. 1714.

The toleration granted was somewhat limited. It exempted persons who took the new oath of allegiance and supremacy, and made also a declaration against popery, from the penalties incurred by absenting themselves from church and holding unlawful conventicles; and it allowed the quakers to substitute an affirmation for an oath, but did not relax the provi-

TONSURE, the clerical crown, adopted, it is said, in imitation of St. Peter, or of Christ's crown of thorns, was disapproved of in the fourth century as pertaining only to penitents, and not made essential till the end of the fifth or beginning of the sixth century.

TONTINES, loans given for life annuities with benefit of survivorship, invented by Laurence Tonti, a Neapolitan. They were first set on foot at Paris to reconcile the people to cardinal Mazarin's government, by amusing them with the hope of becoming suddenly rich, 1653. Voltaire. Tonti died in the Bastille after seven years' imprisonment. Three Irish tontines in 1773-77 had 3,500 members; the last public tontine in England was in 1789. New York tontine association, founded 1790, was wound up 1870-78. A Mr. Jennings was an original subscriber for a 100*l.* share in a tontine company; and being the last survivor of the shareholders, his share produced him 3000*l.* per annum. He died aged 103 years, 19 June, 1798, worth 2,115,244*l.*; see Alexandra Park.

By the termination of a tontine begun by M. Lafarges in 1791 to diminish the national debt the French government received 1,218,000 francs Dec. 1888.

TOOLS. Many of the tools in common use are described and represented in Rosellini's magnificent work, "Monumenti dell' Egitto e della Nubia," 1832-44. The tools used by Bezaleel and Aholiab in the construction of the tabernacle, described in Exodus xxxi. and xxxv. B.C. (1491), were doubtless Egyptian or Phœnician. In building Solomon's temple (1014-04) B.C., "there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard," the stone and other materials being previously prepared (1 Kings vi. 7). The invention of many tools is mythically ascribed to Daedalus, the Athenian artificer in the 14th century B.C. The multimplement invented by lord Wemyss combines many tools in a small compass; April, 1902.

TORBANEHILL MINERAL. Mr. Gillespie, of Torbanehill, granted a lease of all the coal in the estate to Messrs. Russell. In the course of working, the lessees extracted a combustible mineral of considerable value as a source of coal-gas, and realised a large profit in the sale of it as gas-coal. The lessor then denied that the mineral was coal, and disputed the right of the lessees to work it. At the trial in 1853 there was a great array of scientific men and practical gas engineers, and the evidence was most conflicting. One side maintained the mineral to be coal, the other that it was a bituminous schist. The judge set aside the scientific evidence, and the jury pronounced it to be coal. The authorities in Prussia have since pronounced it not to be coal. Percy.

TORDESILLAS (near Valladolid). Here was signed, 7 June, 1494, a treaty modifying the boundary line which pope Alexander VI. had assigned, in May, 1493, in his division of the new world between Spain and Portugal.

TORGAU (Saxony, N. Germany), the site of a battle between Frederick II. of Prussia and the Austrians, in which the former obtained a signal victory; the Austrian general, count Daun, being wounded, 3 Nov. 1760. He had, in 1757, obtained a great victory over the Prussian king. Torgau was taken by the allies in 1814; and given to Prussia, 1815.

TORIES, a term given to a political party about 1678; see Whig. Dr. Johnson defines a Tory as one who adheres to the ancient constitution of the state, and the apostolical hierarchy of the Church of England. The Tories long maintained the doctrines of "divine hereditary indefeasible right, lineal succession, passive obedience, prerogative," &c. Bolingbroke; see Conservatives. TORTURE was only permitted by the Romans the examination of slaves. It was applied to heretics by the Roman catholic clergy, and was used in England so late as 1640 (when Archer, who took part in an attack on Laud's palace, was hanged), and in Scotland until 1690. The trial by torture was abolished in Portugal, 1776; in France, by Louis XVI., in 1789; and in Sweden by Gustavus III., 1786. General Picton was convicted of allowing Louisa Calderon to be tortured in Trinidad, in accordance with the old law of the island, at his trials, 21 Feb. 1806, and 11 June, 1808.

TOUGHENED GLASS, see Glass.

TOUL, the Roman Tulli Leucorum, a fortified town on the Moselle, N.E. France, one of the most ancient in the empire. The city and diocese acquired great privileges from Charles the Simple, 925, when it was united with the German empire. It was reunited with France, 1552. The fortifications, begun in 1238, were rebuilt and enlarged in 1700, according to the plans of Vauban. After a vigorous resistance to the Germans, commencing 14 Aug. 1870, Toul surrendered with its garrison of 3000 men, 23 Sept., when the town was burning in twenty-three places. The Germans thus acquired an uninterrupted railway communication to Paris.

TOULON, the ancient Telo Martius (S. France), an important military port. It was taken by the constable of Bourbon, 1524, and by the emperor Charles V. in 1536. In 1707 it was bombarded by the allies, both by land and sea, by which almost the whole town was reduced to a heap of ruins, and several ships burned; but the allies were at last obliged to raise the siege. It surrendered 27 Aug. 1793, to the British admiral, lord Hood, who took possession both of the town and shipping, in the name of Louis XVII., under a stipulation to assist in restoring the French constitution of 1789. A conflict took place between the English and French forces, when the latter were repulsed, 15 Nov. 1793. Toulon was retaken by Bonaparte, 19 Dec., when great cruelties were exercised towards such of the inhabitants as were supposed to be favourable to the British.—A naval battle off this port was fought 11 Feb. 1744, between the English under Mathews and Lestock, against the fleets of France and Spain: in this engagement the brave captain Cornwall fell. The victory was lost by a misunderstanding between the English admirals. Mathews was afterwards dismissed for misconduct. Population in 1901, 101,172. See Cholera, 1884.

TOULOUSE, the ancient TOLOSA (S. France), founded about 615 B.C.; was the capital of the Visigothic kings in A.D. 419; and was taken by Clovis in 508. The dukes of Aquitaine reigned here, 631-761. A university was established here, 1229, and a parliament, 1302. The inquisition was established here to extirpate heretics, 1229. The troubadours, or rhetoricians of Toulouse, had their origin about 850, and consisted of a fraternity of poets, whose art was extended throughout Europe, and gave rise to the Italian and French poetry; see Troubadours. The allied British and Spanish army entered this city on 12 April, immediately after the BATTLE OF TOULOUSE, fought between the British Peninsular army under lord Wellington, and the French led by marshal Soult, 10 April, 1814. The French were forced to retreat, after twelve hours' fighting. Neither of the commanders knew that Napoleon had abdicated the throne of France. Population, 1886, 147,617; 1891, 148,220; 1901, 147,606.

TOULOUSE. The county was created out of the kingdom of Aquitaine by Charlemagne, in 778. It enjoyed great prosperity till the dreadful war of the Albigenses (which see), when the count Raymond VI. was expelled, and Simon de Montfort became count. At his death, in 1218, Raymond VII. obtained his inheritance. His daughter Jane and her husband, Alphonse (brother of Louis IX. of France), dying without issue, the county of Toulouse was united to the French monarchy in 1271. A large part of Toulouse destroyed by an inundation of the Garonne; St. Cyprien like a sepulchre; 23 June, 1875.

TOURAINÉ, the garden of France, was conquered by the Visigoths about 480. It was ceded to Geoffroy count of Anjou, 1044, and thus became the property of the Plantagenet kings of England. It was seized by Philip Augustus in 1203, and was made a duchy by John, 1360. It was finally united to the crown on the death of the duke of Anjou, 1584.

TOURNAMENTS, or JOUSTS, were martial sports of the ancient cavaliers. Tournament is derived from the French word tourner, "to turn round." Tournaments were frequent about 800; and were regulated by the emperor Henry I., about 919. Tournaments were introduced into England early in the 12th century; prohibited by Henry II., but revived by Richard I., his son. Solemn tournaments were held by Edward III., 25 Sept. 1329, in London; and 19 Jan. 1344, at Windsor; and by Richard II. in Smithfield, London, 10 Oct. 1319; and also by Henry VIII., in May 1513. The Lateran council published an article against their continuance in 1136. Henry II. of France, in a tilt with the comte de Montgomery, had his eye struck out, an accident which caused the king's death in a few days, 29 June, 1559. Tournaments were then abolished in France.—A magnificent feast and tournament, under the auspices of Archibald, earl of Eglington, took place at Eglington castle, 29 Aug. 1839, and the following week: many of the visitors (among whom was the late emperor of the French) assumed the characters of ancient knights, lady Seymour, aft. duchess of Somerset, being the "Queen of Beauty." She died 14 Dec. 1884. Among the festivities at the marriage of prince Humbert, at Turin, was a tournament, 24 April, 1868. Tournaments held at the Agricultural hall, London, N. (for benefit of soldiers' widows, &c.), 21 June et seq. 1880. In Oct. 1883, these tournaments were organized as "Royal Military Tournaments" for development of skill in arms in the army, and are held annually, now under the title "Royal Naval and Military Tournament."

TOURNAY (S. Belgium) was very flourishing till it was ravaged by the barbarians in the 5th century. It has sustained many sieges. Taken by the allies in 1709, and ceded to the house of Austria by the treaty of Utrecht; but the Dutch were allowed to place a garrison in it, as one of the barrier towns. It was taken by the French under general La Bourdonnaye, 8 Nov. 1792. Several battles were fought near Tournay in May, 1793, and May, 1794. Population, 1890, 35,403; 1900, 37,069.

TOURNIQUET (from tourner, to turn), an instrument for stopping the flow of blood into a limb, by tightening the bandage employed in amputations, is said to have been invented by Morelli at the siege of Besançon, 1674. J. L. Petit, in France, invented the screw tourniquet in 1718.

TOURS, an ancient city, central France, near which Charles Martel gained a great victory over the Saracens, and saved Europe, 10 Oct. 732, and from which he acquired the name of Martel, signifying hammer. This conflict is also called the battle of Poitiers. When Paris was invested by the Germans, M. Crémieux and several of the members of the French government of defence went to Tours, together with the representatives of foreign powers, 18 Sept. 1870. On 9 Oct. these were joined by Gambetta, minister of the interior, afterwards of war (who escaped from Paris by a balloon, 7 Oct.). In consequence of the defeat of the army of the Loire near Orléans, the government removed to Bordeaux, 11 Dec.

TOWERS. That of Babel, the first of which we read, built in the plains of Shinar (Gen. xi.) 2247 B.C.; see Babel. The Tower of the Winds at Athens, built 550 B.C. The Tower of Pharos (see Pharos), 280 B.C. The round towers in Ireland were the only structures of stone found at the arrival of the English, 1169, except some buildings in the maritime towns founded by the Danes. These towers are tall hollow pillars, nearly cylindrical, but narrowing towards the top, pierced with lateral holes to admit the light, and covered with conical roofs. Fifty-six of them still remain, from 50 to 130 feet high; see Pisa.

TOWER OF LONDON. The tradition that Julius Cæsar founded a citadel here (about 54 B.C.) is very doubtful. A royal palace, consisting of no more than what is now called the White Tower, which appears to have been first marked out by William the Conqueror, 1076, was commenced in 1078, and completed by his son, William Rufus, who, in 1098, surrounded it with walls and a broad deep ditch. Several succeeding princes made additions to it, and king Edward III. built the church. In 1638, the old White Tower was rebuilt; and under king Charles II. it was thoroughly repaired, 1680-5, and a great number of additional buildings made to it. Here are the Armoury, Jewel-office, and various other divisions and buildings of peculiar interest. Here took place many executions of illustrious persons, and many murders (king Henry VI., 1471; king Edward V. and his brother, 1485; sir Thomas Overbury, 1613). The armoury and 280,000 stands of arms, &c., were destroyed by fire, 30 Oct. 1841. The "New Buildings" in the Tower were completed in 1850. See Blood; for Tower-Subways, see Thames. The more recent constables of the Tower have been lington, lord Combermere, and sir George Pollock, constable (Oct. 1872; sir Wm. Gomm, 31 March, 1875; sir Charles Yorke, 20 Nov. 1880; sir W. TRADE AND PLANTATIONS, BOARD OF. Cromwell seems to have given the first notions of a board of trade: in 1655 he appointed his son Richard, with many lords of his council, judges, and gentlemen, and about twenty merchants of London, York, Newcastle, Yarmouth, Dover, &c., to meet and consider by what means the trade and navigation of the republic might be best promoted. Thomas's Notes of the Rolls. Charles II., on his restoration, established a council of trade for keeping a control over the whole commerce of the nation, 1660; he afterwards instituted a board of trade and plantations which was remodelled by William III. This board was abolished in 1782; and a new council for the affairs of trade on its present plan was appointed, 2 Sept. 1786.

The parliamentary recommendation in 1880 to appoint a "minister of trade and commerce" was dropped by Mr. Gladstone in March, 1881.

TRADES MUSEUMS. The formation of one was undertaken in 1853, jointly by the commissioners of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and the Society of Arts. The animal department was opened 7 May, 1855, when a paper on the mutual relations of trade and manufactures was read by professor E. Solly. The contents of this museum were moved to the South Kensington Museum, which was opened 24 June, 1857. The French "Con-

TRADE, NATIONAL CHAMBER OF, inaugural meeting at Manchester, Mr. R. Thornton-Varley elected president (from 8,000 to 10,000 members), 24 Nov. 1897.

TRADES UNIONS defined as "continuous associations of wage-earners, for the purpose of maintaining or improving the conditions of their employment," were gradually formed after the repeal of the "combination laws" in 1825, to withstand the undue influence of capital and competition. As trades unions formed for maintaining the rate of wages, &c., are not recognised by law, a commission (including lord Elcho, Thomas Hughes, and others, with sir Wm. Erle as chairman) was appointed to enquire into their constitution, 14 Feb. 1867, and an act to facilitate their proceedings was passed 5 April following. Their reports were issued during the year, disclosing the existence of murderous practices, with great intimidation; see Sheffield and Manchester. An act to protect union funds from embezzlement was passed in 1869. A trade union act passed 29 June, 1871, amended by act passed 30 June, 1876. To counteract the influence of trades unions, the National Federation of Employers was formed Dec. 1873; see Employers and Working-men. Trades unions were legalised in France in 1884. Trades unions in the United States, previously local, were legalised in 1845, and were gradually consolidated and became very powerful. See United States. TRAFALGAR (Cape S. Spain), off which a great naval victory was gained by the British, under Nelson, over the combined fleets of France and Spain, commanded by admiral Villeneuve and two Spanish admirals, 21 Oct. 1805. The enemy's force was eighteen French and fifteen Spanish vessels, all of the line: that of the British, twenty-seven ships. After a protracted fight, Villeneuve and the other admirals were taken, and nineteen of their ships captured, sunk, or destroyed. Nelson was killed, and admiral Collingwood succeeded to the command. Nelson's ship was the Victory; and his last signal was, "England expects every man will do his duty;" see Nelson. TRAFFIC in the metropolis is now regulated by the Metropolitan Streets act, passed 20 Aug. 1867.

LONDON TRAFFIC ROYAL COMMISSION, appointed 1903 to inquire into the subject of metropolitan locomotion. Evidence was taken of the London County Council, and of witnesses from the municipal borough councils and other authorities in the vicinity of London who are interested in the question of metropolitan traffic, including the great railway companies and tube railway companies. The commission personally examined the means of transit existing in the chief cities of Europe and in the United States. A sub-commission of six members visited (Sept.-Oct.) New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago to investigate the methods adopted in these cities with special reference to the merits of subways and tube railways. The prophet Elijah was translated to heaven in a chariot of fire (2 Kings ii. 11).—The possibility of translation to the abode of eternal life has been entertained by some extravagant enthusiasts. In 1840 the house of commons expelled Mr. Asgill, a member, for his book asserting the possibility of translation to the other world without resurrection.

TRANSPADANE REPUBLIC, comprising the Venetian territories, was created by Bonaparte after his victory at Lodi, April 1796. With the Cispadane republic, it formed the Cisalpine republic, Oct. 1797.

TRANSPORTATION, see Banishment. The power of sentencing offenders to transportation "into any of his majesty's dominions in North America," by 18 Charles II. c. 3, and by 4 Geo. I. c. 11 (1718). Transportation was first used in 1775, but was revived in 1786. The first ship of convicts was successfully refused by the Dutch Hope (in 1849) and by the Australian (1864). Transportation, even to West Australia, where labour was wanted, ceased after a short time, through the fierce opposition of the colonists. In consequence of the difficulty experienced in transporting felons, 16 & 17 Geo. IV. c. 70 was passed to provide other punishment, penal servitude, empowering the queen to pardon to offenders under certain conditions, and to license others to be at large: such license being liable to be revoked if necessary; and to have been. These licenses are termed "tickets of leave." The system is said to have been introduced in Australia under the superintendence of Macleay. It was much assailed in Nov. 1862, on account of violent crimes committed by ticket-of-leavers; and was modified by the Penal Servitude Act, 1864; and the Prevention of Crimes Acts, 1871 and 1879. It is now successful. See Crime.

TRANSUBSTANTIATION, the doctrine of the "real presence." That the bread and wine in the Eucharist are changed into the very flesh and blood of Christ by the consecration, was broached in the days of Gregory III. (731), and accepted by Amalarius and Radbertus (about 830), but rejected by Rabanus Maurus, Johannes Scotus Erigena, Berengarius, Wycliffe, and others. In the Lateran council, held at Rome by Innocent III., the word "Transubstantiation" was used to express this doctrine, which was decreed to be incontrovertible; and all who opposed it were condemned as heretics. This was confirmed by the council of Trent, 18 Jan. 1562. John Huss, Jerome of Prague, and other martyrs of the reformation, suffered for denying this dogma, which is renounced by the church of England (28th article), and by all protestant dissenters. The declaration against transubstantiation, invocation of the saints, and the sacrifice of the mass, on taking any civil office, was abolished by an act passed 25 July, 1867; see Sacrament.

Luther maintained the doctrine of con-substantiation, viz., that after consecration the body and blood of Christ are substantially present in the bread and wine. He was opposed by Bucer, Carlstadt, Zwingli, and others (termed sacramentarians), who asserted that the Lord's supper is only a commemorative rite.

TRANSVAAL. A British colony. Formerly the Transvaal republic, renamed South African Republic in 1883, founded by Dutch Boers (farmers) in 1848, after several years' severe conflict with the natives. Its independence was declared 17 Jan. 1852, S. J. P. Krüger elected president 7 May, 1853; and its constitution proclaimed 13 Feb. 1858; capital Pretoria, population, 1904, 36,700 (21,161 whites); chief town, Johannesburg, the centre of the Witwatersrand goldfields; population, 1904, 158,580 (83,502 whites). President for four years, T. F. Burgers, 27 May, 1872. Population about 38,000 Boers, 5000 English settlers, 770,000 blacks (1881); 1894 (estimated), 800,000, of whom about 90,000 are whites; 1895 (estimated), 15,000 Boers, 60,000 Uitlanders, "outsiders" (mixed), 250,000 Kaffirs; 1904 (census), 1,268,716 (299,327 whites, 945,498 Kaffirs, 23,891 other natives). Estimated revenue, 4,886,499*l.*, 1897-8. The republic was annexed to Great Britain, 1 Sept., and styled TRANSVAAL COLONY, 25 Oct. 1900. See below and South African War. PPISTS. The first abbey of La Trappe andy was founded, in 1140, by Rotrou, e Perche. The present order of Trappists origin to the learned Jean le Bouthillier unéc (editor of Anacreon when aged 14), ounced the world, and sold all his property, e proceeds to the abbey of La Trappe, to e retired in 1662, to live there in great e. After several efforts he succeeded in g the monks, and in establishing a new ical commands silence, prayer, reading, ual labour, and which forbids study, wine, e. Rancé was born in 1620, and died in A number of these monks, driven from France in the revolution of 1790, were received by Mr. Weld, of Lulworth, Dorsetshire, who gave them some land to cultivate and a habitation, where they remained till 1815. This order was charged with rebellion and conspiracy in France, and sixty-four English and Irish Trappists were shipped by the French government at Paimboeuf, 19 Nov., and were landed from the Hebé, French frigate, at Cork, 30 Nov. 1831. They established themselves at Mount Melleray, county of Waterford.

TRASIMENE, see Thrasymene.

TRAUTENAU (Bohemia). On 27 June, 1866, the first corps of the army of the crown-prince of Prussia seized Trautenuau, but was defeated and repulsed by the Austrians under Gablenz; on the 28th, the Prussians defeated the Austrians with great loss.

TRAVELLERS' CLUB (Pall-mall), estab- lished in 1815. A member must have "travelled out of the British islands to a distance of at least 500 miles from London, in a direct line."

TRAVELLING IN ENGLAND. In 1707 it took in summer one day, in winter nearly two days, to travel from London to Oxford (55 miles). In 1817 the journey was accomplished in six or seven hours. By the Great Western Railway express (63 miles) it is done in just over 1 hour. In 1828, a gentleman travelled from Newcastle to London (273 miles) inside the best coach in 35 hours, at an expense of 6*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* or 6*d.* per mile (including dinner, &c.). In 1857, the charge of the Great Northern railway (275½ miles) first-class express (6 hours) was 50*s.* 9*d.*; in 1905, 38*s.* 3*d.*

No fixed charge is made by the majority of railway companies for the hire of special trains. The general charges are 5*s.* per mile, plus the ordinary fare for each passenger according to class.

TRAWLING. Deep-sea fishing with a boat (either sail or steam) having a very large net attached to it, and thereby catching the fish which mostly live at the bottom of the sea; principally practised on the N.E. coast of Britain.

Commissions reported in 1864 and since, that trawling was not injurious to the supply of fish as suggested; but another commission, with scientific advice, re- ported in Feb. 1885, that there was some ground for the fishermen's complaints.

TREAD-MILL, an invention of the Chinese, to raise water for the irrigation of the fields. The complicated tread-mill introduced into the prisons of Great Britain is the invention of Mr. (afterwards sir William) Cubitt, of Ipswich. It was erected at Brixton gaol, 1817, and soon afterwards in other large prisons. Towards the end of the last century it fell into disuse and very few were in existence in 1905.

TREASON, see High Treason. PETTY TREASON (a term abolished in 1828, defined by the statute of 25 Edw. III. 1352) was a wife's murder of her husband; a servant's murder of his master; and an ecclesiastical person's murder of his prelate or other superior. Misprision of treason, knowledge and concealment of the crime, punishable with forfeiture of goods and imprisonment for life.

TREASON-FELONY. By the Crown and Government Security Act, 11 Vict. c. 12 (1848), certain treasons heretofore punishable with death were mitigated to felonies, and subjected to trans- portation or imprisonment. The Fenians in Ireland were tried under this act; see Trials, 1865.

TREASURER OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH, the third great officer of the crown, a lord by virtue of his office, having the custody of the king's treasure, governing the upper court of exchequer, and formerly sitting judicially among the barons. The first lord high treasurer in England was Odo, earl of Kent, in the reign of William I. This great trust is now confided to a commission, and is vested in five persons, called "lords commissioners for executing the office of lord high treasurer," and of these the chancellor of the exchequer is usually one; the first lord being usually the premier; see Administrations, for a succession of these officers. Sir Stafford Northcote (aft. Earl of Iddesleigh) was first lord of the treasury and not premier, 24 June, 1855, as was Mr. W. H. Smith, 26 July, 1856; see Salisbury Administrations. A third lord of the treasury (Mr. Stansfeld) was appointed, Dec. 1868, succeeded by Mr. W. H. Gladstone, Dec. 1869.

The first of this rank in IRELAND was John de St. John, Henry III. 1217; the last, William, duke of Devonshire, 1766; vice-treasurers were appointed till 1789; then commissioners till 1816, when the revenues of Great Britain and Ireland were united.

The first lord high treasurer of Scotland, appointed by James 1641, John, earl of Traquair, was appointed.

TREASURER OF THE EXCHEQUER, formerly an officer of great consequence, a member of the privy council, and the king's treasurer in Cleveland-row, in the palace. His duties were suppressed at the same time as the master of the great wardrobe household in 1782. Beaumont.

TREATIES. A formal agreement made in England with any foreign power entered into at Kingston, and the dauphin of France (leagued with the barons), 11 commercial treaty was with 2 Edw. 1274; the second with 1308. Anderson. TREES in London. Many were planted by John Evelyn in the Mall, St. James's, &c. He recommended this in his "Fumifugium," published 1661. The planting of rows of trees in suburban roads began in 1875.

TREES OF LIBERTY were planted in Paris and other parts of France during the revolutionary eras, 1790 and 1848. These trees were cut down in Paris in Jan. 1850, when riots ensued, put down by the military.

The celebrated tree Février, planted in 1789 near the National Library, Paris, was felled early in 1884.

English arboricultural society founded at Hexham in 1880. Annual meetings.

TRENT (the ancient Tridentum), in the Tyrol, belongs to Austria. The council held here is reckoned in the Roman catholic church as the 18th general council. Its decisions have been implicitly received as the standard of faith, morals, and discipline in that church. It first sat 13 Dec. 1545, and continued (with interruptions) under pope Paul III., Julius III., and Pius IV. to 4 Dec. 1563; its last sitting (the 25th). A jubilee in relation to this council was celebrated in June, 1863. Trent was TRÈVES, or TRIER, the Roman Treviri, in Rhenish Prussia, was a prosperous city of the Gauls, 12 n.c. The emperor Gallienus held his court here A.D. 255. The church of St. Simeon dates from the 4th century. Trèves was made an electorate in the 14th century, and became subject to the archbishop in 1585. Councils held here, 385-1423. The archbishopric is said to have been founded before the 7th century and to be the oldest in Germany. After various changes, Trèves was acquired by Prussia, June 1815. In 1844 much excitement was occasioned by miracles said to have been wrought by a "Holy Coat" in the cathedral. The coat was exhibited to thousands, Aug., Sept. 1891. Population, 1890, 36,162; 1900, 43,324.

"TRIA JUNCTA IN UNO" (three joined in one), the motto of the knights of the military order of the Bath, signifying "faith, hope, and charity;" see Bath.

TRIAL AT BAR, signifies by the whole court or a plurality of judges. This plan was adopted at Bristol after the riots in 1832; also at O'Connell's trial, 1844; and arranged for the trial of the claimant of the Tishborne estates for perjury, in April, 1873. See Juries.

TRIALS. Regulations for conducting trials were made by Lothaire and Édric, kings of Kent, about 673 to 680. Alfred the Great is said to have begun trial by jury; but there is good evidence of such trials before his time. Arrangements were made for more speedy trials by "the Winter Assizes Act," 1876. See Appeal.

- Bloomfield Bush, for murder of Messrs. Jermy, at Norwich; hanged 29 March, 1849
- Gorham v. the bishop of Exeter; ecclesiastical case; judgment given in the court of Arches against the plaintiff 2 Aug. "
- [The bishop had refused to institute the rev. Mr. Gorham into the living of Brampton-Speke, in Devonshire, alleging want of orthodoxy in the plaintiff, who denied that spiritual regeneration was conferred by baptism; the court held that the charge against the plaintiff of holding false doctrine was proved, and that the bishop was justified in his refusal. Mr. Gorham appealed to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which pronounced its opinion (8 March, 1850) that "the doctrine held by Mr. Gorham was not contrary or repugnant to the declared doctrine of the church of England, and that Mr. Gorham ought not, by reason of the doctrine held by him, to have been refused admission to the vicarage of Brampton-Speke." This decision led to subsequent proceedings in the three courts of law, successively, for a rule to show cause why a prohibition should not issue, directed to the judge of the Arches court, and to the archbishop of Canterbury, against giving effect to the judgment of her majesty in council. The rule was refused in each court, and in the end Mr. Gorham was instituted into the vicarage in question, 7 Aug. 1850.]

The issue was brought to trial in March, proceedings were stayed by Mrs. Swynfen's counsel, sir F. Thesiger, entering into an agreement with the opposite counsel, sir Alexander Cockburn, without her consent, and in defiance of her instructions. After various proceedings, the court of chancery ordered a new trial. She gained her cause, mainly through the energy of her counsel, Mr. Chas. R. Kennedy, to whom she had promised to pay 20,000*l.* for his extraordinary services. Mrs. Swynfen, however, married a Mr. Broun, and repudiated Mr. Ken-

Tichborne v. Lushington: the plaintiff declared himself to be sir Roger Charles Tichborne, supposed to have been lost at sea; and claimed the baronetcy and estates, worth about 24,000*l.* a year.

Roger Charles Tichborne, son of sir James, born 1839

Educated in France till about 1843

Entered the army 1849

Proposed marriage to his cousin Kate Doughty; declined Jan. 1852

Sailed from Havre for Valparaiso (March), and arrived there 19 June, 1853

Sailed from Rio Janeiro in the Bella, which foundered at sea 20 April, 1854

His mother advertised for her son 10 May, 1865

The claimant (found by Gibbs and Cubitt in Australia) asserted that he and eight of the crew were saved from the wreck of the Bella; that he went to Australia, and lived there, roughly, 13 years under the name of Castro; married as Castro, Jan.; as Tichborne 3 July, 1866

He set up his claim; and was accepted by the dowager lady Tichborne as her son at Paris Jan. 1867

[No others of the family accepted him; but sir Clifford Constable and some brother-officers did.]

His claim was resisted on behalf of sir Henry (a minor), son of sir Alfred Tichborne; and after chancery proceedings (begun March, 1867) a trial began in the court of common pleas before chief justice Bovill 11 May, 1871

The claimant was examined 22 days; the trial adjourned on 40th day, 7 July; resumed, 7 Nov.; case for claimant closed 21 Dec. "

Trial resumed, 15 Jan.; the attorney-general, sir J. D. Coleridge, spoke 26 days; on 4 March the jury expressed themselves satisfied that the claimant was not sir Roger; on the 103rd day he was declared nonsuited 6 March, 1872

The law proceedings are said to have cost the estate nearly 92,000*l.*

He was lodged in Newgate to be tried for perjury, 7 March; indicted as Thos. Castro, otherwise Arthur Orton, for perjury and forgery 9 April, "

The court of queen's bench decide that he may be admitted to bail, 23 April; released 26 April, "

The trial of the claimant for perjury and forgery begun before chief justice Cockburn, and justices Mellor and Lush at bar 23 April; case for the prosecution closed, 10 July; resumed (for defence) 21 July, "

Lady Doughty, mother of sir Henry Tichborne, dies 13 Dec. "

[Up to 27 June (47th day of the trial), out of 150 witnesses above 100 had sworn that the claimant was not Tichborne; and about 40 that he was Arthur Orton.]

The claimant forbidden to attend public meetings, 19 Sept. 1873

Case for the defence closed on 124th day, 27 Oct. adjourned from 31 Oct. to 17 Nov., then to 27 Nov.; rebutting evidence heard, 27, 28 Nov. "

* Mr. Guildford Onslow, who spent about 15,000*l.* in supporting the claimant, died 20 Aug. 1882.

TRISTAN D'ACUNHA, a small island in the S. Atlantic, discovered in 1506 by a Portuguese admiral, after whom it is named; inhabited by about 100 persons. Before the opening of the Suez Canal, the island prospered, through the visits of ships, now very rare; the duke of Edinburgh was there in 1867, and showed great kindness to the people. Patriarchal government under Mr. Peter Green, who received a portrait from queen Victoria in 1897.

TRIUMPHS were granted by the Roman senate to generals of armies after they had won great victories. They were received into the city with great magnificence and public acclamations. There were the great, called the Triumph; and the less, the Ovation; see Ovation.

TRIUMVIRATES, ROMAN. In 60 B.C., Julius Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus formed a coalition to rule the state. This lasted ten years, and the civil war ensued. The second triumvirate, 43 B.C., was formed by Octavius Caesar, Mark Antony, and Lepidus, through whom the Romans totally lost their liberty. Lepidus was expelled in 36; Antony was subdued in 31, and Octavius made himself absolute; see Rome. In Feb. 1849, a triumvirate was appointed at Rome, consisting of Joseph Mazzini, Armellini, and Saffi, which resigned on 1 July, 1849, when the city was taken by the French.

WEIGHT. The Romans introduced the ounce, our avoirdupois ounce, into Britain. The ounce was brought from Grand Cairo, about the time of the Crusades, 1095, first adopted at Troyes, a city of France, hence the name. It is used to weigh gold, silver, and precious stones. The Troy weight, Scots, was introduced by James VI. (our James I.) in 1618; 1901.

ES (Central France), where a treaty was between England, France, and Burgundy. It was stipulated that Henry V. should marry Katherine, daughter of Charles VI., be agent of France, and, after the death of Edward, should inherit the crown, 21 May, 1420. The treaty was taken by the allied armies, 7 Feb.; re-negotiated, 23 Feb.; and again taken by the English, 4 March, 1814.

FEAST OF GOD (Feira or Treuga Dei), a festival in commemoration of the private feuds and wars which were general during the middle ages all over Europe. It had to have been strongly advocated by the papacy, in 1032. The clergy strenuously opposed its influence for the purpose. A papal bull, 1027, decreed that none should fight on Saturday evening (at the close of Monday morning (at the hour of prime)). Regulations were adopted in England, 1042, on Friday and Wednesday being chosen for the truce of God was confirmed by the councils of the church, especially the Lateran Council, 1179.

K SYSTEM of paying workmen's goods (sold at "tommy shops") instead of money was prohibited by parliament in 1831. The act a commission to inquire into its prevalence was appointed; act passed 10 July, 1831; amended 1887 and 1896.

PET. Some of the Greek historians ascribe the invention of the trumpet to the Tyrians and others to the Egyptians. It was in use at the time of Homer. First trumpets, then fish sounded like trumpets, were used in the primitive wars. Potter. The Jewish trumpets were appointed 1490 B.C. (Lev. 25). Offa, king of Mercia, is said to have used them before him when travelling, 790. The speaking trumpet is said to have been used by Alexander the Great in 335 B.C.; by Kircher in A.D. 1652; by Salland, 1654; and philosophically explained by Morland, 1671.

In 1151, Edan O'Hoisin was the first archbishop, at least the first who received the pall, for some of his predecessors are sometimes called bishops of Connaught, and sometimes archbishops, by Irish historians. The see of Mayo was annexed to Tuam in 1559. Tuam is valued in the king's books, by an extent returned anno 28 Eliz., at 50*l.* sterling per annum. Beaton. It ceased to be archiepiscopal, conformably with the statute 3 & 4 Will. IV., 1833; and is now a bishopric only, to which Killala and Achonry, a joint see, has been added; see Archbishops. New protestant cathedral of St. Mary, consecrated by the bishop, the Hon. Dr. Charles B. Bernard, 9 Oct. 1878.

TUBERCULOSIS, a disease caused by the development of tubercles, small masses of diseased matter in the lungs (phthisis or consumption), in the face and other parts (lupus).

Dr. Robert Koch, of Berlin, discovered and isolated a minute organism, named bacillus tuberculosis, to whose action he attributed the disease, 15 Aug. 1881. In the autumn of 1890, he reported his invention of a lymph (see below, 15 Jan. 1891), by the injection of which into the system, as in vaccination, he hoped to cure the diseases. In Berlin he made many experiments on tuberculous guinea-pigs and human beings, with some success in respect to lupus, but not to phthisis. Dr. Koch was much honoured by the emperor, and was aided by the state. Dr. Koch's full account of his method was published in the British Medical Journal, London, 15 Nov., and other papers. Medical men flocked to Berlin from all parts of the world, to obtain the lymph. Exaggerated cases of successful application were published, and it soon appeared that time was required to test the efficacy of the remedy. Much discussion ensued. Dr. Koch, on 15 Jan. 1891, published the statement that his lymph, named tuberculin, was a glycerine extract from the pure cultivation of the tubercle bacilli.

TUNNAGE AND POUNDAGE were ancient duties levied on every tun of wine and pound of other goods, imported or exported, and were the origin of our "customs." They commenced in England about 1346, and were granted to the kings for life, beginning with Edward IV. Charles I. gave great offence by levying them on his own authority, 1628. They were granted to Charles II. for his lifetime, 24 June, 1660. By the act 27 Geo. III. c. 13, these and other duties were repealed, 1787, and a new arrangement of excise and customs was introduced.

TUNNELS, for drainage, are ancient. The earliest tunnel for internal navigation was executed

TURIN, the ancient Augusta Taurinorum in Piedmont, capital of the Sardinian States, and of the kingdom of Italy, till 1864, when it was super- seded by Florence. Its importance dates from the permanent union of Savoy and Piedmont in 1416. The French besieged this city; but prince Eugène defeated their army, and compelled them to raise the siege, 7 Sept. 1706. In 1793, the French republican army took possession of Turin, seized all the strong places and arsenals of Piedmont, and obliged the king and his family to remove to the island of Sardinia. In 1799, the French were driven out by the Austrians and Russians; but the city and all Piedmont surrendered to the French, June 1800. In May 1814, it was restored to the king of Sardinia; see Italy, 1864. Here prince Humbert was married to his cousin Margherita amidst great rejoicing, 22 April, 1868. The monument to Carvour was inaugurated, 8 Nov. 1873. An exhibition opened by the king, 25 April, 1880; another opened by the king, 1 May, 1898. Trial ended; sentences, Tullio Murri and Dr. Naldi, guilty of murder with premeditation, each 30 years' solitary confinement and 10 years' police supervision; others found guilty of complicity, countess Bonmartini sentenced to 10 years, Dr. Sechi to 10 years' and the maid Rosina Bonetti to 7 years' imprisonment 10 Aug. 1905

TURKESTAN, called by the Persians Turan, formerly Independent Tartary (which see), the original country of the Turks, in Central Asia, was reached by Alexander, 331 B.C., and has since undergone many changes, forming successively part of the empires of Genghis Khan and Tamerlane (see Tartary). For Eastern or Chinese Turkestan, see Kashgaria; for Western, see Bokhara and Khiva. The Russians gradually encroached on this country; on 14 Feb. 1865, a new province, Turkestan, was created by decree, and gen. Kauffmann made governor, 26 July, 1867; died 16 May, 1882. The rule of the czar accepted by the chief tribes at Merv (which see), announced 8 Feb. 1884. Gen. Dukhowski appointed gov.-gen. of Turkestan and the Transcaspian territory, April, 1898. Explorations and discoveries by Dr. Sven Hedin in 1895, and by Dr. Stein, June-Dec. 1900. Severe earthquake shocks at Andijan, in Ferghana, 10,000 deaths, 15,000 houses destroyed, 16 Dec. 1902.

TURKEY. The Turks were originally a tribe of Tartars; but, by incorporation with the peoples they have conquered, have become a mixed race. About 760, they obtained possession of a part of Armenia, called from them Turcomania. They gradually extended their power; but in the 13th century, being harassed by other Tartar tribes, they returned to Asia Minor. The Turkish empire till 1878 comprehended the almost independent

TURKEY TRADE, 1905.

The Turkey or Levant was instituted by charter of 1

TURKEYS AND GUINEA FOWLS, first brought to England about 1523, and to France in 1570. Turkeys are natives of America, and were consequently unknown to the ancients.

TÜRKHEIM (E. France). Here the elector Brandenburg and the Imperialists were defeated by the French under Turenne, 5 Jan. 1675.

TURKISH BATHS, see Baths.

TURKISH COMPASSIONATE FUND, instituted by the Daily Telegraph, and supported by lady Burdett-Coutts, the abb. of Canterbury, and others, to relieve sufferers by the war, Aug. 1877.

TURKOMANS, see White Sheep, and Turan.

TURNER'S ACT, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35 (1850), relates to the court of chancery.

TURNER'S LEGACIES. Joseph M. W. Turner, a great landscape painter, was born in April, 1775, and died 19 Dec. 1851. He bequeathed to the nation all the pictures and drawings collected by him and deposited at his residence, 47, Queen Anne-street, London, on condition that a suitable gallery could be erected for them within ten years; and directed his funded property to be expended in founding an asylum at Twickenham for decayed artists. The will was disputed by his relatives, but compromise was made. The oil-paintings (100 in number) and the drawings (1,400) were obtained by the nation, and the engravings and some other property were transferred to the next of kin. The drawings were cleaned and mounted under the careful superintendence of Mr. Ruskin, and the pictures were sent to Marlborough-house for exhibition. In 1861, many of the pictures were removed from the South Kensington Museum to the National Gallery, others in 1869. The sketches, plates, &c., of Turner's Liber Studiorum, were sold for about 20,000*l.* 28 March, 1873.

TURNING, see Lathe. In our dockyards, blocks and other materials for ships are now produced by an almost instantaneous process, from rough pieces of oak, by the machinery of Mr. afterwards sir Mark Isambard Brunel (died 1849); see Blocks.

TURNPIKES, see Tolls.

TURPENTINE TREE, Pistacia Terebinthus, came from Barbary, before 1656. Spirits of turpentine were first applied, with success, to the rot in sheep; one-third of the spirit diluted with two-thirds water, 1772.

TURRET SHIPS, see Navy of England.

TUSCAN ORDER OF ARCHITECTURE, a rebased Doric, used in Tuscany for buildings in which strength is chiefly required. Wotton.

TUSCANY, formerly a grand-duchy in Central Italy, the northern part of the ancient Etruria (which see). It formed part of the Lombard kingdom, after the conquest of which by Charlemagne, 774, it was made a marquise for Boniface about 828. His descendant, the great countess Matilda, bequeathed the southern part of her domains to the pope (1115). In the northern part (then called Fuscina), the cities, Florence, Pisa, Sienna, Lucca, &c., gradually became flourishing republics. Florence became the chief under the government of the Medici family; see Florence. The duchy in that family began in 1531; and the grand-duchy in 1569. After the extinction of the Medicis in 1737, Tuscany was given by the treaty of Vienna (1738) to Francis, duke of Lorraine (married to Maria Theresa of Austria in 1736), who had ceded his hereditary estates to France. Population in 1882, 2,226,265; 1890, 2,274,191; 1901, 2,548,154.

ULUNDI, Zululand, South Africa. On 4 July, 1879, the Zulus, commanded by their king, Cetshwayo, who had refused the conditions of peace, were totally defeated near here by Lord Chelmsford, after a severe conflict. Capt. Wyatt-Edgell, 17 Lancers, and 9 men were killed, and about 53 wounded. The British were attacked in the open country by the Zulus, who enveloped our hollow square and charged on all sides up to within 60 yards, when they broke and fled under the heavy fire. They were pursued and routed by cavalry. About 23,000 Zulus engaged, 1,500 killed. The British showed much firmness and the Zulus displayed great courage. The royal kraal at Ulundi and other military kraals were burnt.

UMBRELLA, described in early dictionaries as "a portable pent-house to carry in a person's hand to screen him from violent rain or heat." Umbrellas appear in the carvings at Persepolis. Niebuhr saw a great Arabian prince returning from a mosque, he and each of his family having a large umbrella carried by his side. Old chinaware shows the Chinese shaded by umbrellas. It is said that the first person who generally used an umbrella in the streets of London was the benevolent Jonas Hanway, who died in 1786.

John Macdonald, a footman, who wrote his own life, informs us that he had "a fine silk umbrella, which he brought from Spain; but he could not with any comfort to himself use it, the people calling out, 'Frenchman! why don't you get a coach?'" The hackney-coachmen and chairmen were clamorous against their rival. The footman says he "persisted for three months, till they took no further notice of this novelty. Foreigners began to use theirs; and then the English." 1778.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN," a story by Mrs. H. Beecher-Stowe (born, 1812, died, 1 July, 1896), published in portions in a newspaper in 1850; complete in March, 1852; setting forth the evils of negro slavery. The sale was enormous, and the translations numerous, and it greatly contributed to emancipation. The Rev. Josiah Henson, the original "Uncle Tom," was received by queen Victoria at Buckingham palace, 2 March, 1877, and was much benefited by his visit to Britain; he died May, 1883, aged 93.

UNION JACK. The original flag of England was the banner of St. George, i.e., white with a red cross, which, 12 April, 1606 (three years after James I. ascended the throne) was incorporated with the banner of Scotland, i.e., blue with a white diagonal cross. This combination obtained the name of "Union Jack," in allusion to the union with Scotland, and the word Jack is considered a corruption of the word Jacobus, Jacques, or James. This arrangement continued until the union with Ireland, 1 Jan. 1801, when the banner of St. Patrick, i.e., white with a diagonal red cross, was amalgamated with it, and forms the present Union flag. Mansion house meeting in aid of a "Union Jack" club in memory of the soldiers and sailors who died in the S. African war, 25 Feb. 1903. This club has been largely subscribed to, rooms and cots being endowed by various regiments. The clubhouse in Waterloo-road, opposite Waterloo station, in course of construction, 1905.

UNION CHARGEABILITY ACT, providing for the better distribution of the charge for relieving the poor in unions, was passed in June, 1865. One object of the act is the improvement of the dwellings of agricultural labourers.

UNION RELIEF ACT, passed in 1862, continued in 1863, to enable boards of guardians of certain unions to obtain temporary aid to meet the extraordinary expenditure for relief occasioned by the distress in the cotton manufacturing districts.

UNIT, a gold coin, value 20s., issued by James I. in 1604.

UNITARIANS, termed Socinians from Lælius Socinus, who founded a sect in Italy about 1546. They profess to believe in and worship one only self-existent God, in opposition to those who worship the Trinity in unity. They consider Christ to have been a mere man; and do not admit the need of an atonement or of the complete inspiration of the Scriptures. Michael Servetus printed a tract in disparagement of the doctrine of the Trinity. In 1553, proceeding to Naples through Geneva, Calvin induced the magistrates to arrest him on a charge of blasphemy and heresy. Servetus, refusing to retract his opinions, was condemned to the flames, which sentence was carried into execution, 27 May, 1553. Servetus is numbered among those anatomists who made the nearest approach to the doctrine of the circulation of the blood, before Harvey established that doctrine. Matthew Hamont was burnt at Norwich for asserting Christ not to be the Son of God, 1 June, 1579. The Unitarians were numerous in Transylvania in the 17th century; they came to England about 1700, and many of the original English presbyterian churches became Unitarian about 1730. They were not included in the Toleration act till 1813. Their tenets resemble those of the Arians and Socinians (which see). The Unitarian marriage bill was passed, June, 1827. In Dec. 1833, by a decision of the vice-chancellors the Unitarians (as such) lost the possession of lady Hewley's charity; the decision was affirmed on appeal in 1842. British and Foreign Unitarian Association founded, to promote Unitarianism, 1825. There were 229 congregations in England in 1851. There were 320 Unitarian churches in the United Kingdom in Feb. 1884; 364 in Jan. 1903. Congregations and mission stations number about 287 in England, 33 in Wales, 7 in Scotland, and 39 in Ireland, total 367. Ministers and lay workers, 371; Sunday schools, 326.—1905. The rev. Dr. Martineau, L.L.D., an eminent preacher and writer, died, aged 94, 11 Jan. 1900. The international Unitarian council met in Geneva, 1905.

[John Brown, called captain Brown and old Brown, was a prominent leader in the violent conflicts in Kansas, during the agitation respecting the question of its becoming a slave state. He was a monomaniac on the slavery question, and contended that all means for annihilating slavery were justifiable. He gathered together a band of desperate characters, who so much annoyed Missouri and other slave states, that a reward was offered for his head. He had arranged for the successful issue of the insurrection above mentioned, so far as to devise a provisional government and a new constitution. On 16 Oct. he and his band, aided by a mob, seized the arsenal at Harper's Ferry, a town on the borders of Virginia and Maryland, stopped the railway trains, and cut the telegraph wires; a conflict with the military ensued, when many of the insurgents were killed. Temporary panic in southern states.]

UNIVERSALISTS, who believe in the final salvation of all men. This doctrine, declared in the Talmud, and ascribed to Origen, about 230, was advocated by other early fathers, but opposed by St. Augustin, about 420; and condemned by the 5th general council at Constantinople, May, June, 553.
It was received by the Unitarians in the 17th century, and avowed by numerous clergymen of the church of England. James Rely, who published his "Union" in 1760, founded the sect of Universalists in Britain; and John Murray, in America, about 1770. The sect flourishes in America.

URANUS, a planet discovered by William Herschel, 13 March, 1781. It was named after Uranus, the Roman god of the sky, after George III.; finally, Uranus. It is about 19 times as far from the sun as the planet Saturn. Its discovery was celebrated on its first revolution (in 84 years) in 1865. Perturbations led to the discovery of Neptune in 1846. Uranus has 4 satellites, discovered by Herschel in 1787, and 2 by William L. G. in 1948. It was mistaken for supposing that the other satellites, 2 in 1790 and 2 in 1851, were probably faint stars.

While the two fleets were engaged in this action, a large fleet of merchantmen, on the safety of which the French nation depended for its means of prosecuting the war, got safely into Brest harbour, which gave occasion to the enemy to claim the laurels of the day, notwithstanding their loss in ships, and in killed and wounded, which was very great. The day was long termed in England the "glorious first of June." The victory commemorated, 1 June, 1894.

VACATIONS, see Terms.

VACCINATION (from Variola Vaccina, the pox), discovered by Dr. Edward Jenner. He born in 1749, and educated for the medical profession, partially under John Hunter. Having 1 that milkmaids who had had the cow-pox took the small-pox, he, about 1780, conceived idea of vaccination. He made the first experiment by transferring to a healthy child on 14 May, the pus from the pustule of a milkmaid who caught the cow-pox from the cows. He announced his success in a memoir published 1798, vaccination, begun 21 Jan. 1799, soon became general, after much opposition. For this Dr. Jenner saved 10,000*l.* from parliament, 2 June, 1802, and 100*l.* in 1807. The first national institution for vaccination, the Royal Jennerian Institution, was founded 19 Jan. 1803. The emperor Napoleon told Dr. Jenner so highly, that he liberated Dr. Khram, when a prisoner of war, at Jenner's request, and subsequently whole families of English, king it a point to refuse him nothing that he desired. Vaccination, although much opposed, was carried throughout all Europe previously to 1816. Jenner died suddenly, 26 Jan. 1823.

VACUUM, is produced by reducing the pressure of the atmosphere, whereby its power of absorbing moisture is greatly increased. The Aristotelian philosophers asserted that "nature abhors a vacuum." It has been proved that an absolute vacuum cannot be obtained by the air pump, a small residuum of gaseous matter remains after extreme exhaustion. To study the effects of the projection of an electric discharge upon this matter, prof. W. Crookes (knt. June, 1897) invented his celebrated vacuum tubes, which he exhibited with interesting experiments at the Royal Institution, 4 April, 1870. At the same place, on 21 Jan. 1881, Dr. Warren De La Rue exhibited splendid results which he had obtained with the assistance of Dr. Hugo Müller, by means of an electric discharge from a battery of 14,400 chloride of silver cells into vacuum tubes. See Röntgen Rays. 32 forms of vacuum tubes are described in Nature, 28 Jan. 1897. The power of absorbing moisture possessed by a vacuum has been utilised by M. Emil Passburg, of Breslau, in his drying apparatus which has been successfully employed for drying grains by Messrs. Guinness, of Dublin, since the spring of 1888.

VADIMONIS LACUS, the Vadimonian lake, Umbria, central Italy, near which the Etruscans were totally defeated in two severe engagements by the Roman consuls: 1, by Fabius Maximus, 309 B.C.; 2, by Cornelius Dolabella, 283.

VAGRANTS. By law, after being whipped, a vagrant was to take an oath to return to the place where he was born, or had last dwelt for three years, 1530. A vagrant a second time convicted was to lose the upper part of the gristle of his right ear, 1535; a third time convicted, death. A vagabond to be branded with a V, and be a slave for two years, 1547. If he absconded and was caught, he was to be branded with S, and be a slave for life. Vagrants were punished by whipping, gaoling, boring the ears, and death for a second offence, 1572. The milder statutes were those of 17 Geo. II.; 32, 35, and 59 Geo. III. The present

Vagrant Act (5 Geo. IV. c. 83) was passed in 1824; amendment act passed, 12 Aug., 1898. See under Poor.

VALENCIA (E. Spain), the Valentia Edetanorum of the Romans, became the capital of a Moorish kingdom, 1000; annexed to Aragon 1238. Its university, founded, it is said, in the 13th century, was revived in the 15th. Valencia was taken by the earl of Peterborough in 1705, but submitted to the Bourbons after the unfortunate battle of Almanza, in 1707. It resisted the attempts made on it by marshal Monecy, but was taken from the Spaniards with a garrison of more than 16,000 men, and immense stores, by the French under Suchet, 9 Jan. 1812. Population of the city, 1887, 170,763; 1897, 204,768.

VALENCIENNES (N. France). This city (the Roman Valentianæ), after many changes, was taken by Louis XIV. in 1677, and annexed 1678. It was besieged from 23 May to 28 July, 1793, when the French garrison surrendered to the allies under the duke of York. It was retaken, together with Condé, by the French, 27-30 Aug. 1794; on capitulation, the garrison and 1,100 emigrants were made prisoners, with immense stores.

VALENTIA, a Roman province, including the country between the walls of Severus and Adrian, was reconquered from the Picts and Scots by Theodosius, and named after Valentinian I. the reigning emperor, 368.

VALENTINE'S DAY (14 Feb.). Valentine is said to have been a bishop, who suffered martyrdom under Claudius II. at Rome; others say under Aurelian, in 271. 618,000 letters passed through the post-office on 14 Feb. 1856. 530,300 was the estimated number of valentines delivered in 1864; in 1870, 1,545,755. The custom has now almost ceased. The origin of the ancient custom of "choosing a valentine" has been much controverted; see Post.

VALENTINIANS, followers of Valentine, a priest, who, on being disappointed of a bishopric, forsook the Christian faith, declaring there were thirty gods and goddesses, fifteen of each sex, which he called Æones, or Ages. He taught in the 2nd century, and published a gospel and psalms: his followers added other errors.

VALLADOLID (Spain), the Roman Pintia and the Moorish Belad Walid: was recovered for the Christians by Ordoño II., the first king of Leon, 914-23. It became capital of Castile in the 15th century. It was taken by the French Jan. 1808; and captured by the English, 4 June, 1813. Here died Christopher Columbus, 20 May, 1506. Population, 1887, 62,012; 1897, 68,746.

VALMY (N.E. France). Here the French, commanded by Kellermann, defeated the Prussians, commanded by the duke of Brunswick, 20 Sept.

1792. The victory was of importance to the republicans; and led duke of Valmy in 1808.

VARANGIANS, OR VARAGIANS, a name given to northern pirates, who invaded Flanders, about 813; France, about 840; Italy, 852. Their leader, Ruric, invited by the Novgorodians to help them, founded the Russian monarchy, 862.

VARENNES, a town in N.E. France, is celebrated for the arrest of Louis XVI., his queen, sister, and two children. They fled from the Tuileries on 21 June, 1791; were taken here the next day, and conducted back to Paris, mainly through Drouet, the postmaster, who, at an intermediate town, recognised the king.

VARNA, a fortified seaport in Bulgaria, formerly European Turkey. A great battle was fought near this place, 10 Nov. 1444, between the Turks under Amurath II. and the Hungarians under their king Ladislaus and John Hunniades. The latter were defeated with great slaughter: the king was killed, and Hunniades made prisoner, who had opposed the Christians breaking the truce for ten years, recently made at Szegedin. The emperor Nicholas of Russia arrived before Varna, the headquarters of his army, then besieging the place, 5 Aug. 1828. The Turkish garrison made a vigorous attack on the besiegers, 7 Aug.; and another on the 21st, but were repulsed. Varna surrendered, after a sanguinary conflict, to the Russian arms, 11 Oct. 1828. It was restored to the peace in 1829; its fortifications were dismantled, but have since been restored. The allied armies disembarked at Varna, 29 May, 1854, and sailed for the Crimea, 3 Sept. They suffered severely from cholera. In conformity with the treaty of Berlin, Varna was evacuated by the Turks, and occupied by Russians, autumn, 1878. Population, 1888, 25,256; 1900, 33,443.

VATICAN (Rome), the ancient Mons Vaticanus, a hill of Rome. The commencement of the palace is ascribed to Constantine, Liberius, and Symmachus, and also to pope Eugenius III., 1146. It became the residence of the pope at his return from Avignon, 1377. The palace is VAUD, a Swiss canton, after having been successfully held by the Franks, the kings of Burgundy, emperors of Germany, dukes of Zähringen, and dukes of Savoy, was conquered by the Bernese, Jan. 1536, and annexed, 1554. Vaud, made independent in 1798, joined the confederation in 1815. A new constitution was obtained in 1830, after agitation.

VAUDOIS, see Waldenses.

VAUXHALL BRIDGE, constructed of iron under the direction of Mr. Walker, at an expense of 150,000*l.* (to be defrayed by a toll). The first stone was laid 9 May, 1811, by prince Charles, eldest son of the duke of Brunswick; and the bridge was opened on 4 June, 1816; freed from toll, 24 May, 1879. Design for a new bridge to be built of granite backed with concrete approved by London County Council, Feb. 1898; parliamentary estimate of cost, 380,000*l.* Owing to difficulties, revealed by boring, due to softer clay, the council adopted, 25 Nov. 1902, the design of a steel elliptical-arch bridge with ornamental facings. London County Council decided upon a steel segmental-arch structure, 19 May, 1903; tender for superstructure, 142,942*l.*, accepted 20 Oct. 1903; heavy work of structure completed Sept. 1905.

VAUXHALL GARDENS (London), were so denominated from the manor of Vauxhall, Falkeshall, Fox-hall, or Faukeshall, said to have been the property of Fulke de Breauté about 1282. The premises were the property of Jane Vaux in 1615, and the mansion-house was then called Stockden's. From her it passed through various hands, till it became the property of Mr. Tyers in 1732. The New Spring Gardens at Vauxhall are mentioned by John Evelyn in his diary 2 July, 1661, Pepys 29 May, 1662, Wycherley 1672, and in the Spectator 1711, as a place of great resort. The gardens were opened for a "ridotto al fresco" 7 June, 1732, by Jonathan Tyers. The greatest season was in 1823, when 133,279 persons visited the gardens, and the receipts were 29,590*l.* The number on the then supposed last night, 5 Sept. 1839, was 1089 persons. Vauxhall was sold by auction, 9 Sept. 1841, for 20,200*l.*, and again 20 Aug. 1859. The last performances at Vauxhall took place on 25 July, 1859. The ground was sold for building purposes. Six persons killed and many injured by fall of stack of wood at Buckley's saw-mills, 25 Feb. 1880.

VENTILATORS were invented by the rev.
Dr. Hales, and described to the Royal Society of London, May, 1741; and the ventilator for the use of ships was announced by Mr. Triewald, in November, same year. The marquis of Chabannes' plan for warming and ventilating theatres and houses for audiences was applied to those of London about 1819. The systems of Dr. Reid (about 1834) and others followed, with much controversy. Dr.
Arnott's work on this subject was published in 1838.
A commission on warming and ventilation issued a

VENTRILOQUISM (speaking from the stomach), was known to the Greeks, who termed ventriloquists "belly-prophets." The name is a misnomer, as the sounds are produced by regulating the breathing and organs of voice, without motion of the lips. Among eminent ventriloquists were baron Mengen and M. Saint Gille, about 1772 (whose experiments were examined by a commission of the French Academy); Thomas King (about 1716); Charles Mathews (1824); and M. Alexandre (1822); others since.

VENUS, the Roman goddess of love and beauty
(the Greek Aphrodite). Statues: Venus de Medicis, found near Tivoli and removed to France, 1680;
the Venus found at Milo or Melos, 1820, placed in the Louvre, Paris, 1834. The transit of the planet over the sun was predicted by Kepler to take place 6 Dec. 1631, but was not observed; he died 15 Nov.
1630. The first transit observed, was by the rev. Jeremiah Horrox, or Horrocks, and his friend, Wm. Crabtree, on 24 Nov. 1639, as predicted by Horrox in 1633. The astronomer-royal Maskelyne observed her transit at St. Helena, 6 June, 1761. Capt. Cook made his first voyage in the Endeavour, to Otaheite, to observe a transit of Venus, 3 June, 1769; see Cook's Voyages. The diurnal rotation of Venus was discovered by Cassini in 1667. This is contested by Schiaperelli and others, who assert her rotation to be as long as her revolution in her orbit. See Sun, note.

Halley suggested the observation of the transit as a means of estimating the distance of the earth from the sun, and devised a method for this purpose.

Another method was invented by Delisle about 1716.

Both plans were used in 1743.

Expeditions for the accurate observation of the phenomena, on 8 Dec. astronomical day; ordinary day, 9 Dec. 1874, were sent to different parts of the globe by all the great powers, and favourable results were reported 1875-6.

The transit, on 6 Dec. 1832, was observed at Bath, Penzance, Cork, Cape Town, Washington, Melbourne, and many other places. The next transits will take place 8 June, 2004, and 6 June, 2012.

Venus was both a morning and evening star, rising 43 min. before the sun, and setting 43 min. after it.

Dr. W. R. Brooks obtained some good photographs by the light of Venus when a morning star, Sept. 1900.

VERA CRUZ (Mexico), built about 1600; was taken by the Americans in 1847, and by the allies on 17 Dec. 1861, during the intervention; retaken by the liberals, under Juarez, 27 June, 1867.

VERCELLI, the ancient Vercelle, Piedmont, near which Marius defeated the Cimbri, 101 n.c. It was the seat of a republic in the 13th and 14th centuries. It was taken by the Spaniards, 1630; French, 1704; and allies, 1706; and afterwards partook of the fortunes of Piedmont.

VERDEN (Hanover). Here Charlemagne massacred about 4500 Saxons, who had rebelled and relapsed into idolatry, 782.

VERDUN (the ancient Verodunum), a first-class fortress on the Meuse, N.E. France, made a magazine for his legions by Julius Cæsar. It was acquired by the Franks in the 6th century, and formed part of the dominions of Lothaire by the treaty of Verdun, 843, when the empire was divided between the sons of Louis I. It was taken and annexed to the empire by Otho I. about 939. It surrendered to France in 1552; and was formally ceded in 1648. It was taken and held by the Prussians 43 days, Sept.—Oct. 1792. Gen. Beaupaire, the commandant, committed suicide before the surrender, and 14 ladies were executed on 28 May, 1794, for going to the king of Prussia to solicit his clemency for the town. Verdun surrendered to the Germans 8 Nov. 1870, after a brave defence; two vigorous sallies being made 28 Oct. Above 4000 men were captured, with a large number of arms and ammunition. It was the last place held by the Germans; and was given up 15, 16 Sept. 1873, and the troops retired.

VERGARA, N. SPAIN. Here the Carlist general, Maroto, made a treaty, termed "The pacification of Vergara," with Espartero, 31 Aug. 1839. The monument to celebrate it was destroyed by the Carlists in Aug. 1873.

VESUVIUS, MOUNT, S. Italy. Near it, the Latin confederacy were totally defeated by the Romans, whose general, P. Decius Mus, had devoted himself to death, 340 B.C. By an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum (which see) were overwhelmed 24 Aug. 79 A.D., and more than 200,000 persons perished, among them Pliny the naturalist. Numerous other disastrous eruptions have occurred. Torre del Greco, with 4000 persons, was destroyed, 17 Dec. 1631. There was a dreadful eruption, took place suddenly, 24 Nov. 1759, and another 8 Aug. 1767. The violent burst in 1767 was the 34th from the time of Titus. One in June, 1794, was most destructive: the lava flowed over 5000 acres of rich vineyards and cultivated land, and Torre del Greco was a second time burned; the top of the mountain fell in, and the crater was nearly two miles in circumference. A great eruption in Oct. 1822, and others in May, 1855, May and June, 1858, caused great destruction. A series of violent eruptions causing much damage occurred in Dec. 1861, and in Feb. 1865. Torre del Greco was again destroyed in Dec. 1861. Another eruption began 12 Nov. 1867, and continued increasing in grandeur and danger, March, 1868. A great eruption began 8 Oct. 1868, and continued, causing much destruction, 19, 20 Nov. A severe eruption began 23 April and ended about 3 May, 1872; above 60 lives were lost. The mountain was disturbed in 1876; and another eruption began about 20 Sept. 1878; lava was spouted to the height of 300 feet; an eruption began 11 June, 1879; an intermittent eruption 2 May, 1885. A new crater formed 7 June; continued flowing of lava, 11 June; ceases 16 June, renewed; a Brazilian tourist fell into the crater, July, 1891. * A conference of the four great powers, England, France, Austria, and Prussia, was held 24 July, when a note was agreed on and transmitted for acceptance to St. Petersburg and Constantinople, 31 July. This note was accepted by the czar, 10 Aug., but the sultan required modifications, which were rejected by Russia, 7 Sept. The sultan's note (31 Dec.) contained four points:—1. The promptest possible evacuation of the principalities. 2. Revision of the treaties. 3. Maintenance of religious privileges to the communities of all confessions. 4. A definite settlement of the convention respecting the holy places. It was approved by the four powers, and the conferences closed on 16 Jan. 1854.—A new conference of plenipotentiaries, from Great Britain (lord John Russell), France (M. Drouyn de l'Hays), Austria (count Buol), Turkey (Arif Effendi), and Russia (count Gortschakoff), took place, March, 1854. Two points, the protectorate of the principalities and the free navigation of the Danube, were agreed to; but the proposals of the powers as to the reduction of the Russian power in the Black Sea were rejected by the czar, and the conference closed, 5 June, 1854. The English and French envoys' assent to the Austrian propositions was not approved of by their governments, and they both resigned their official positions.

VINCENT, ST. (West Indies), long a neutral island; but at the peace of 1763, the French agreed that the right to it should be vested in the English. The latter soon after engaged in a war against the Caribs, on the windward side of the island, who were obliged to consent to a peace, by which they ceded a large tract of land to the British crown. In 1779 the Caribs greatly contributed to the reduction of this island by the French, who, however, restored it in 1783. In 1795 the French landed some troops, and again instigated the Caribs to an insurrection, which was not subdued for several months. Mt. Soufrière (abt. 3,623 ft. high) erupted 24 April, 1718; and again, 1 May, 1812, a violent eruption took place, 3 craters opened, 1,295 dead bodies found, total deaths, 1,565, 100 hopelessly injured, 3,000 homeless, 16 sq. miles covered with lava, ash fell on Barbadoes, 90 miles off; 7 May, 1902, disturbances took place in the adjoining islands, and earthquake shocks were frequent at Kingstown and Georgetown, whilst the village of Wallibon partly sank, and that of Richmond rose, 17 May (Nature, 27 May, 1902); eruptions continued, violent, 18, 24 May; earthquake shocks and another eruption, 10 July (see Martinique, 8 May, 1902); slighter ones, 21 July et seq.; violent, 3, 5, 21 Sept., 16 Oct.; Messrs. VINCENT DE PAUL, ST., CHARITABLE SOCIETY founded in 1833, in France, by twelve young men. It extends its extremely beneficial operations into Britain. Its power excited the jealousy of the French government, which suppressed its central committee of Paris, in Oct. 1861. St. Vincent de Paul was born, 1576; established the congregation of Lazarists, or Vincentines, 1625; Sisters of Charity, 1634; a foundling hospital, 1648. He died 1660.

VINCY, N. France. Here Charles Martel defeated the Neustrians, 21 May, 717, and acquired their country.

VINE. The vine was planted by Noah, 2347 B.C. Gen. ix. 20. A colony of vine-dressers from Phœcia, in Ionia, settled at Marseilles, and instructed the South Gauls in tillage, vine-dressing, and commerce, about 600 B.C. Some think that vines are aborigines of Languedoc, Provence, and Sicily, and that they grew spontaneously on the Mediterranean shores of Italy, France, and Spain. The vine was carried into Champagne, and part of Germany, by the emperor Probus, about A.D. 279.

The vine and sugar-cane were introduced into France in 1420. In the gardens of 1 is an old and celebrated vine known vine in Europe; see The Tokay vines were planted in 1420. In the spring of 1853, Margate, observed a fungus (Tuckeri) on grapes in the bottle Margate. It is a whitish mildew.

The spores of this fungus were first observed in 1857. The disease spread over France, and in 1850 many vines were killed. In 1853, it spread over France, in Zante and Cephalonia attacking the crop to one-twelfth of the vines. Through its ravages, the wine ceased for several years.

Many attempts were made to cure the disease, but without much effect. The most efficacious remedy was the use of sulphur.

The disease had much abated in Madeira, in 1853. In 1850 introduced into the two latter New malady (microscopic insect) in S. France, observed in 1850. Remedy, sulphuret of carbon, M. Dumas.

He ex- pounded his system to the Society of Arts, London, 14 March, 1866; and published a book in 1867.

VISIGOTHS, separated from the Ostrogoths about 330; see Goths. The emperor Valens, about 369, admitted them into the Roman territories upon the condition of their serving when wanted in the Roman armies; and Theodosius the Great permitted them to form distinct corps commanded by their own officers. In 400, under Alaric, they invaded Italy, and in 410 took Rome. They founded their king- dom of Toulouse, 414; conquered the Alani, and extended their rule into Spain, 414; expelled the Romans in 468; and finally were themselves con- quered by the Saracens under Muza, in 711, when their last king, Roderic, was defeated and slain; see Spain for a list of the Visigothic kings. Their rule in France ended with their defeat by Clovis at Vouglé, in 507.

VITAL FORCE, defined by Humboldt "as an unknown cause preventing the elements from obey- ing their primitive affinities." This theory is opposed by many physiologists, and animal motion is attributed to muscular and nervous irritability, illustrated by the researches of Galvani, Humboldt, sir Charles Bell, Marshall Hall, and others. The subject has been much discussed by the late pro- fessor Huxley and other eminent physiologists.

VITTORIA (N. Spain), the site of a victory obtained by Wellington over the French army com- manded by Joseph Bonaparte, king of Spain, and marshal Jourdan, 21 June, 1813. The hostile armies were nearly equal, from 70,000 to 75,000 each. After a long and fearful battle, the French were driven, towards evening, through the town of Vittoria, and in their retreat were thrown into irre- trievable confusion. The British loss was 22 officers and 479 men killed; 167 officers and 2640 men wounded. Marshal Jourdan lost 151 pieces of can- non, 451 waggons of ammunition, all his baggage, provisions, cattle, and treasure, with his bâton as a marshal of France. Continuing the pursuit on the 25th, Wellington took Jourdan's only remaining gun. Population, 1887, 27,660; 1897, 30,514.

VIVISECTION, physiological experiments upon living animals, as practised by William Harvey, John Hunter, and other eminent physiolo- gists, it is said, with good results. The societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals in Dresden and Paris in 1859 requested the opinion of a committee of eminent scientific men on the merits of the knowledge thus acquired. Their judgment was not unanimous. The London society took up the question in 1860; and printed a pamphlet by Mr. G. Macilwain against vivisection. In Aug. 1862 an international conference to discuss the question was held at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham.

In 1866 the annual amount of wages paid in the United Kingdom was estimated by Mr. Gladstone at 250,000,000l.; by Mr. Bass at 350,000,000l.; and by professor Leone Levi at 415,300,000l., earned by 10,697,000 workers, ages 20 to 60.

In 1872-8 many trades struck for increase of wages, and frequently were successful; in 1877-9, unsuccessful.

In 1878 professor Levi estimated that 503,000,000l.

 ent countries through which he passed eagerly followed his movements. The ordinary express, which he took, reached London 2 Nov. following.
 Waghorn subsequently addressed a letter to the Standard, in which he stated that in a few years he would bring the Bombay mail to in 21 days. He died 8 Jan. 1850. On 1884, at a meeting at the Mansion-house,

J. E. Thorold Rogers, "Six Centuries of Work and Wages," published in 1884.

London, it was determined to erect a national monument to his memory.

The Overland Mail, which had left Bombay on 1 Dec.
 1845, arrived early on the 30th in London, by way of Marseilles and Paris. The speedy arrival was owing to the great exertions made by the French government to show that the route through France was shorter and better.

WAGRAM, a village near Vienna, where Napoleon I. totally defeated the archduke Charles, 5, 6 July, 1809. The slaughter on both sides was dreadful; 12,000 Austrians were taken by the French, and the defeated army retired to Moravia.
 An armistice was signed on the 12th; and on 24
 Oct., by a treaty of peace, Austria ceded all her sea-coast to France; the kingdoms of Saxony and Bavaria were enlarged at her expense; part of Poland in Galicia was ceded to Russia; and Joseph Bonaparte was recognised as king of Spain.

WAHABEES OR WAHABITES, a warlike Mahometan reforming sect, considering themselves the only true followers of the prophet, established themselves in Arabia about 1750, under the rule of Abd-el-Wahab, who died 1787. His grandson, Saoud, in 1801, defeated an expedition headed by the caliph of Bagdad. In 1803 this sect seized

WAITS, the night minstrels who perform shortly before Christmas. The name was given to the musicians attached to the king's court. We find that a company of waits was established at Exeter in 1400 to "pipe the watch." The waits in London and Westminster were long officially recognised by the corporation.

WAKEFIELD (W. Yorkshire), an ancient town. Near it a battle was fought between the adherents of Margaret, the queen of Henry VI., and the duke of York, in which the latter was slain, and 3000 Yorkists fell upon the field, 31 Dec. 1450. The earl of Warwick supported the cause of the duke's son, the earl of March, afterwards Edward IV., and the civil war was continued. An art and industrial exhibition was opened at Wakefield, 30 Aug. 1865. The Bishops' act, authorising the establishment of a see at Wakefield, was passed 16 Aug. 1878. The required funds subscribed Jan. 1888. Population, 1881, 30,854; 1891, 33,146; 1901, 41,413.

ENGLISH PRINCES OF WALES.*

1. Edward Plantagenet (afterwards king Edward II.), son of Edward I., born in Caernarvon Castle on the 25th April, 1284. It is asserted that immediately after his birth he was presented by his father to the Welsh chieftains as their future sovereign, the king holding up the royal infant in his arms, and saying, in the Welsh language, "Eich Dyn," literally in English, "This is your man," but signifying, "This is your countryman and king." See, however, "Ich Dien."

WALES, PRINCESS OF. This title was held, some historians say, during the early period of her life, by the princess Mary of England, eldest daughter of Henry VIII., afterwards queen Mary I. She was created, they state, the first princess of Wales, in order to conciliate the Welsh people and keep alive the name, and was the only princess of Wales in her own right; a rank she enjoyed until the birth of a son to Henry, who was afterwards Edward VI., born in 1537. This is denied by Banks.

1301. Edward of Carnarvon made prince of Wales and earl of Chester.
1343. Edward the Black Prince.
1376. Richard, his son (afterwards Richard II.).
1399. Henry (afterwards Henry V.), son of Henry IV.

Inclosures were again promoted by the authority of parliament, 1785. The waste lands in England were estimated in 1794 to amount to 14 millions of acres, of which there were taken into cultivation, 2,837,476 acres before June, 1801. In 1841, there were about 6,700,000 acres of waste land, of which more than half was thought to be capable of improvement; see Agriculture.

The act of 1902 created the metropolitan water board, established "for the purpose of acquiring by purchase and of managing and carrying on" the undertakings of the metropolitan water companies "and generally for the purpose of supplying water" within a specified area. The water board took over the property of the water companies, June 24, 1904; New River company a month later. The board includes a chairman, a vice-chairman and 40 other members; the chairman and vice-chairman are appointed by the board, and the other members are appointed by the L.C.C. (14), and by the various cities and boroughs, urban councils, and conservancies in the area covered by the board. The total cost of acquiring the eight private undertakings will be about 42½ millions. The board has jurisdiction over the whole of the county of London and a vast district outside the area controlled by the L.C.C. Its total average daily supply of water is 219,730,462 gallons; per head, 1904-5, 33.7 gallons; for the year ending March 31, 1903, the volume of water supplied was 80,201,618,795 gallons; total number of miles of water pipes, 5,920½; available capacity of storage reservoirs, 4,077,600,000 gallons.

WATER GAS, see Gas-lights.

WATER-GLASS, a name given to a liquid mixture of sand (silex) and one of the alkalies (potash or soda). Glauber (De Lithiase) mentions a similar mixture in 1644. Dr. Von Fuchs gave an account of his process in 1825; and Mr. Frederiek Ransome, of Ipswich, ignorant of Von Fuchs's discovery, patented a mode of preparing water-glass in 1845, which he afterwards greatly improved upon. In 1857, M. Kuhlmann, of Lille, published a pamphlet setting forth the advantageous employment of water-glass in hardening porous stone and in stereochromy (which see). It has been applied to the exterior of many buildings in France and England. The memoirs of Von Fuchs and Kuhlmann translated and printed in England, 1859, by direction of the prince consort.

WATERING STREETS. Mr. Cooper's plan for using solutions of chloride of lime or of sodium (which dry slowly and attract moisture and ammonia and other gases, and combine them with the material of the road) was partially used in the parish of St. Mary-le-bone in 1868, and also in Liverpool, Boston, and other towns. The plan was ordered to be tried in Westminster in July, 1870.

WATERLOO, in Belgium, the site of the great battle, on Sunday, 18 June, 1815, between the French army, of 71,947 men and 246 guns, under Napoleon, and the allies, commanded by the duke of Wellington; the latter, with 67,661 men and 156 guns, resisted the various attacks of the enemy from about ten in the morning until five in the afternoon. About that time, 16,000 Prussians reached the field of battle; and by seven, the force under Blücher amounted to above 50,000 men, with 104 guns. Wellington then moved forward his whole army. A total rout ensued, and the carnage WAXWORK.—Exhibition of models in wax were popular in the 17th and 18th centuries. The collection of wax figures exhibited by Mrs. Salmon at Aldgate, early in the last century, were removed to Fleet-street and shown there till 1812, when they were sold, it is said, for 50*l*. Madame Tussaud, a skilful modeller, exhibited her remarkable collection of models and casts of eminent persons with costumes and other interesting relics in the boulevard du Temple, Paris, 1785. In 1802 she exhibited her collection at the Lyceum, Strand, London, and afterwards at other places. The interest of the exhibition has been energetically sustained for many years at Baker-street, London, W., and latterly at Marylebone-road, by madame Tussaud and her family; she died 15 April, 1850, aged 90. Early in 1889 the collection was purchased by a company, Mr. John Tussaud being engaged as manager. The exhibition well sustained since.

Mr. Louis Tussaud opened a new exhibition of wax-works at 207, Regent-street, 24 Dec. 1890; it was destroyed by fire, 20 June, 1891, estimated loss, 10,000*l*.

WEAVING appears to have been practised in China more than a thousand years before it was known in Europe or Asia. The Egyptians ascribed the art to Isis; the Greeks to Minerva; and the Peruvians to the wife of Manco Capac. Our Saviour's vest, or coat, had not any seam, being woven from the top throughout, in one whole piece. The print of a frame for weaving such a vest may be seen in Calmel's Dictionary, under the word Vestments. Two weavers from Brabant settled at York, where they manufactured woollens, which, says king Edward, "may prove of great benefit to us and our subjects" (1331). Flemish dyers, cloth drapers, linen-makers, silk-throwsters, &c., settled at Canterbury, Norwich, Colechester, Southampton, and other places, on account of the duke of Alva's persecution, 1567; see Loom and Electric Loom.

WEDDINGS. Silver weddings are celebrated after a union of 25 years; golden weddings after a union of 50 years; and diamond weddings after a union of 60 years, some apply it to 75 years. John, king of Saxony, celebrated his golden wedding, 10 Nov. 1872.

WEDDING-RINGS were used by the ancients, and put upon the wedding finger, from a supposed connection with a vein there with the heart. According to Pliny they were made of iron; in the time of Tertullian of gold. Wedding-rings are to be of standard gold, by statute, 1855; see Adriatic.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. These and the stamping of gold and silver money, are attributed to Pheldon, tyrant of Argos, 895 B.C.; see Arun-delian Marbles. Weights were originally taken from grains of wheat, the lowest being still called a grain. Chalmers. See Crith.

Much information is given by Mr. H. W. Chisholm in his work "On the Science of Weighing and Measuring," 1877.

The Jews ascribed weights and measures to Cain ; the Egyptians to Theuth, or Thoth ; the Greeks, to Heracles (the Roman Mercury).

The basis of ancient measures was the natural proportions of the human body: the digit, or breadth of the middle part of the first joint of the fore finger, being the lowest unit of the scale.

The Egyptian cubit (six palms), under the Pharaohs, was about 18·24 English inches; the cubit of Ptolemy about 21·87 inches; he determined the length of a stadium, and of a degree.

The sacred cubit of the Jews (Newton), 24·7 inches. Assyrian weights are described by Mr. Layard in his "Nineveh."

A multitude of all ranks, estimated at a million and a half of persons, were congregated in the line of route, a distance of three miles, to witness and share in the imposing spectacle.
The military consisted of the household regiments of horse and foot guards, the 2nd battalion of the rifles, a battalion of the Royal Marines, the 32nd regiment, the 17th Lancers, and the 18th Light Dragoons, the regiment of Scots Greys; a body of Chelsea pensioners, and men of different arms of the Indian army.
The body was placed upon a sumptuous funeral car, drawn by twelve horses richly caparisoned, and the coffin was thus seen by the whole of the crowd.
The procession moved about seven o'clock, and it was three o'clock before the body was lowered into the vault beside the remains of Nelson, under the dome of St. Paul's cathedral.

WELLINGTON MONUMENT, in St. Paul's.
A number of models exhibited in Westminster hall; none chosen, 1857.
The execution of the monument entrusted to Mr. Alfred Stevens, sculptor, and Mr. Penrose, architect. The stone sarcophagus was completed in 1858.
In Aug. 1870, above 17,000*l.* had been expended, and it was stated that 15,000*l.* more were required. Parlia- ment had granted 20,000*l.* Fresh arrangements were made with Mr. Stevens. He died 1 May, 1875. Mo- nument reported complete, 1 Feb.; uncovered, 20 April, 1878.
The removal of the monument to a different part of the cathedral, and the addition of the equestrian statue modelled by Mr. Stevens, proposed in April, 1892; work completed Jan. 1894.

WELLS were dug by Abraham, 1892 B.C., and Isaac, 1804 (Gen. xxi. 30, and xxvi. 19). Danaus is said to have introduced well-digging into Greece from Egypt. Norton's "tube-well," patented Oct. 1867, is said to be the invention of Hiram J. Messenger, Stephen Brewer, and Byron Mudge, of New York. The apparatus consists of an iron tube perforated with holes at the lower end, and shod with a steel point, which readily enters the hardest soil when forcibly driven. It was used with great advantage during the civil war 1861-4; by the British in their campaign in Abyssinia in 1867-8; and by the Russians in Khiva, 1873.

WELLS (Somerset). The cathedral church was built by Ina, king of the West Saxons, 704, and by him dedicated to St. Andrew. Other West Saxon kings endowed it, and it was erected into a bishopric in 909, during the reign of Edward the Elder. The present church was begun by Robert, 18th bishop of this see, and consecrated in 1148, and completed by his successors and finally consecrated by Jocelin. The first bishop was Ethelm or Adelmus (afterwards bishop of Canterbury). The see was united with Bath (which see) in 1088. Population, 1881, 4,634; 1891, 4,822; 1901, 4,849.

WESLEYAN METHODISTS, a sect founded by John Wesley (born 1703, died 1791) and his brother Charles, who in 1727 with a few other students formed themselves into a small society for the purpose of mutual edification by religious exercises. From their strictness of life they were called Methodists, in 1729. John Wesley went to Georgia in America, in 1735, with a view of converting the Indians. On his return to England, in 1738, a great change took place in his mind (24 May), he commenced itinerant preaching, and gathered many followers. On finding many churches shut against him, he built spacious meeting-houses in London, Bristol, and other places. The Wesleyan Methodist society, as such, began in 1739. For some time he was united with George Whitefield; but differing with him respecting the doctrine of election, they separated in 1741; see Whitefield. Wesley was almost continually engaged in travelling through the United Kingdom. His two leading doctrines were the instantaneousness of conversion, and Christian perfection, or deliverance from all sin. His society was well organised, and he preserved his influence over it to the last. "His genius for government was not inferior to that of Richelieu." Macaulay. The deed of declaration, establishing the conference, is dated 28 Feb. 1784. In 1851 there were 428 circuits in Great Britain, with between 13,000 and 14,000 local or lay preachers, and about 920 itinerant preachers, and 6,579 chapels; 8,993 chapels in 1902.

Out of the original connexion have seceded:—

Wesleyan Methodist Reformers (1840) . . . . .	2000

The last arose out of the publication of "Fly Sheets," advocating reform in the body (1844-5). The suspected authors and their friends were expelled. By these disruptions the main body is thought to have lost 100,000 members.—This sect in America numbered about a million in 1844, when a division took place on the slavery question.

WESTERN CHURCH (called also the LATIN or ROMAN) broke off communion with the Greek or Eastern Church, 653; see Greek Church. Its history is mainly comprised in that of the popes and of the European kingdoms; see Popes. This church was disturbed by the Arian heresy about 345 and 500; by Pelagianism, about 409; by the introduction of image-worship about 600; by the injunction of the celibacy of the clergy and the rise of the monastic orders about 649; by the contests between the emperors and the popes respecting ecclesiastical investitures between 1073 and 1173; by the rise and progress of the Reformation in the 15th and 16th centuries; by the contests between the Jesuits and Jansenists in the 17th and 18th centuries; and by the progress of modern philosophy and rationalism, and by ultramontaniam, in the 19th; see Roman Catholics.

WESTERN EMPIRE. The Roman empire was divided into Eastern and Western by Diocletian in 296; but was reunited under Constans in 340. It was again divided into Eastern and Western by Valentinian and Valens, the former having the Western portion or Rome, 364; see Eastern Empire, Italy, and Rome.

EMPERORS.

364. Valentinian, son of Gratian, takes the Western, and his brother Valens the Eastern empire.
367. Gratian, a youth, son of Valentinian, made a colleague in the government by his father.
375. Valentinian II., another son, also very young, is, on the death of his father, associated with Gratian, who is assassinated by his general, Andragathius, in 383. Valentinian murdered by one of his officers, Arbogastes, in 392.
392. Eugenius, a usurper, assumes the imperial dignity; he and Arbogastes are defeated by
394. Theodosius the Great, who becomes sole emperor. [Andragathius threw himself into the sea, and Arbogastes died by his own hand.]
395. Honorius, son of Theodosius, reigns, on his father's death, in the West, and his brother Arcadius in the East. Honorius dies in 423.
423. Usurpation of John, the Notary, defeated and slain near Ravenna.
425. Valentinian III., son of the empress Placidia, daughter of Theodosius the Great: murdered at the instance of his successor

- soon after.
472. Flavius-Ancellus Olybrius: slain by the Goths soon after his accession.
473. Glycerius: forced to abdicate by his successor.
474. Julius Nepos: deposed by his general, Orestes, and retires to Salona.
475. Romulus (called Augustulus, or Little Augustus), son of Orestes. Orestes is slain, and the emperor deposed by
476. Odoacer, king of the Heruli: takes Rome, assumes the style of king of Italy, and completes the fall of the Western empire.

WESTMINSTER BISHOPRICS AND DEANERY. At the dissolution of monasteries, Westminster abbey was valued at 3977*l.* per annum; king Henry VIII. in 1539 erected it into a deanery; and in 1540 into a bishopric, and appointed Thomas Thirlby prelate. He was translated to Norwich in 1550, and with him ended the bishopric of Westminster; Middlesex, his diocese, being restored to London. The dean presided until the accession of Mary, who restored the abbot. Elizabeth displaced the abbot, and erected the abbey into a collegiate church of a dean and twelve prebendaries, as it still continues. On the revival of the order of the Bath, in 1725, the dean of Westminster was appointed dean of that order, which honour has been continued. Dr. Nicholas Wiseman was created archbishop of Westminster by the pope Pius IX. 30 Sept. 1850; see Papal Aggression. Dr. Wiseman died 8 Feb. 1865; Henry Manning was consecrated his successor 8 June, following; he died 14 Jan. 1892, and was succeeded by Dr. Herbert Vaughan about 30 March; enthroned 8 May; invested with the pallium, the first since 1556, 16 Aug. 1892; died 19 June, 1903, succeeded by Dr. Bourne, Aug. 24, enthroned 24 Dec. 1903. WESTMINSTER BRIDGES. The handsome old bridge was begun (after a design of M. Labelye), 13 Sept. 1738, the first stone laid 29 Jan. 1738-9; opened for passengers 18 Nov. 1750; cost 426,650*l.* It was built of Portland stone, and crossed the river where the breadth is 1223 feet.

Owing to the sinking of several of its piers, most of the balustrades on both sides were removed, to relieve the structure of its weight.

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 46 the estates of its commissioners were transferred to her majesty's commissioners of works, who were empowered to remove the then existing bridge, and build a NEW BRIDGE (near the old one) 4 Aug. 1853

The contract required the completion of the works by 1 June, 1857

The works were suspended for a time, in consequence of the failure of Messrs. Mars, the contractors. The government eventually undertook the building, which they entrusted to Mr. Thomas Page, the engineer. One half of the new bridge was opened for use early in 1860; the whole on 24 May, 1862 bly of Divines" (partly consisting of laymen), who sat by authority of parliament in Henry VII.'s chapel, Westminster, from 1643 to 1647. These have ever since been the doctrinal standards of Scotch Presbyterians.

WESTMINSTER HALL (London), first built by William Rufus in 1097, for a banquet-hall; and here in 1099, on his return from Normandy, "he kept his feast of Whitsuntide very royally." The hall became ruinous before the reign of Richard II., who repaired it in 1397, raised the walls, altered the windows, and added a new roof, as well as a stately porch and other buildings. In 1236 Henry III. on New-year's day caused 6000 poor persons to be entertained in this hall, and in the other rooms of his palace, as a celebration of queen Eleanor's coronation; and here Richard II. held his Christmas festival in 1397, when the number of the guests each day the feast lasted was 10,000. Stone. The courts of law were established here by king John. Idem. Westminster hall was stated to be the largest room in Europe unsupported by pillars (except a hall of justice at Padua); it is 270 feet in length, 74 feet broad. The hall underwent a general repair in 1802. Concurrently with the erection of the palace of Westminster, many improvements and alterations have been made in this magnificent hall. The Volunteer Rifle corps were drilled in the hall in the winter of 1859, and since. The courts of law removed to the new buildings in the Strand Jan. 1883. Restorations proposed by Mr. J. L. Pearson, R.A., July, 1884. The roof and windows greatly damaged by an explosion of dynamite about 2 p.m. 24 Jan. 1885.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL or ST. PETER'S COLLEGE, was founded by queen Elizabeth in 1560, for the education of forty boys, denominated the Queen's scholars, who are prepared for the university. It is situated within the abbey enclosure. Besides the scholars on the foundation, many of the nobility and gentry send their sons to Westminster for instruction. The annual performance by the scholars of a Latin play is in conformity with the statute of queen Elizabeth. A proposal in 1860 to remove the school was disapproved of in 1861.

WHEEL, BREAKING ON THE. A barbarous mode of death, of great antiquity, ordered by Francis I. for robbers, about 1535; see Ravaillac.

"The Great Wheel," made of steel (300 ft. high, axle 7 ft. in diameter, supported on 8 columns 150 ft. high). 40 cars are swung round the wheel, each capable of holding about 40 persons, with adjuncts; the wheel was designed and constructed by Mr. Bassett. The wheel was named by lady Dowell, and started, carrying several hundreds of people at the Empire of India exhibition, Earl's Court, the revolution being successfully accomplished in about 40 minutes, 6 July, 1895. Through a stoppage of the machinery, between 60 and 70 persons were detained 16 hrs. in the upper cars, 21-22 May, 1896.

WHIGS. In the reign of Charles II. the name Whig was a term of reproach given by the court party to their antagonists for holding the principles of the "whigs," or fanatical covenanters in Scotland; and in return the name Tory was given to the court party, comparing them to the Tories, or popish robbers in Ireland. Baker. The distinction arose out of the discovery of the Meal-tub plot (which see) in 1678. Upon bringing up the meal plot before parliament, two parties were formed: the ones who doubted the plot styled those who believed in it Whigs; these styled their adversaries Tories. In time these names, given as marks of opprobrium, became honoured distinctions. Hume. The Whigs brought about the revolution of 1688-9, and established the protestant succession. They were chiefly instrumental in obtaining the abolition of the slave trade and slavery, the repeal of the Test and Corporation act, Catholic emancipation, parliamentary and municipal reform, the repeal of the corn laws, and similar measures. The Whig Club was established by Charles James Fox; one of its original members was the great Francis, duke of Bedford, who died in 1802. See Liberals. For the principal Whig ministries, see Halifax, Walpole,

WHIP, the popular title of the patronage secretary of the treasury, whose duty it is to collect members to make a house on important occasions, &c. It is the duty of both conservative and liberal whips to promote the interest of their party in every conceivable way.

The management of the house of commons by bribery is said to have begun with Clifford of the "Cabal" ministry, and continued by Whigs and Tories. Mr. Roberts (under Henry Pelham), is said to have paid members sums of 1,000l., 500l., &c., at the close of a session for their support. Wrazell.

WHISKY, the spirit distilled from malt and other corn in Scotland and Ireland, of which about eight millions of gallons have been distilled annually in the former, and upwards of nine millions of gallons in the latter. The duty upon this article once produced annually about three millions. The distillation of whisky is referred to the 16th century; but some authors state it to have been earlier; see Distillation. In 1855 the duties on spirits distilled in Scotland and Ireland were equalised with those distilled in England. Women's Whisky War, see United States, 1874.

Edmund Hoyle, who published his "Short Treatise" about 1743, died in 1769, aged 97; lord Peterborough introduced short whist early in the past century: the laws were revised in 1864 "Whist," a poem. 1791

WHITBY, N.R. Yorkshire. The monastery here, under St. Hilda, founded by king Oswy, 657, destroyed by the Danes 876, was restored by William de Percy about 1100. The Chalmleys established alum works here in 1615. Whitby was made a borough in 1832, and absorbed into the county in 1885. Population, 1881, 14,086; 1891, 13,274; 1901, 11,748.

WHITEBAIT DINNER, when the cabinet ministers met at the end of each session, is said to have begun at the end of the 18th century, through sir Robert Preston and Mr. George Rose inviting Mr. Pitt and his colleagues to dine at Dagenham, and afterwards at Greenwich. Another account dates its origin in 1721. The annual whitebait dinner, stopped by the Gladstone ministry, was revived by the Disraeli ministry, 1 Aug. 1874, and continued by the Gladstone, 1 Sept. 1880. No dinner since 1883; was revived by the Rosebery ministry, 15 Aug. 1894. The whitebait (lupea alba) is a subject of controversy. Albert Günther, of the British Museum, in his Catalogue of Fishes, says the whitebait is "a purely nominal species," and that all the examples which he has examined were young herrings (1868).

At the inquiry in June, 1878, James Henry Cannon, fisherman, claimed the discovery of the fish for his grandfather, Richard, who named it 1760. It was mentioned in a letter in the lif: of lord Malmesbury, 2 July, 1763.

WHITEBOYS, a body of ruffians in Ireland, so called on account of their wearing linen frocks over their coats. They committed dreadful outrages in 1761, but were suppressed by a military force, and their ringleaders executed in 1762. They rose and were again suppressed in 1791, when the suppression act was passed on their

He parted from them in 1736 on account of their rejection of the doctrine of predestination. He was the most eloquent preacher of his age. His first sermon was preached in 1736, and he commenced field preaching in 1739. He is said to have delivered 18,000 sermons during his career. He visited America in 1737, 1739, and 1741. His followers are termed "the countess of Agdon's connexion," from his having become a plain in 1748, and from her energetic support of the sect, by establishing a college at Trevecca, See Spangfields. There were 109 chapels of this connexion in 1851; 36 chapels in 1866, but many followers have joined the Independents. He died Sept. 1770, and the countess died 17 June, see Tubernacle.

WHITEHALL (London), built by Hubert de Burgh, earl of Kent, before the middle of the 13th century. It afterwards devolved, by bequest, to the Friars of Holborn, who sold it to the archbishop of York, whence it received the name of Whitehall, and continued to be the town residence of archbishops till taken by Henry VIII. from Cardinal Wolsey, in 1530. At this period it became the residence of the court. Queen Elizabeth, who came to Richmond in 1603, was brought from thence to Whitehall, by water, in a grand procession. It was on this occasion, Camden informs us, that the king wrote a quaint panegyric on her majesty's reign:

When the queen was brought by water to Whitehall,
That every stroke the oars did tears let fall,
The king clung about the barge: fish under water Lifted up their eyes of pearl, and swam blind after.
He thought the bargemen might, with easier thimble,
Have rowed her thither in her people's eyes;
For howsoever thus much my thoughts have scanned,
He had come by water, had she come by land."

Whitehall was partly burnt 9-10 April, 1691; wholly destroyed by fire, 4 Jan. 1697-8, except the queneing-house, which had been added to the palace of Whitehall by James I., according to a design of Inigo Jones, in 1619. In the front of Whitehall Charles I. was beheaded 30 Jan. 1649. George I. converted the hall into a chapel 1723-4.

The exterior of this edifice underwent repair between 1829 and 1833. The chapel was ordered to be permanently closed, 28 Oct. 1890; lent during Queen Victoria's reign, to the Royal United Service Institution, from 1 Jan. 1891; first meeting held, March, 1891. WHITE PLAINS (N. America), where a battle was fought 28 Oct. 1776, between the revolted Americans and the British forces under Sir William Howe. It terminated in the defeat of the Americans, who suffered considerable loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners.

WHITE SHEEP, a name given to the Turcomans who conquered Persia about 1468, and persecuted the Shiites, but were expelled by Ismail, who founded the Sophi dynasty in 1501.

WHITE TOWER, the keep or citadel in the Tower of London, a large, square, irregular building, erected in 1070 by abbot Gundulph, afterwards bishop of Rochester. It measures 116 feet by 96, and is 92 feet in height: the walls, which are 11 feet thick, having a winding staircase continued along two of the sides, like that in Dover Castle. It contains an extensive armoury. Within this tower is the ancient chapel of St. John, originally used by the English monarchs. The turret at the N.E. angle, the highest of the four by which the White Tower is surmounted, was used for astronomical purposes by Flamsteed previously to the erection of the royal observatory at Greenwich.

WHITSUNTIDE, a festival appointed to commemorate the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles: the newly-baptized persons, or catechumens, are said to have worn white garments on Whitsunday. This feast is movable, being always exactly seven weeks after Easter. Rogation week (which see) is the week before Whitsunday.

Whitsunday, a Scotch quarter-day, is always on 15 May, as settled by an act of 1693, but local usage varies.

WHITTINGTON'S CHARITIES. Sir Richard Whittington, a citizen and mercer of London, served the office of lord mayor three times, the last in 1419. Many false stories are connected with his name, and his munificent charities are little known. He founded his college, dedicated to the Holy Ghost and the Virgin Mary, in 1424; and his almshouses in 1429; the latter, originally built in London, now stand on Highgate-hill (built 1808) near the supposed site of the stone which commemorated the legend of his return to London, after leaving it in despair.

WHITWORTH FOUNDATIONS. Mr. (afterwards Sir) Joseph Whitworth, the eminent engineer (born 21 Dec. 1803; died 22 Jan. 1887), in a letter to the first lord of the treasury, dated 18 March, 1868, offered to found 30 scholarships of the annual value of 100*l.* each, to be applied for the further instruction of young men, natives of the United Kingdom, selected by open competition for their intelligence and proficiency in the theory and practice of mechanics and its cognate sciences, with a view to the promotion of engineering and mechanical industry in this country; and he expressed hopes that means might be found for bringing science and industry into closer relation with each other than at present obtains here. This offer was accepted by the lords of the committee of the privy council, 28 March, 1868. In 1875, Sir Joseph assigned an estate to support these scholarships. For the results of Sir Joseph Whitworth's will, see Manchester, 1888-90.

WICKLIFFITES, the followers of John Wickliffe (born 1324), a professor of divinity in the university of Oxford and rector of Lutterworth in Leicestershire. He was a forerunner of the reformation of the English Church from popery, being among the first who opposed the authority of the pope, transubstantiation, the celibacy of the clergy, &c. Wickliffe, protected by John of Gaunt, Edward's son and Richard's uncle, was virulently persecuted by the church, and only saved from martyrdom by a paralytic attack, which caused his death, 31 Dec. 1384, in his 60th year. The Council of Constance, in 1414, decreed his bones to be disinterred and burnt, which was done by the bishop of Lincoln, and his dust was cast into the river Swift, 1415. Wickliffe's English version of the Bible was commenced in 1380; a noble edition of it was printed at Oxford in 1850. Wycliff Society, founded in 1882 to publish his works. Quincentenary of his death celebrated in London, &c., 21 May, 1884. See Lollards. A band of protestants organised by the late Mr. Kensit under the name of Wickliffites has been active in carrying on an anti-ritualistic propaganda.

WIDOWS. The Jewish law required a man's brother to marry his widow if without children (1490 n.c.). For the burning of widows in India, see Suttee. Among the numerous associations in London for the relief of widows are, one for the widows of musicians, instituted in 1738; for widows of naval men, founded in 1739; for widows of medical men, 1788; a law society, for widows of professional gentlemen, 1817; and a society for artists' widows, 1827. —WIDOWERS were taxed in England as follows: a duke, 12*l.* 10*s.*; lower peers, smaller sums; a common person, 1*s.*; 7 Will. WIGAN (Lancashire). The king's troops, commanded by the earl of Derby, were defeated and driven out of the town in 1643 by the parliamentary forces under sir John Smeaton. The earl was again defeated by colonel Ashton, who razed the fortifications of Wigan to the ground, same year; and once more by a greatly superior force commanded by colonel Lilburne, 1651. In this last engagement, sir Thomas Tildesley, an ardent royalist, was slain; a pillar was erected to his memory in 1679. The colliers in the neighbourhood struck, and acting riotously 17, 18 April, 1868, were quelled by the military. Arrangements were soon after made with the employers. The prince and princess of Wales at their visit, 4 June, 1873, opened a new hospital, &c., and received a hearty welcome. See Railway Accidents, 2 Aug. 1873. WIGHT, ISLE OF, the Roman Vecta or Vectis, was conquered by Vespasian in the reign of Claudius. It was conquered by the Saxons under Cerdic about 530; by the Danes, 787, and in 1001, when they held it for several years. It was invaded by the French, July, 1377, and has several times suffered from invasion by them. In 1442, Henry VI. alienated the Isle to Henry de Beauchamp, first premier then duke of Warwick, and king of the Isle of Wight, dying without heirs male, to him, and the lordship of crown. Charles I., after his court, was a prisoner in Ca. #### FACTS FROM THE LAST WILL OF NAPOLEON I., EMPEROR OF FRANCE.†

On 5 May, 1821, eleven days after he had signed his documents. The original in French occupies twenty-six pages in Pelignot's "Testaments Remémorés," 1829.]

On 24 April, 1821, at Longwood, in the island of St. Helena. This is my testament, or act of my last will to the comte de Montholon 2,000,000 francs of my satisfaction for the attentions he has been for these six years, and to indemnify him for the loss of his residence in St. Helena has occasioned. I leave to the comte Bertrand 500,000 francs; to Marchand, my first valet-de-chambre, 100,000 francs; the services he has performed for me are a friend. I desire that he may marry a widow, or daughter of an officer or soldier of my old army. To St. Denis, 100,000 francs. To Novarre, 100,000 francs. To Pijeron, 100,000 francs. To Archambaud, 100,000 francs. To Cuvier, 50,000 francs. To Chandelle, the Abbé Vignali, 100,000 francs. I desire that he build his house near Ponte Novo de Rossino. To the comte Las Casas, 100,000 francs. To comte Lavalette, 100,000 francs. To the surgeon-in-chief, Larrey, 100,000 francs. He is the most virtuous man I have known.

To general Brayer, 100,000 francs. To general Lefevre Desnoettes, 100,000 francs. To Drouet, 100,000 francs. To general Cambronne, 100,000 francs. To the children of general Mouton Duvivier, 100,000 francs. To the children of the brave general, 100,000 francs. To the children of general killed at Ligny, 100,000 francs. To the children of Chartrand, 100,000 francs. To the children of general Dumas, 100,000 francs. To the children of general Travost, 100,000 francs. To general Drouot, 100,000 francs. To general Clausel, 100,000 francs. To Costa Bastille, also 100,000 francs. To Meneval, 100,000 francs. To Arnault, 100,000 francs. To colonel Marbot, 100,000 francs: I request him to write for the defence and glory of the French and to confound the calumniators and the apostates. To the baron Bignon, 100,000 francs: I request him to write the history of French Diplomacy from 1792 to 1815. To Poggi de Talaro, 100,000 francs. To the comte Emmerich, 100,000 francs.

This act the testator must be above 21, not a minor, not deaf and dumb, not drunk at the signing, not an outlawed or unpardoned felon. The property may be devised. The will must be signed legibly and intelligibly, and signed by the testator, or by his direction, in the presence of two or three witnesses, who also must sign, and not be legatees. The documents, dated from 15-24 April, deposited at St. Helena, have been given up to the authorities at Paris, at the request of the French Govern-

"These sums shall be taken from the six millions which I deposited on leaving Paris in 1815, and from the interest at the rate of 5 per cent. since July, 1815; the account of which shall be adjusted with the bankers by the counts Montholon and Bertrand and by Marchand.

"These legacies, in case of death, shall be paid to the widows and children, and in their default, shall revert to the capital. I institute the counts Montholon, Bertrand, and Marchand my testamentary executors. This present testament, written entirely by my own hand, is signed and sealed with my arms.

"NAPOLEON.

"24 April, 1821, Longwood."

The following are part of the eight Codicils to the preceding will of the emperor:—

"On the liquidation of my civil list of Italy—such as money, jewels, plate, linen, coffers, caskets of which the viceroy is the depository, and which belong to me, I dispose of two millions, which I leave to my most faithful servants. I hope that without their showing any cause, my son Eugene Napoleon will discharge them faithfully. He cannot forget the forty millions which I have given him in Italy, or by the right (parage) of his mother's inheritance.

"From the funds remitted in gold to the empress Maria Louisa, my very dear and well-beloved spouse, at Orleans, in 1814, there remain due to me two millions, which I dispose of by the present codicil, in order to recompense my most faithful servants, whom I beside recommend to the protection of my dear Maria Louisa. I leave 200,000 francs to count Montholon, 100,000 francs of which he shall pay into the chest of the treasurer (Las Casas) for the same purpose as the above, to be employed according to my dispositions in legacies of conscience.

"10,000 francs to the sub-officer Cantillon (died July, 1869), who has undergone a prosecution, being accused of a desire to assassinate lord Wellington, of which he has been declared innocent. Cantillon had as much right to assassinate that oligarch, as the latter had to send me to perish on the rock of St. Helena," &c. &c. &c.

LETTER TO M. LAFITTE.

"MONSIEUR LAFITTE.—I remitted to you in 1815, at the moment of my departure from Paris, a sum of nearly six millions, for which you gave me a double receipt. I have cancelled one of these receipts, and I have charged comte de Montholon to present to you the other receipt, in order that you may, after my death, deliver to him the said sum with interest at the rate of five per cent., from the 1st of July, 1815, deducting the payments with which you have been charged in virtue of my order. I have also remitted to you a box containing my medalion. I beg you will deliver it to comte Montholon.

This letter having no other object, I pray God, Monsieur Lafitte, that He may have you in His holy and worthy keeping.

"Longwood, in the island of St. Helena, 25 April, 1821."

The following WILL OF NAPOLEON III. was published in the Times, 30 April, 1873:—

"April 24, 1865.

"This is my will. I commend my son and my wife to the high constituted authorities of the state (aux grands corps de l'Etat), to the people, and the army. The empress Eugénie possesses all the qualities requisite for conducting the regency well, and my son displays a disposition and judgment which will render him worthy of his high destinies. Let him never forget the motto of the head of our family, 'Everything for the French people.' Let him fix in his mind the writings of the prisoner of St. Helena; let him study the emperor's deeds and correspondence; finally, let him remember, when circumstances so permit, that the cause of the peoples is the cause of France. Power is a heavy burden, because one cannot always do all the good one could wish, and because your contemporaries seldom render you justice, so that, in order to fulfil one's mission, one must have faith in, and consciousness of, one's duty. It is necessary to consider that from heaven on high those whom you have loved regard and protect you; it is the soul of my illustrious uncle that has always inspired and sustained me. The like will apply to my son, for he will always be worthy of his name. I leave to the empress Eugénie all my private property. It is my desire that on the majority of my son she shall inhabit the Elysée and Biarritz. I trust that my memory will be dear to her, and that after my death she will forget the griefs I may have caused her. With regard to my son, let him keep as a tallman the seal I used to wear attached to my watch, and which comes from my mother; let him carefully preserve everything that comes to me from the emperor, my uncle, and let him be convinced that my heart and my soul remain with him. I make no mention of my faithful servants. I am convinced that the empress and my son will never abandon them. I shall die in the Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman religion, which my son will always honour by his piety. Done, written, and signed with my hand at the palace of the Tuilleries, the 24th of April, 1865. (Signed) "NAPOLEON."

THE WILL OF PRINCE LOUIS NAPOLEON was written with his own hand, and signed 26 Feb. 1879, the night before he sailed for South Africa (where he was killed while on a reconnoitring party, 1 June, 1879). He states that he dies in the Catholic religion; expresses his love for his country, his mother the empress, and his friends; and his gratitude to the queen and royal family of England, and to the English people for their cordial hospitality. He constitutes his mother sole legatee; bequeaths legacies and memorials to prince J. N. Murat, M. F. Pietri, baron Corvisart, M. Rouher, and others; and assigns to Victor, the eldest son of prince Napoleon Jerome, the task of continuing the work of Napoleon I. and Napoleon III. Executors, MM. Rouher and Pietri.

Windsor Forest, situated to the south and west of the town of Windsor, was formerly 120 miles in circumference; in 1607, it was 77½ miles round, but it has since been reduced in its bounds to about 56 miles. It was surveyed in 1789, and found to contain 59,600 acres.

Virginia Water and the plantations about it were taken out of the forest.

The marshes were drained and the trees planted for William, duke of Cumberland, about 1746; and much was done by George IV., who often resided at the lodge.

On the south side is Windsor Great Park; it contains about 3800 acres.

The Little Park, on the north and east sides of the castle, contains about 500 acres. The gardens are elegant, and have been considerably improved by the addition of the house and gardens of the duke of St. Albans, purchased by the crown.

On the wooden door of the castle church (consecrated 1499) Martin Luther, an Augustinian monk, then a professor at the university, affixed his theses against the sale of indulgences, and thus inaugurated the protestant reformation.

The church, restored by the emperor William I. and his successors, was solemnly re-opened by the emperor William II. in the presence of the protestant princes of Germany and representatives of those of Europe, including the duke of York and other dignitaries, during the Luther celebration. 31 Oct. 1892.

WITU, or Vitu. See Zanzibar, 1890.

WIVES, see Marriage. By the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act, passed in 1857, the condition of married women has been much benefited. When ill-used they can obtain a divorce or judicial separation; and while in the latter state any property they may acquire is secured to them personally, as if unmarried. By another act passed in 1857, they are enabled to dispose of reversionary interests in personal property or estates. An act to amend the law relating to the property of married women was passed 9 Aug. 1870. By it the separate earnings of a wife were secured to her own use, as well as personal and freehold property bequeathed to her. She may maintain an action at law, and acquires other rights. The husband is declared not liable for debts contracted by his wife prior to marriage, and she may be sued for them. This act was amended in 1874. Husband and wife may be jointly sued for her debts before marriage. By the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878, a magistrate can grant judicial separation, with maintenance, to a wife suffering from her husband's ill-use.

Clitheroe case.—Miss Emily Hall (born 1860) was married to Mr. E. Haughton Jackson at Blackburn, 5 Nov. 1887. They never lived together; she returned to her friends, and he soon after went to New Zealand. He returned to England, 17 July, 1888. After some correspondence and one interview (16 Jan. 1889) she steadily refused to live with him. Some litigation ensued, and a decree against her was obtained, 30 July, 1889. On 8 March, 1891, Mr. Jackson and others seized her when coming from church at Clitheroe, and carried her off to his house at Blackburn, where she was closely confined in charge of a nurse. By means of a writ of habeas corpus, she was brought before the court of appeal, who decided that a husband has no legal power to detain his wife against her will, 19 March. Mrs. Jackson then returned to her friends.

WOERTH SUR SAUER, a town in the department of the Lower Rhine, N.E. France. After storming Wissembourg (which see) on 4 Aug. 1870, the crown-prince of Prussia, with the 3rd army (about 150,000) marched rapidly forward and surprised part of the French army under Marshal MacMahon, including the corps of Canrobert and part of that of Faidy (about 47,000), and defeated it in a long, desperate, and sanguinary engagement near this place 6 Aug. The battle lasted from 9 a.m. till 4 p.m. The chief struggles occurred in the country round Reichshoffen and in the village of Froeschweiler; the French are said to have charged the German line eleven times, each time breaking it, but always finding a fresh mass behind. The ridge on which Woerth stands was not captured until the French were taken in flank by the Bavarians and Württembergers. Nearly all MacMahon's staff were killed, and the marshal himself, unhorsed, fell fainting into a ditch, from which he was rescued by a soldier. He then, on foot, directed the retreat towards Saverne, to cover the passes of the Vosges. The victory is attributed to the very great numerical superiority of the Germans as well as to their excellent strategy. The French loss has been estimated at 5000 killed and wounded, and 5000 prisoners, 2 eagles, 6 mitrailleuses, 35 cannon, and much baggage. The Germans are stated to have had above 8000 men put hors de combat. It was admitted that MacMahon had acted as an able and brave commander.

WOLVERHAMPTON (Staffordshire), an old town formerly named Hamton; owes its present fame to the foundation of a college here by Wulfrana, sister of king Edgar, and widow of Aldhelm, duke of Northampton, 906. WOOD'S HALF-PENCE, for circulation in Ireland and America, were coined by virtue of a patent, passed 1722. Against them, Dr. Jonathan Swift, by his letters signed M. B. Drapier published about 1723, raised such a spirit of opposition that the patent was withdrawn. Wood received a compensation, but was virtually banished the kingdom. The half-pence were assayed in England by sir Isaac Newton, and proved to be genuine, in 1724.

WOOD PAVEMENT was laid down at Whitehall in 1839; and in Oxford-street, the Strand, and other streets. The principal part was soon taken up. In Nov. 1872, the improved wood pavement company put forth a prospectus; and in May, 1876, wood was laid down in many places. It is said to be the best pavement in London, and its use has diminished the noise of the traffic. Wood is now (1905) generally adopted as the paving for the principal thoroughfares of the metropolis and many other towns and cities.

time of Henry VIII., was closed, 1 Oct. 1869. Here Gracie de Dieu was built, 1512; and here was burnt in 1552. The royal arsenal was established about 1720, on the site of a rabbit-warren;
it contains vast magazines of great guns, shells, powder, and other warlike stores; a foundry, many furnaces, for casting ordnance; and a laboratory, where cartridges, shells, &c., are made for the public service. The Royal Military Academy was erected in the royal arsenal, the institution was not completely formed till 19 Geo. II. 1745. Woolwich returns one

WORCESTER, successively an important British, Roman, and Saxon town, was burnt by the Danes (1041) for resisting the tribute called Danegelt. William I. built a castle, 1090. The city was frequently taken and retaken during the civil wars of the middle ages, and by Cromwell in 1651.—The Bishopric was founded by Ethelred, king of the Mercians, 680, and taken from the see of Lichfield, of which it composed a part. The married priests of the cathedral were displaced, and monks settled in their stead, 654. The church was rebuilt by St. Wulstan, 25th bishop, 1030; the remains of his hospital are described by the rev. T.
H. Marsh, in its "Annals," published in 1890. The see has yielded to the church of Rome four saints, and to the English nation five lord chancellors and three lord treasurers. It is valued in the king's books at 1049*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* per annum. Present

Here Charle- magne resided in 806. Here was held the imperial diet before which Martin Luther was summoned, 4 April, 1521, and by which he was proscribed. Luther was met by 2000 persons on foot and on horseback, at the distance of a league from Worms. When Spalatin sent to warn him of his danger, he answered, "If there were as many devils in Worms as there are tiles upon the roofs of its houses, I would go on." He appeared before the emperor, the archduke Ferdinand, six electors, twenty-four dukes, seven margraves, thirty bishops and prelates, and many princes, counts, lords, and ambassadors, 17 April, acknowledged his writings and opinions, and left Worms, in fact, a conqueror. Yet, to save his life, he had to remain in seclusion under the protection of the elector of Saxony for about a year. The edict putting him under the ban of the empire was issued 26 May, 1521. Worms was burnt, by order of Louis XIV., 1689, the cathedral excepted; and was taken by the French, under Custine, 4 Oct. 1792. A memorial statue of Luther at Worms was uncovered, 25 June, 1868, in the presence of the king of Prussia and other sovereigns. Population, 1890, 25,504; 1900, 40,705.

WORSEMENT, see Betterment, 1895.

WORSHIP. The first worship mentioned is that of Abel, 3872 B.C. (Gen. iv.) "Men began to call on the name of the Lord," 3769 B.C. (Gen. iv.) The Jewish order of worship was set up by Moses, 1490 B.C. Solomon consecrated the temple, 1004 B.C. Athotes, son of Menes, king of Upper Egypt, is supposed to be the Cops of the Egyptians, and the Toth, or Hermes, of the Greeks, the Mercury of the Latins, and the Teutatte of the Celts or Gauls, 2112 B.C. Usher.

WORSHIP IN ENGLAND. The Druids were the priests here, at the invasion of the Romans (55 B.C.), who eventually introduced Christianity, which was almost extirpated by the victorious Saxons (455), who were pagans. The Roman catholic form of Christianity was introduced by Augustine, 596, and continued till the Reformation (which see). See Hymns, Liturgies, Prayers, Public Worship, Ritualists.

In some lists, Gideon and Samson are given, instead of Hector and Arthur. In Shakspeare's Love's Labour's Lost, act v. sc. 2, Hercules and Pompey appear as worthies.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE, see Geneva Convention, and Aid to Sick and Wounded.

WOUNDING. Malicious wounding of another was adjudged death by the English statutes. The Coventry Act was passed in 1671; see Coventry Act. By lord Ellenborough's Act, persons who stab or cut with intent to murder, maim, or disfigure another were declared guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. Those guilty of maliciously shooting at another in any dwelling-house or other place, are also punishable under the same statute in the same degree, 43 Geo. III. 1802. This offence is met by some later statutes, particularly the act for consolidating and amending the acts relating to offences against the person, 9 Geo. IV., June, 1828. This last act is extended to Ireland by 10 Geo. IV., 1829. An act for the prevention of maliciously shooting, stabbing, &c., in Scotland, 6 Geo. IV., 1825; amended by 10 Geo. IV., 4 June, 1829, for the prevention and punishment of assaults on women and children.

WRECKS. The loss of merchant and other ships by wreck upon lee-shores, coasts, and disasters in the open sea, was estimated at Lloyd's, in 1800, to be about an average of 365 ships a year. In 1830, it appeared by Lloyd's Lists that 677 British vessels were totally lost, under various circumstances, in that year. The laws respecting wrecks were consolidated in 1846 and 1854. See Seamen (commission of inquiry).

Abstracts of the returns as shipping casualties on or United Kingdom, and also vessels elsewhere, and all lished annually since 1855.

Wrecks on British coasts: J. 1888-9, 4,272; 1889-90, 4,471; 1890-1, 4,951; 1891-2, 4,620 (458 lives lost).

Between 1861 and the 30th colonial, and foreign vessels, 21,426 lives lost.

British vessels wrecked in 501; steamers, 13; tonnage

In 1851, there were wrecked 611 were steamers: the total 111,976.

The year 1852-3, particularly and Jan.), was very remarkable for shipwrecks and lives recorded. Wrecks in lives lost, 13,319.

- Lutine* was a French ship captured by admiral Anson. She contained much bullion and money, belonging to merchants; a great loss to the underwriters of the Dutch government claimed the wreck, and wanted one third of the salvage in 1801 to the fishermen. After much discussion, and occasional fists, the king of the Netherlands ceded to Great Britain (for Lloyd's) half the remainder of the wreck. A salvage company began operations in Aug. 1857.
end of 1859, Lloyd's had received 22,162, 6s. 7d.
99,893l. recovered; about 1,175,000l. remaining.
The table and Lloyd's were made of the rudder,

WÜRZBURG (in Bavaria), was formerly a bishopric, and its sovereign one of the greatest ecclesiastic princes of the empire. It was given as a principality to the elector of Bavaria in 1803; and by the treaty of Presburg, in 1805, was ceded to the archduke Ferdinand of Tuscany, whose electoral title was transferred from Salzburg to this place. In 1814 this duchy was again transferred to Bavaria, in exchange for the Tyrol, and the archduke Ferdinand was reinstated in his Tuscan dominions. Ministers from the second-rate German states met at Würzburg to promote union amongst them, 21-27 Nov. 1859. Near here the archduke Charles defeated the French under Jourdan, 3 Sept. 1796; and the Prussians defeated the Bavarians, 28 July, 1866.

dreadful consequences at Cadiz, and the isle of St.
Leon, in Sept. 1819. A malignant fever raged at Gibraltar in Sept. 1828, and did not terminate until the following year. Yellow fever raging in the southern of the United States, Sept. Oct. 1878; at Memphis, autumn, 1879; in Florida (specially in Jacksonville) and other southern states, autumn 1888. Mr. R. A. Proctor, the astronomer, died of it at New York on his way from Florida to England, 12 Sept. 1888; the epidemic abating Oct.
1888; 4,583 cases, and 396 deaths in Jacksonville to Nov. 17, 1888; slight outbreak, with some deaths,
July-Sept. 1890; and at Senegal, autumn, 1900;
Messrs. Reed, Carroll, and Agromonte investigate into the cause of the fever in Cuba during 1900, and finally prove the disease to be conveyed by a species of mosquito (Culex fasciatus), reported Feb. 1901. Dr. W. Myers, one of the commission, died of the fever, 22 Jan. 1901; maj.
Reed died mid Dec. 1902. Slight outbreaks in

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, about 3300 square miles, in territory of Wyoming.

It includes Yellowstone lake, about 330 square miles, with numerous geysers, volcanic and other grand natural phenomena, rugged mountains, forests, meadows, rivers, and much beautiful scenery. Its formation was authorised by congress in March, 1872.

YEOMANRY, see under Volunteers.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD, a peculiar body of foot guards to the king's person, instituted at the coronation of Henry VII. 30 Oct. 1485, which originally consisted of fifty men under a captain.
They were called beef-eaters, a corruption of buffe-tiers, being attendants on the king's buffet or sideboard; see Battle-Axe. They were of a larger stature than other guards, being required to be over six feet in height, and were armed with arquebuses and other arms. The band was increased by Henry's successors to one hundred men, and seventy supernumeraries; and when one of the hundred died, it was ordered that his place should be supplied out of the seventy. They were clad after the manner of king Henry VIII. Ashmole's Instit. This is said to have been the first permanent military band instituted in England. John earl of Oxford, was the first captain in 1486. Beat-son's Pol. Index.

YEOVIL, a municipal borough in Somerset, situated on the river Yeo, 22 miles S.E. of Bridgewater and 40 miles S. of Bristol. The parish church, St. John's, called the "Lantern of the West," is a fine cruciform structure of the perpendicular style, dating from the 15th century, restored 1864. The town was formerly noted for its woollen industry; at the present time (1903) it carries on an extensive trade in gloves manufactured here. In 1449 a great fire destroyed 117 houses. Population, 1891, 9,648; 1901, 9,861.

YERMUK (Syria). Near here the emperor Heraclius was totally defeated by the Saracens, after a fierce engagement, Nov. 636. Damascus was taken, and his army expelled from Syria.

YEW-TREE (Taxus). The origin of planting yew-trees in churchyards was (these latter being fenced) to secure the trees from cattle, and in this manner preserve them for the encouragement of archery. A general plantation of them for the use of archers was ordered by Richard III. 1483. Stow's Chron. Near Fountains Abbey, Yorkshire, were seven yew-trees, called the Seven Sisters, supposed to have been planted before 1088; the circumference of the largest thirty-four feet seven inches round the trunk. In 1851 a yew-tree was said to be growing in the churchyard of Gresford, North Wales, whose circumference was nine yards nine inches, being the largest and oldest yew-tree in the British dominions; but tradition states that there are some yews in England older than the introduction of Christianity. The old yew-tree mentioned in the survey taken of Richmond palace in 1649, is said to be still existing.

YEZIDIS, an eastern tribe, living near the Euphrates, visited by Mr. Layard in 1841: see Devil Worship.

YEZDEGIRD, or PERSIAN ERA, was formerly universally adopted in Persia, and is still used by the Parsees in India, and by the Arabs, in certain computations. This era began on the 26th June, 632, when Yezdegird was elected king of Persia. The year consisted of 365 days only, and therefore its commencement, like that of the old Egyptian and Armenian year, anticipated the Julian year by one day in every four years. This difference amounted to nearly 112 days in the year 1075, when it was reformed by Jelaleddin, who ordered that in future the Persian year should receive an additional day whenever it should appear necessary to postpone the commencement of the following year, that it might occur on the day of the sun's passing the same degree of the ecliptic.

YIDDISH, a kind of jargon Hebrew spoken by the lower class of Jews. There are two daily papers published in Yiddish in the east of London, the Jewish Express and the Jewish Journal, each one half-penny.

YINGLINGS (youths, or off-shoots), descendants of the Scandinavian hero Odin, ruled Sweden till 830, when the last of the pontiff kings, Olaf Trætela, being expelled, led to the foundation of the Norwegian monarchy.

YOKE is spoken of as a type of servitude. The ceremony of making prisoners pass under it was practised by the Samnites towards the Romans, 321 B.C.; see Caudine Forks. This disgrace was afterwards inflicted by the Romans upon their vanquished enemies. Dufresnoy.

YOUNG ENGLAND, a name given to a number of young tory gentlemen earnestly opposed to the repeal of the corn laws and other liberal measures, and very desirous of reviving the old relations between the upper and lower classes mixing in rural sports, &c., yet preserving the due distinctions (1842-6). Lord John Manners (duke of Rutland, 1888), and the hon. G. Smythe, were eminent leaders, and their ideas were favoured by Mr. Disraeli (lord Beaconsfield) in his novel "Coningsby," published 1844.

Exeter-hall, Strand, was bought for the association about July, 1880. It met there, 29 March, 1881. The Young Men's Christian Institute bought the Polytechnic Institute, about Dec. 1881. In 1902 there were 7505 centres of the Association in various parts of the world, numbering 620,721 members; in the United Kingdom 1512 centres, 120,550 members; in London 65 centres with 13,000 members. In 1905 there were 7,507 branches throughout the world; the membership was 639,392, and the value of buildings upwards of 6,000,000*l*. The YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, founded 1857, has branches all over the world with a membership (1905) of some 500,000; in London about 14,000 members. A peremptory note sent by lord Salisbury, requiring immediate withdrawal of major Serpa
Pinto, delivered . . . 6 Jan. 1890

Sen. Barros Gomes' reply being deemed unsatisfactory, lord Salisbury declares that his government will order that no acts of force be committed against any British settlements or others specified by him, and requests that the matters in dispute be referred to a conference of the powers, in accordance with the treaty of Berlin . . . 8 Jan. "

Lord Salisbury, by telegram, requires to know that explicit instructions have been sent from Mozambique for the immediate withdrawal of Portuguese forces from the territories in question;
sen. Barros Gomes informs the British minister,
Mr. Petre, that such instructions had been sent 9 Jan. Lord Salisbury, having learned from consul Churchill at Mozambique, that major Serpa Pinto's forces still occupied his positions, and treated Nyassaland as a conquered country, directs Mr. Petre to require acceptance of the British demands before 10 P.M. 11 Jan.; if not accepted he is to order H.M.S. Enchantress, at

ZE, ZOW, ZIERES, for ye, you, and yours. The letter z was retained in Scotland, and was commonly written for the letter y so late as the reign of queen Mary, up to which period many books in the Scottish language were printed in Edinburgh with these words, 1543.

ZELA, N.E. Asia Minor, where Julius Caesar defeated Pharnaces, king of Pontus, son of Mithridates. Caesar, in announcing his victory, sent his famous despatch to the senate of Rome, in these words: "Veni, vidi, vici."—"I came, I saw, I conquered" (perhaps the shortest despatch on record). This battle ended the war; Pharnaces escaped into Bosphorus, where he was slain by his lieutenant, Asander; Pontus was made a Roman province, and Bosphorus given to Mithridates of Pergamus, 47 B.C.

ZEMSTVOS, local representative councils in Russia established by Alexander II., 1855-81.

ZEND-AVESTA, ancient sacred books of the Parsees; of which 3 out of 21 are extant. The age of these books is much disputed. Professor Max Müller says that the MSS. had been preserved by the Parsee priests at Bombay, where a colony of fire-worshippers had fled in the 10th century. Anquetil Duperron's French translation, from a modern Persian version, was published in 1771; edition by Eugene Burnouf, 1829-43. A French translation was published by prof. James Darmesteter, professor of Zend, in Paris; he died 19 Oct. 1894, aged 45. Zend, a language akin to Sanskrit and the Afghan tongue, has been studied by Bopp and other philologists.

ZINC. The ore of zinc, calamine or spelter, known to the Greeks, who used it in the manufacture of brass. It is said to have been known in China also, and is noticed by European writers as early as 1231; though the method of extracting it from the ore was unknown for nearly five hundred years after. The metal zinc is mentioned by Paracelsus (died 1541). A mine of zinc was discovered on lord Ribblesdale's estate, Craven, Yorkshire, in 1809. Zincography was introduced in London shortly after lithography became known in England, in 1817; see Lithography. Zinc is much used in voltaic batteries; and its application in manufactures has greatly increased of late years; see Photozincography.

ZOUAVES AND FOOT CHASSEURS. When the French established a regency at Algiers, in 1830, they hoped to find the employment of native troops advantageous, and selected the Zouaves, a congregation of daring Arab tribes. In time, numbers of red republicans, and other enthusiastic Frenchmen, joined the regiments, adopting the costume, &c.: eventually the Africans disappeared from the ranks, and no more were added. Among their colonels were Lamoricière and Cavaignac. The French Zouaves formed an important part of the army in the Crimean war, 1854-5.*

ZUIDER ZEE, or SOUTH SEA, a large gulf in the Netherlands, about 60 miles long, 210 miles in circumference, and some 40 miles at its greatest breadth, Texel, Vlieland and other islands separate it from the North sea, with which it communicates by various channels. The greater part of it was formerly covered with forests and towns, and was inundated in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. In 1875, the Dutch chamber voted 9,500,000 fl. to reclaim the submerged land by drainage, and to erect a dyke, 26 feet high above the water, and 25 miles long; thus adding 759 square miles to the country; the new canal was inaugurated by the late king, 1 Nov. 1876. The Dutch Texel fleet here surrendered to admiral Mitchell, 30 Aug. 1799. A royal commission, appointed Sept. 1892, endorsed the proposals for reclaiming land from the sea, &c., set forth in the report of the Zuider Zee association, and in May, 1901, a bill was introduced by the government, but a change of ministry caused its subsequent withdrawal. The scheme comprises the union of the coasts of North Holland and Friesland by a great sea-wall or dyke, reclaiming an area of 478,720 acres of cultivable land, at an estimated cost of 29,625,296 fl., its worth will extend over a period of 30 years.

ZUINGLIANS, or Zwinglians, the followers of the reformer, Ulrich Zwingli, who at Zurich declaimed against the church of Rome, and effected the same separation for Switzerland from the papal dominion which Luther did for Saxony. He procured two assemblies to be called; by the first he was authorized to proceed, by the second, the ceremonies of the Romish church were abolished. Zwingli died in arms, being slain in a skirmish against his popish opponents, 11 Oct. 1531. The Zwinglians were also called Sacramentarians.
